NO. 21,327 ENTERED AS SECOND CLASS MATTER, POSTOFFICE, WASHINGTON, D. C. WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1934  COPYRIGHT, 1934, BY THE WASHINGTON POST. THREE CENTS

Bar Chooses Crime Board Of 9 to Spur Enforcement

Mrs. Chance Is Selected in Group of Laymen and Lawyers.

Five-Year Tenure For Group Is Set

Value to Community Held Dependent on Congress.

Three lawyers and six laymen, including one woman, were appointed last night on the permanent committee on criminal justice sponsored by the District Bar Association as a weapon to combat crime in the National Capital through better coordination of law enforcement agencies.

The committee was chosen by the special committee of 40 of the bar association upon recommendation of a subcommittee named at the anti-crime mass meeting at the Mayflower Hotel just a week ago.

Will Name Other Groups.

Two more groups will be named next Monday by the committee of 40 to deal specifically with problems of procedure in criminal cases and prosecution in police cases. A bar committee on ethics has already been appointed in connection with the campaign.

Appointment of a vigilance committee by the president of the Federation of Citizens Associations next week will bring to six the number of committees engaged in devising schemes for lessening crime in Washington.

Members of the permanent committee on criminal justice, which will be organized this week, are as follows:

Members Are Appointed.

Mrs. Merritt O. Chance, past president of the Women's City Club.

Paul B. Cromelin, lawyer and former assistant United States attorney.

Regis Noel, president of the District Bar Association.

George W. Beasley, president of the Federation of Civic Associations.

Bates' Choice Rejected.

The committee of 40 named no chairman. A motion from the floor that Sanford Bates, director of penal institutions, Justice Department, be added was defeated.

Sponsors of the permanent committee emphasized that the three lawyers selected have no criminal practice.

The life of the committee was set for five years, but provision was made for its dissolution by its own vote. Its purpose is in accord with the recommendation of the American Bar Association for the 48 States.

Robert N. Miller, who presided at the Mayflower Hotel mass meeting last week and served as a member of the organization group which

Japan Neutral In Oil Dispute

Tokyo, Nov. 5 (AP).—Foreign Minister Koki Hirota informed American and British envoys tonight that Japan did not consider Manchukuo's contemplated oil monopoly as violating the open door principle, and that she was washing her hands of the entire matter.

Notes sent to the American and British Embassies advised protesting oil interests to enter direct negotiations with the Manchukuo government, stating the Japanese government was in nowise concerned, since the whole matter was a domestic affair of Manchukuo.

The United States Government has made two separate representations to Tokyo on the subject.

It was said the Japanses government had been informed by Hsinking that neither Manchukuo oil laws nor articles of incorporation for the proposed Manchuria Oil Co. provided for discrimination against any nation. The note concluded that the oil measure, since it did not discriminate in favor of the Japanese or any other nationality, violated no open door principle.

The Manchukuan government has instituted steps to assume early possession of extensive marketing installations of the Standard Oil Co. of New York and the British Asiatic Petroleum Co., preparing valuations with a view to transferring them to the Manchukuo government for compensation.

U. S. Couple Languish Months in Nazi Jail Merely 'on Suspicion'

No Formal Charges Preferred Against Naturalized American Citizens, Held on Suspicion of Espionage and Treason.

Berlin, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—The plight of two United States citizens, one a woman, held for months in German jails without formal charges, aroused concern among American authorities today.

They are Isabel Lillian Steele, of Hollywood, Calif., and Richard Roiderer, both naturalized American citizens. Roiderer was arrested in Munich, June 22, and Miss Steele in Berlin, August 10. Both are still in jail.

They are held on "suspicion of espionage and treason," but so far the Nazis have preferred no formal charges against either. Inquiry in Munich and Berlin revealed that the United States Consulate-General has not yet received a conclusive report on the status of the German investigation into the case of Miss Steele, or any assurances whether formal charges will be brought.

Details in the Steele case were not divulged and reports differed, one saying she was suspected of disclosing German military information, while another said she was held for alleged Communist activities.

She was born in Canada, the records show, and had been studying music in Berlin.

Roiderer, 40, was born in Germany but has been a resident of the United States most of his life. He was arrested at Lindau-on-Bodense, where frontier guards confiscated his notebook, describing it as "suspicious."

Roiderer is a teacher of English in Munich, where he had been living with his mother. He is known to have corresponded with a friend on the staff of a Cleveland newspaper, writing his impressions of Germany under the Nazis. Roiderer is said to have admitted he is a Pacifist.

Two other Americans—Miss Helen Lyster, New Rochelle, N. Y., and T. Griffith Johnson, Washington—were arrested in Munich last week and

Court's Ruling Voids Release Of O'Hearne

Declares Repeal Does Not Nullify Contempt Case Involving Liquor.

Repeal of the eighteenth amendment did not automatically open jail doors and release those serving time for violation of the prohibition laws, the United States Court of Appeals said in effect yesterday in reversing a decision which released Jack E. O'Hearne from the District Jail and the reversal had the effect, also, of ordering O'Hearne back in jail to finish out his term.

However, his attorneys said they intend to carry the case to the United States Supreme Court and their formal notification of this intent will automatically stay the court of appeals ruling for 90 days.

O'Hearne, who, according to police, operated some of the best-known lean-to and footrail spots in Washington before repeal, was sentenced to ten months for contempt of court after the twenty-first amendment was adopted. His attorneys sought an order from Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, of the District Supreme Court, that would release him and it was granted.

The Government appealed Justice O'Donoghue's decision and the court of appeals made known its intent yesterday. O'Hearne was sentenced by Justice Jennings Bailey for violating an injunction restraining him from violating the prohibition laws. Two others, George Dodson and Harry T. Johnson, affected by the original release, were likewise affected by the appeals court's decision.

Justice William Hitz, who wrote the court's decision, declared:

"Judicial control of this case properly ended when the prisoner was committed to the prison and the execution of the sentence was undertaken by the executive. That duty of the executive rests not upon the eighteenth amendment or the national prohibition act but upon constitutional and statutory obligation to see that all laws are faithfully executed, and along with that constitutional duty goes the constitutional power to grant pardons in his grace and in the interest of justice."

O'Hearne, it is said, disappeared shortly after his release from jail and no one seems to know his whereabouts.

Blamed in Train Wreck, Dispatcher Must Die

Kharkov, U. S. S. R., Nov. 5 (AP).—Vasily Lennik, train dispatcher at Osnova who was held responsible for a wreck resulting in the death of one person and injury to many, was sentenced to death today.

Lennik permitted one train to follow another without advising trainmen or other stations. Two signalmen were given long prison sentences.

Envoy Denies Japanese Arm Mandate Isles

Rumors of Naval Bases in Pacific Areas Lead to League Inquiry.

Geneva, Nov. 5 (AP).—A Japanese diplomat was questioned by League of Nations officials today on "suspicion" that Japan is fortifying former German islands in the Pacific which she holds under league mandate.

Nobubumi Ito, Japanese Minister to Poland, denied to newspapermen that his country was constructing naval bases on any of the Marshall, Caroline, Ladrone or Pelew Islands, granted to her after the World War.

But the chairman of the league's mandate commission, Marquis Theodoli, of Italy, told Ito about press reports concerning Japan's alleged refusal to admit foreign warships, including one of the United States, or visitors, including an American bishop.

Basis of Suspicion.

This, he said, created "suspicion."

Ito said the reports should not be taken too seriously. He declared, according to league officials, that when Japanese naval maneuvers were held in the western Pacific and in the vicinity of the mandated islands, it was natural visitors should not be welcomed.

The chairman specifically asked Ito why Japan felt the necessity for expending in 1933 a total of 800,000 yen for the development of four harbors in the islands. Ito said Japan wished to enlarge the harbors to permit anchorage of larger liners.

The chairman insisted it was to Japan's interest to remove suspicions concerning fulfillment of her mandate, and said he believed a more adequate reason should be given for the harbor work. This was taken to mean a reference to rumors that Japan was constructing naval bases.

"Technical" Obstacles.

Ito said he had informed the mandate commission confidentially that the harbors were so small that from a technical standpoint it would be useless for Japan to think of de-

Nazi Youths to Duel With Boxing Gloves

Berlin, Nov. 5 (AP).—The Nazis evolved a plan today under which boxing henceforth will share the exalted place of sword-dueling in German fraternit life.

The plan was interpreted as an attmpt to coax members from recalcitrant fraternities which are adamant in their opposition to Nazi changes. Boxing and dueling were prescribed in the rules to which five prominent German fraternity associations have subscribed, thereby going over into the Nazi camp.

Libby Holman's Baby Son Joins In Fight for Reynolds' Wealth

Winston Salem, N. C., Nov. 5 (AP).—Libby Holman Reynolds' infant son today became a full-fledged participant in litigation which is expected to lead to final settlement of the $20,000,000 estate of his father, Z. Smith Reynolds, tobacco heir and aviation enthusiast.

In superior court, Judge P. A. McElroy signed an order directing the boy born to the former Libby Holman, Broadway torch singer, six months after his father died of a bullet wound here in July, 1932, be permitted to intervene in a suit pending over Reynolds' tangled financial affairs.

The 20-month-old Christopher Smith Reynolds was represented by R. C. Vaughan as "next friend."

Judge McElroy authorized the baby to be represented by two attorneys in the forthcoming litigation.

From a source close to the Reynolds family it was learned the legal proceedings now under way were expected to lead to an amicable disposition of the fortune the ill-fated tobacco heir inherited in trust from his father, the late R. J. Reynolds, pioneer tobacco magnate, and his mother.

Christopher Reynolds becomes an intervener in a suit seeking to nullify a $500,000 settlement made by Smith Reynolds upon his first child, Anne Cannon Reynolds 2d, now 4 years old, shortly before he and the child's mother, the former Anne Cannon Reynolds, were divorced.

Court Orders Long to Face Gen. Ansell's Libel Action

Supreme Bench Asserts Senator Is Immune Only to Arrest.

Must Defend Suit For Half a Million

Damages Asked After Blast at Overton Probe Counsel.

Senator Huey P. (Kingfish) Long, of Louisiana, must stand trial on the $500,000 libel suit brought by Maj. Gen. Samuel T. Ansell, former Judge Advocate General of the Army, the United States Supreme Court ruled in effect yesterday.

Denying a motion to quash the libel summons, the court decided the Louisiana Senator has no more "immunity" from service of a legal process than any other citizen, even while the Senate is in session.

Louisiana's "Kingfish," who called Gen. Ansell "a scoundrel and thief of the lowest level of crookdom," following a Senate investigation of Louisiana election methods, appealed to the Supreme Court after two lower benches refused to quash the summons.

Gen. Ansell served as counsel for the Senate committee which inquired into the election of Long's Louisiana colleague, Senator John H. Overton. Ansell had no comment to make when reached here last night.

Brandeis Gives Decision.

In the opinion, handed down by Justice Louis D. Brandeis, the Supreme Court declared immunity of Senators during sessions of Congress is limited to arrest, and does not extend to the service of summons.

"Neither the Senate, nor the House of Representatives, has ever asserted such a claim in behalf of its members," Justice Brandeis pointed out in his ruling.

"History confirms the conclu that the immunity is limited to arrest."

The original Ansell suit was for "slander." It was based on a speech Long made in the Senate in February, 1933. Among other things, Long charged the Senate committee counsel had "practically forged his own appointment as judge advocate general," that he had been "practically run out of the Army for fraud" and was "condemned by the Government as a thief and a scoundrel and a crook."

Claims Mails Carried Speech.

Ansell later dropped this slander suit to bring $500,000 libel action against Long for circulation in the mails of allegedly revised copies of his speech, and statements about Ansell circulated by "the Kingfish" in the course of the Senate inquiry.

The Louisiana Senator, who at first declared he would waive immunity for his remarks on the Senate floor, once the libel action was brought, sought to stop action. Motions to quash the service of summons were successively filed in the District Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals. Both were overruled.

"The charge here is not for

Husband Is Freed When Tetrazzini Drops Accusation

Rome, Nov. 5 (AP).—The famous opera singer Luisa Tetrazzini failed to go through with an extortion suit against her husband today and awaited a court ruling on whether she may retain control of her money.

Countering an action by Pietro Vernati, the diva's young husband, to have a trustee placed in charge of her financial affairs, she had brought a criminal charge of extortion against him. But when the case came to court today, Mme. Tetrazzini's lawyers withdrew the charge and Vernati was acquitted.

A decision on Vernati's original suit is expected shortly. Separated from his wife since 1928, he went to court two years ago charging the 63-year-old woman was subject to hallucinations and squandered her fortune.

Record Absentee Vote Is Cast As Capital's Part in Election

Ritchie Sure Of Fifth Term, Observers Say

Baltimore Majority Will Offset County Losses, They Believe.

By Franklin Waltman, Jr.
(Post Staff Writer).

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 5.—Albert C. Ritchie, Maryland's handsome Governor is generally expected here to be reelected tomorrow for a fifth term or a total of 19 years, longer than any man has served as executive of an American State.

This conclusion is based on the belief that Harry W. Nice, Republican contender for the governorship, will not achieve a majority of more than 12,000 to 15,000 votes in the 23 counties of the State and that the Ritchie majority in Baltimore, at the worst will not be less than 20,000.

The Democratic management does not concur in these conclusions—neither does the Republican headquarters. Mr. Ritchie's managers contend he will break even in the counties, or at the worst lose them by only a few thousand. They argue his plurality in Baltimore will run between 40,000 and 60,000 votes.

See Rifts Ended.

The Ritchie managers insist that within the last two weeks all disaffection within the party in Baltimore has been eliminated; that Mayor Howard W. Jackson, who challenged the Governor's right to another term last summer, and his friends are working earnestly for Mr. Ritchie's reelection. Since Baltimore is normally a Democratic city by a wide margin and in view of this harmony within the party organization, Mr. Ritchie can not be stopped from running up the "usual" Democratic majority, they argue.

The Republican managers profess to have knowledge, which they do

Seaman 'Attaches' Ship For $1,000 Back Pay

Philadelphia, Nov. 5 (AP).—The flagship Cacuta, of the Colombian navy, was padlocked today in Philadelphia harbor, "attached" by counsel for Seaman Robert Green, who claimed Colombia owes him $1,000 in back pay.

Attorney Mortimer W. H. Cox left a padlock on the flagship's gangplank rail after he served an attachment for Green. The Cacuta had been brought here for repairs.

Thousands of New Deal Aids Send Ballots to Home States.

Although torchlight parades and the other fanfare have been missing, Washington has played an important part in today's elections—perhaps the most important in this "voteless" city's history.

The natives, along with aliens and convicts, must perforce be spectators.

But the big absentee vote—made up of those inhabitants of Washington who have maintained a voting residence in their home States—has spread over the country in the last month to a degree never seen before in an off-year election.

Due to New Deal.

The answer to this is the New Deal, which has brought to Washington a great host of politically-minded men and women. In most cases, these newcomers owe their presence here to some one in the Roosevelt Administration or to some Senator or Representative.

Consequently, when the time for mailing ballots arrived, it is not likely that many of them failed to show their gratitude or their patriotism.

There were more persons in the Federal service here during and right after the World War, but they were not so keen in a political sense as those who have flocked here since March, 1933. In the war days, they didn't have to be.

Total Unknown.

Just how many votes have gone out of Washington for this election it would be impossible to estimate with accuracy. However, Maurice Wentzell, in charge of the Demo-

Pennsylvania Political Riot Costs 3 Lives

Several Others Reported Slain; State Police Rushed to Scene.

Hazleton, Pa., Nov. 5 (AP).—Three persons were killed and unofficial reports said that several more died en route to a Hazleton hospital following a political riot at Kelayres, in Schuylkill County, 5 miles south of Hazleton, tonight.

The dead were Frank Fiorilla, 65, Kelayres, shot down in the street; John Golosky, 28, McAdoo, died in hospital from machine gun wounds; William Forte, 35, McAdoo Heights, shot through head and body, died at hospital.

First reports said a machine gun, fired from a second-story window, mowed down 14 marchers in a Democratic parade on the town's main street.

The riot, coming on the eve of Pennsylvania's most crucial election in years, climaxed a long period of factional political strife in the little mining village of about 600 voters.

Several automobiles and a hospital ambulance carried the wounded. An hour after the riot four women and two men were in the dispensary for bullet wounds and a call for additional surgeons was made as reports had it that many more wounded were being brought in.

Details of the Hazelton and Tamaqua barracks of the State police rushed to the scene. They said fresh outbreaks were feared.

Col. Hickam Killed As Plane Crashes

Galveston, Tex., Nov. 5 (AP).—Lieut. Col. Horace M. Hickman, commanding officer of the Third Attack Group and Fort Crockett, was killed tonight as his attack plane nosed over on landing at the Fort Crocket field. He was ranking officer in the Army Air Corps.

A native of Spencer, Ind., Col. Hickman was a graduate of virtually all official military institutions, including the War College. He served as commanding officer of the Central Zone during the operation of the air mail under Government service.

Election Returns Tonight

From 6:30 p. m. until 10:30 p. m. latest returns from all sections of the country will be broadcast direct from the city room of The Post every quarter-hour. Between 10:30 and 11 o'clock a midevening summary over a Nation-wide network will be presented, featuring Raymond Clapper, of The Washington Post staff, and H. V. Kaltenborn, C. B. S. commentator. After 11 o'clock late bulletins will be broadcast at intervals of from five to ten minutes until the early morning hours.

For spot returns, listen to The Post-WJSV broadcast tonight. For complete election results, read The Post tomorrow morning.

Candidate Ready to Contest Absentee Ballot by Mrs. Dall

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—The right of Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, the President's daughter, to cast an absentee ballot in the New York State election was challenged today on the ground she had established legal residence in Nevada last summer to obtain a divorce from Curtis B. Dall.

Miss Natalie Couch, Republican candidate for Representative at large, telegraphed Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt that she would contest acceptance of Mrs. Dall's ballot if it is offered tomorrow.

Mrs. Roosevelt's campaigning in behalf of Miss Couch's Democratic opponent, Mrs. Caroline O'Day, brought criticism of the First Lady by Republican and Independent leaders.

"I am sending this telegram to you as matron of the White House and as an active participant in the Democratic campaign against my candidacy for Representative in Congress at large from the State of New York," the message stated.

"I am informed that a member of your household on or about June 17, last, established legal residence in the State of Nevada for personal reasons in which I have no interest.

"I am further informed that the same member of your household has, within recent date, obtained an absentee ballot in Dutchess County for the purpose of voting in the forthcoming election. If that is true, I am vitally interested.

"I call your attention to section 150 of article 7 of the election law and to sections 1620 and 1633 of article 158, chapter 41 of the penal law.

"I shall see that such a vote is challenged for the purpose of preserving an honest ballot."

By Raymond Clapper.

For two patient years he has paid the taxes, obeyed the ever-mounting flood of laws and executive orders and listened to the political oratory.

Now he has his chance. He can slip into a voting booth and there, all alone, hand out his anonymous cheers and jeers. He is king for a day. For a few short hours, the mighty will await anxiously his further pleasure.

At daybreak or soon thereafter in every State except Maine, which voted in September, millions of voters—perhaps upward of 30,000,000—will beat a path to the polls to elect an entirely new House of Representatives, 34 United States Senators, 33 Governors, and a host of lesser officials. In 7 States they will decide whether to abandon prohibition.

New Deal Referendum.

This is the first general election since the Roosevelt Administration took office. In a rough way it constitutes a popular referendum on the New Deal, a referendum in which, however, the lines are blurred in numerous places because some Republican candidates have tried, despite their national party philosophy, to embrace the New Deal, more or less.

Democrats face the balloting with confidence. Republicans hope for the best. They gave warning last night that, regardless of the result, the fight against the New Deal would go on.

All indications are that the Democrats will increase their majority in the Senate by at least 5 seats and maybe more. In the House the best guessing here is that Republicans will gain not more than 30 seats.

Both national party chairmen made last-minute appeals over Nation-wide hook-ups last night.

"Get Out the Vote."

Mainly they urged their precinct workers to get out the vote and to see that it is counted.

Democratic National Chairman Farley said Democrats would gain at least six Senate seats and that their House majority would continue without material change and possibly would be increased.

Republican National Chairman Fletcher merely said the Republicans would recapture seats in Congress and win back control of State governments. He did not go into figures, although Sunday he predicted the party would hold its 'Almost Perfect' Weather Forecast for Nation's Balloting Today.

Old Sol Helps Get Out Votes

The weather man gazed nochalantly at his complicated forecasting apparatus yesterday, according to the Associated Press, and made an "abnormal" prediction for election day—almost perfect.

Charles L. Mitchell, veteran forecaster for the area east of the Mississippi, forgot tomorrow was Nation-wide ballot day when he made his first report. Once reminded, however, he said it would be "generally fair" with perhaps not a cold or rainy spot to interfere with the farm voter.

The city man, if the campaign is hot enough, usually goes to the polls rain or shine, but it's hard to get the dirt farmer to the voting booth unless Old Sol warms him up and dries his road.

Washington leaves it to Chicago to cover the Western forecast, but Mitchell "got wind" yesterday that the only disturbance threatening a probable 30,000,000 vote today was in the far Northwest over Alaska.

He also looked for rains late yesterday in the Ohio Valley and New England, but thought they would be "all cleared up" by the time the polls open.

"It's not cold anywhere in the country," he concluded.

So, unless things change, the get-out-the-vote clubs ought to have no excuse if the voters do not turn out in numbers unusual for a mid-term election.

Roosevelt Party To Vote Today, Await Returns

(Post Staff Writer).

Hyde Park, N. Y., Nov. 5.—Joining millions of other citizens, President Roosevelt tomorrow will cast his ballot in a makeshift polling place, set up in this village's ancient little town hall, in an election that will mean much for the future of the New Deal.

With Mrs. Roosevelt, who completed a speaking tour by making a talk before a meeting of the Dutchess County women at Poughkeepsie today, he is expected to drive before noon to the same clapboard building in which he voted two years ago.

There he will cast his vote for his old-time friend, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, and a lengthy Democratic ticket that includes the name of Senator Royal S. Copeland. Returning to his mother's estate, he will settle down to await the election returns, as he often has in the past.

While a statement recommending the reelection of Gov. Lehman formed his only open participation in the off-year campaigns, chief interest and importance for Mr. Roosevelt lies in the complexion of the next Congress and the attitude of the country as expressed through tomorrow's results.

Contests of Interest.

The contests now nearing an outcome in Pennsylvania, where Joseph F. Guffey is seeking to unhorse the New Deal's arch critic, Senator David A. Reed; in Wisconsin, where "Young Bob" La Follette is fighting to retain his Senate seat, and in California, where the erstwhile Socialist, Upton Sinclair, is running for Governor—these and a score of others excite his keenest attention.

Mr. Roosevelt went out of his way to help the Pennsylvania party boss, Guffey, allowing him lavish use of the White House prestige. And indirectly he has conferred his favor on La Follette. In the case of Sinclair, however, the Administration turned away at the last moment, presumably after reports predicted his defeat.

Despite the significance of the elections, which will be the Nation's first mass judgment on the New Deal, the President today maintained an outward calm amounting almost to indifference. No political callers were on his appointment list; indeed, his only engagement concerned the newspaper code, which he discussed with a delegation headed by Heywood Broun, president of the American Newspaper Guild.

Other Voters.

Besides the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, others of Hyde Park House eligible to vote tomorrow are his mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt; Miss Marguerite Lehand and Mrs. Malvina Scheider, secretaries. The village town hall has been newly painted white, with green trimmings.

The Democratic ticket which the President will approve tomorrow includes the names of Mrs. Caroline O'Day, for whom Mrs. Roosevelt has campaigned, and Matthew J. Merritt for Representatives at large, and Thomas Pendell, for Representative from this district. The latter is opposed by the incumbent, Hamilton Fish, jr., Republican, who is also named on the Socialist and Law Preservation tickets.

Poughkeepsie Meeting.

Several hundred women attended the Poughkeepsie meeting addressed by Mrs. Roosevelt, but Democratic leaders have little expectation of carrying Dutchess County, which went against the President two years ago. With Mrs. Roosevelt at the meeting were the President's mother and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Marvin H. McIntyre, assistant White House secretary, set about rigging up a battery of telephones at the executive offices in Poughkeepsie, meantime, to keep the President abreast of election flashes tomorrow night. He said Mr. Roosevelt had nothing special on his program, but will continue to "take it easy" at the family estate.

Today's callers at the "Summer White House" included, besides Heywood Broun, Morris Watson, Jonathan Eddy, James M. Kieran, and Carl Randau, all officers of the American Newspaper Guild. They spent almost two hours with the President, afterward reporting that he is greatly interested in the problems affecting newspapermen.

Mr. Broun said the delegation argued for the inclusion of the press associations in an NRA code, as well as for extending provisions of the present newspaper code to papers published in cities of less than 750,000 population. They urged the general adoption in the newspaper world of the five-day week, together with a minimum wage scale.

After this visit Mr. Roosevelt took advantage of a crisp autumn day to go for a drive about the estate. He is devoting only a small part of each day to work. He will remain here until Wednesday night, it was definitely decided today, before returning to Washington.

Virginia's Income Tax Returns Up $200,000

Richmond, Nov. 5 (AP).—State income tax revenue this year is expected to exceed by $200,000 the total for last year, State Tax Commissioner C. H. Morrisett predicted today.

Mr. Morrisett said indications were that the estimate of $810,000 in revenue for the year ending June 30, 1935, would be reached. This will be far short of the $2,000,000 obtained in prosperous years in the past, he added, but "it appears that 1932 was the darkest year of the depression and revenue coming in now represents the improved prosperity of 1933."

Between You and Me

By Raymond Clapper

ONE good reason for not becoming unduly alarmed over the prospect of a Congress of wild men as a result of today's elections is that President Roosevelt is the most adept man at handling obstreperous Senators and Representatives that the White House has seen in many years.

He has a sure intuition to guide him in playing the new Congress on the end of his line. He knows exactly when to feed out and when to reel in sharply; when to stampede Congress by a swift, bold stroke; when to let the bickering legislators wear each other out so that he can step in with the winning compromise, and how to insert weasel words to nullify the most objectionable features of a Congressional pet measure—as happened when he pocketed the inflationists by accepting their program on an optional basis instead of in its original mandatory form.

Those who have watched Mr. Roosevelt wiggle out of tight places and come out with both shoulders of Congress pinned to the mat time and again, feel about him and the wild men much as Uncle Eph down in the Tennessee mountains did about a domestic matter one evening.

Eph was sitting in front of the country store when a neighbor boy came running up and shouted:

"Uncle Eph, a wild cat has just leaped into the kitchen where your wife is!"

Eph shifted his cud and eyed the lad indifferently.

"That gol dern wildcat," he drawled, "will just have to get out the best way he can."

* * * *

The White House almost violated one of its own rules the other day.

Some time ago the rule was laid down that letters to Mr. Roosevelt would be ignored if the writers gave out copies before the White House had an opportunity to prepare an answer. It was a violation of this rule that brought the White House down on Col. Lindbergh when he gave premature publicity to his protest letter on the air-mail contract cancellation last winter.

A few days ago the White House secretariat was about to make public the text of letters sent to the management and labor in connection with the automobile manufacturing code extension. The President remembered the White House rule about letters received, and felt that it would work both ways.

"We can't give those letters out yet," Mr. Roosevelt said. "They haven't had time to get to the other end."

* * * *

If the Democrats come through the election with a two-third majority in both Houses, it will be the first time that has happened since Grant's second administration. The Democrats were flat on their back then.

Anyone who takes a quick backward look will hesitate about announcing the demise of the Republican Party in the event it should be found hanging unconscious on the ropes tomorrow morning. Wasn't it in 1924 that a good many prophets said the undertakers were bidding for the Democratic Party? And four years later, when Hoover raided the Solid South, didn't they repeat that this time the Democratic Party was dead sure enough?

A political party can come to life in no time at all under the galvanizing effect of a leader and a program.

It is a safe prediction that no matter how discouraging tonight's returns may look to Republicans, somebody will come along sooner or later and pick up the pieces. A national party machine is too useful to be allowed to go for junk. Always someone or some group can be counted upon to undertake a remodeling job. That is what Mr. Roosevelt did with the Democratic Party, and it now bears little resemblance to the Democratic Party which John W. Davis headed up to ten years ago.

Possibly some such transformation lies ahead of the Republican Party. There is a group of progressive Republicans, not any too pleased at some of the things Democratic Chairman Farley has done in this campaign for instance to Senator Cutting in New Mexico, who are thinking seriously of trying to capture the G. O. P. machinery. Upton Sinclair has just shown how easy it is to kidnap a party if you have something that catches on with the folks.

Belief among those best informed on Far Eastern affairs here is that as soon as Japan has succeeded in scrapping the Washington naval limitation treaty, she will turn, not to the business of trying to pick trouble with the United States, but to the job of biting off some more of China.

Some travelers, wise to a slight extent in the ways of the Far East, think that in such a case it may be a real question whether in the end small, compact Japan or China with its many millions will do the swallowing. History says that China's unwieldy hordes have been defeated but never conquered. One clever Chinese explained the situation in simpler terms.

"We not worried," he said when shown casualty reports of fighting between Chinese and Japanese.

"But," it was pointed out, "today 9,000 Chinese were killed and only 500 Japanese; yesterday 5,000 Chinese were killed and 200 Japanese. You can't go on like that."

"Sure," the Chinese replied. "Pretty soon there be no Japanese left."

Long's Appeal Gets Spotlight In South's Vote

Kingfish Urges Approval of Plan; Talmadge in Legislative Fight.

Atlanta, Nov. 5 (AP).—Louisiana's Kingfish, Huey Long, and Georgia's "red-suspendered" Eugene Talmadge are in the forefront of the South's program for tomorrow's election.

The Kingfish urged his followers in an election eve appeal to vote for constitutional amendments proposed and sponsored by his political machine. One would permit the levying of an income tax on individuals of from 2 to 6 per cent and ¾ per cent on corporations.

Another, aimed directly at the mayor and city administration of New Orleans, would cancel a $700,000 annual highway fund grant to the city for streets. Last night Long predicted an early "doom" for the city government of Mayor T. Semmes Wolmsley.

Talmadge Unopposed.

Gov. Eugene Talmadge and the Democratic State ticket are without opposition in Georgia, but the Governor is facing a legislative fight in Dekalb County. The State convention which he controlled threw out Paul Lindsay, who had been declared a legislative nominee in Dekalb County by over 300 majority. The State convention ordered Reuben Garland substituted for Lindsay, but the latter declined to retire and both are running as Democratic candidates.

Headquarters of the regular Democratic nominees and of the Fusionists claim victories in the senatorial and gubernatorial races in Tennessee. Henry R. Bell, chairman of the regular Democratic campaign, said "we are expecting majorities ranging from 50,000 upward to 100,000." Their candidates are Gov. Hill McAlister, seeking reelection. Senator Kenneth D. McKellar, who is up for another six-year term, and Senator Nathan L. Bachman, who is running for the unexpired term of Cordell Hull, now Secretary of State.

Pope Seeks Governorship.

Lewis S. Pope, who calls himself a "straight-out Democrat" and who lost to McAlister in the Democratic primary, is running for Governor and has joined forces with Ben W. Hooper, Republican nominee for McKellar's seat.

Howard B. Shofner, chairman of the Republican State executive committee and a leader in the fusion movement, said "the Fusion ticket is going to win a smashing victory." Estimataes of the total vote ranged from 350,000 to 400,000.

Memphis, Tenn., will vote on issuing $9,000,000 in bonds to acquire an electric distribution system for Tennessee Valley Authority power.

A last-minute appeal of Osro Cobb, State Republican chairman, to voters to desert party lines marked the Arkansas campaign. The Republicans are centering their campaign in the Third Congressional District, where the Rev. Pat Murphy is opposing Representative Claude A. Fuller, Democrat.

North Carolina Ballot.

J. Wallace Winborne, North Carolina Democratic chairman, said "the Administration will be indorsed with a huge Democratic vote." The Democratic majority two years ago was 285,000 in a total vote of 711,000.

Florida votes on repeal of the State prohibition act, but the chief interest is over a proposed amendment to exempt from taxation on an assessed valuation up to $5,000 all homes occupied by their owners at least nine months a year.

Confident of the Ninth District, Kentucky Republicans are concentrating their fire in Louisville and Jefferson County, composing the Third Congressional District, and in the Seventh District in eastern Kentucky. Democratic leaders say their candidates will be victorious in all districts except the ninth.

not specify, of widespread disaffection within the Democratic city organization. They intimate that while Mayor Jackson may be sincerely suporting Gov. Ritchie, some of his lieutenants are out for revenge for the blocking of the mayor's aspirations.

Moreover, the Republicans contend that thousands of Democrats outside the ranks of the party organization, tired of the same man in the Statehouse and resentful over bank failures and conditions generally, will bolt their affiliations to vote for Mr. Nice.

Aside from these claims and counterclaims of party managers, the view most prevalent here is that Gov. Ritchie will win but not by his "usual" majority. Those expressing this view assert they have not found any indications of a widespread revolt or the part of masses of the voters and that it is inconceivable, with the country running strongly Democratic, for Gov. Ritchie to be defeated this year.

Gov. Ritchie appears to be the only Democratic State-wide candidate whose election is in any way doubtful. George L. Radcliffe, Democratic candidate for United States Senator and close friend of President Roosevelt, is expected to win by a wide margin over former Senator Joseph I. France.

Herbert R. O'Conor, perhaps one of the most popular candidates ever to run in Baltimore, is expected to have an easy time downing his Republican opponent for attorney general, George Henderson. William S. Gordy, three times elected State comptroller, is regarded as the victor again, this time over Fred P. Adkins.

James A. Young, of Cumberland, clerk of the court of appeals as long as Mr. Ritchie has been Governor, is picked as the winner for another four-year term over Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt of Annapolis.

All the sitting members of Congress from Maryland—all Democrats—appear certain of reelection except Representative David J. Lewis in the Sixth or Western Maryland District. Many observers here are picking Mr. Lewis to win that fight over former Representative Frederick N. Zihlman, who is attempting to stage a comeback. But all agree the Lewis-Zihlman fight is a hard one.

New Deal Platform.

Without exception the Democratic candidates for Congress are campaigning on a New Deal platform, pledging support to President Roosevelt. If Mr. Lewis wins it will be chiefly because he is so ardent a supporter of the New Deal, since his district normally is overwhelmingly Republican.

Democratic victories in Montgomery and Prince Georges counties, adjoining Washington, are expected here. Democratic leaders assert that from their viewpoint Prince Georges "is in better condition than any county in the State." Gov. Ritchie is expected to do better in Montgomery than the organization ticket for county offices. But the latter, with possibly a few exceptions, is expected to defeat the Fusion ticket.

Both Gov. Ritchie and Mr. Nice made last-minute appeals for votes tonight but nothing unusual developed. The time of the local broadcasting stations was occupied with political speakers from darkness until midnight.

Earlier in the day Mr. Nice attributed to Democratic "maliciousness" distribution of a sample ballot marked for him and recommending defeat of all Jewish candidates. It bore the name of a German organization. Mr. Nice denied having any hand in mailing out the sample ballot and asserted he detested Nazi ideals. The Democratic headquarters denied any knowledge of the ballott or its distribution.

Sage of Baltimore.

Henry L. Mencken, the sage of Baltimore, in the Evening Sun said tomorrow he would "drag out my old bones" and vote for Gov. Ritchie and former Senator France. He said the Governor "remains incomparably the better man," but he added the hope that "once he has begun his fifth term he will put on the white wings of a sanitary policeman and clear out some of the more odorous corners of his establishment."

He said he thought Dr. France was "needed in the Senate" and that Mr. Radcliffe "is rather too close to the throne to make me comfortable." Mr. Mencken added that "for good or for evil, he (Radcliffe) will go into the Senate as a Roosevelt man and what is needed there now, above all things, is open and unrelenting opposition."

Death Gives Youth Military Honors

District Boy's Ambition Is Realized at Grave.

College Park, Md., Nov. 5 (AP).—The military honors to which he aspired in life were accorded in death today to Frank Claveloux, jr., of Washington, 18-year-old University of Maryland freshman.

Poor eyesight had prevented his passing the R. O. T. C. physical examination, but he obtained special permission to drill with the university regiment. He was in uniform Friday when killed in an automobile accident.

In deference to his ambition, his parents requested the unviersity to purchase his uniform from the Government, that he might be buried in it. This was done, and six cadet officers bore the uniformed body to the grave through a double line of Claveloux's classmates.

British Jobless Increase.

London, Nov. 5 (AP).—Unemployed in the United Kingdom in October totaled 2,119,635, an increase of 37,648 over September, the ministry of labor reported tonight. The total, however, is 179,118 below that of October, 1933.

Citroen, 'France's Ford,' May Lose Auto Plant

Paris, Nov. 5 (AP).—Andre Citroen, "the Henry Ford of France," was reported today as likely to be forced out of the factory he founded after the war.

Creditors, headed by the Michelin Tire Co. and backed by the government, have stepped in after months of financial difficulties. The government is understood to be anxious to keep the plant available to supply war materials in case of necessity as well as to avoid closing one of France's largest industrial plants.

Many Government Officials Leave City to Cast Ballots

(Associated Press.)

Following the lead of the President, who went home to Hyde Park to vote, half the Cabinet and many other high officials last night had left the Capital.

Outstanding exception is Harry Hopkins, relief administrator, who said he wasn't going back home to New York to vote because he had work to do, and the Democrats would have more votes than they could count anyway.

Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau went to their home in Hopewell Junction, Dutchess County, N. Y., to vote.

Postmaster General and Mrs. Farley and Labor Secretary Frances Perkins went to vote in New York City.

Vote by Absentee Ballot.

Secretary of State Hull and Mrs. Hull, in Asheville, N. C., voted by absentee ballot in Tennessee; Secretary of War Dern, in Alabama yesterday, voted by mail in Utah, as did Mrs. Dern.

Secretaries Ickes and Wallace, both recently returned from Western trips, in person filed ballots in their respective home cities, Chicago and Des Moines, about a week ago.

From Washington, Secretary of Navy Swanson and Mrs. Swanson voted by mail in Roanoke, Va.; Attorney General Cummings and Mrs. Cummings, in Greenwich, Conn.; Secretary of Commerce Roper, in Bennetsville, S. C., where he has had an absentee vote for 35 years of Washington residence. Mrs. Roper has no vote, never having been able to spend the time required for legal residence in South Carolina since arrival of women's suffrage.

Choate Votes by Mail.

Joseph H. Choate, jr., a Republican and chairman of the Alhohol Control Administration, voted in New York by mail, but Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, went to Bronxville, N. Y., to vote in person.

Among others mailing ballots were.

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, of the Veterans' Administration, who cast an absentee ballot in his home State, Utah; S. Clay Williams, chairman of the National Recovery Board, voting in Winston, Salem, N. C.; Garland T. Ferguson, chairman of the Federal Radio Commission, Greensboro, N. C.; Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, Houston, Tex.

Vice President and Mrs. Garner will vote in their Uvalde home, where they have been since Congress closed.

G.O.P. Is Needed More Than Ever, Hoover Confides

Summit, N. J., Nov. 5 (AP).—The country needs the Republican Party "more than ever," former President Herbert Hoover wrote to former Mayor Ruford Franklin, president of the Republican Club of Summit, in a letter made public today.

"The country, indeed, needs a live and virile Republican Party," Hoover wrote. "The whole protection of human liberty lies in free criticism and debate. That does not alone lie in a free press and the platform; it lies also in adequate representation in the halls of legislatures. And that can not be attained without party organizaion and party support.

"In these days when liberty is endangered and when intolerance seeks to stamp out the very suggestion of doubt, the country needs the Republican Party as a virile organization more than ever, and it needs an adequate opposition in the Congress if our institutions are to survive."

The club celebrated its twenty-eighth anniversary last Monday. Hoover is a special honorary member.

Objection Raised To Screen Denied By Appeals Court

A dispute as to whether slatted screens on the porch of the home of Elmer M. Tate, 1410 Thirty-third street northwest constituted an invasion of the "light, air and view" rights of Henry F. Ash, 1412 Thirty-third street northwest, was settled by the United States Court of Appeals with a "no" answer yesterday.

Ash, a semi-invalid, had as one of "his principal means of recreation" sitting at his window and enjoying the view to the south. The view was completely obstructed when the slatted screens were lowered on the porch next door, he charged, and he brought suit to enjoin his neighbor from using them.

The decision yesterday showed that Tate erected the blinds on his own property and was within his rights.

Democrats Set To Storm Foe's Eastern Forts

Guffey-Reed Free-for-All in Pennsylvania Holds Chief Interest.

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—With Democrats conceding nothing, even in Old Line G. O. P. strongholds, the fight of Pennsylvania's David A. Reed for election to the Senate held chief interest tonight in the many major contests in Eastern States in tomorrow's election.

At the focal point of the congressional contests was the New Deal and the outstanding example of this was in Pennsylvania.

With an eye to 1936, the Democrats have concentrated against Reed—for the Senator has been mentioned frequently as a possible Presidential candidate two years hence.

Reed, Guffey Fight.

Vigorous in his denunciation of the New Deal, Reed is opposed by a friend of the President, Joseph F. Guffey.

The registration in Pennsylvania set a record. As generally over the East, an unusually heavy vote for an "off-year" election was expected.

Good weather was the forecast along the seaboard.

Down the line, the Democrats voiced their expectations of victory. Just as strongly, the Republicans insisted they'll not only hold their ground, but make gains.

In Pennsylvania, Democratic leaders pointed gleefully to an increase in the registration from 833,000 in 1932 to 1,400,000 this year.

In New York, the senatorial fight was subordinate in interest to the campaign of President Roosevelt's close friend and successor at Albany, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, for reelection.

Moses Opposes Lehman.

Lehman, opposed and attacked for his banking family connections by the youthful progressive Republican, Robert E. Moses, was publicly indorsed by Mr. Roosevelt, who made an exception to his "hands-off" policy for State campaigns.

After reaching Hyde Park, where the First Family will vote tomorrow, the President amplified this indorsement by stating he also would vote for Senator Royal S. Copeland, the Tammany man who was sometimes lukewarm to New Deal legislation.

Copeland's opponents are ardent anti-New Dealers: The Republican, E. Harold Cluett, up-State collar manufacturer, and Col. Henry Breckinridge, candidate of the newly formed Constitutional Party, an Assistant Secretary of War under Woodrow Wilson.

With Mrs. Roosevelt stumping the State in her behalf, the fight of Mrs. Caroline O'Day for Congressman-at-Large against Miss Natalie F. Couch attracted Nation-wide attention.

Fight for Senate Seats.

In all, ten Senate seats are at stake in Eastern States tomorrow—those of seven Republican and two Democratic incumbents.

The Republicans seeking reelection are Reed, Felix Hebert, of Rhode Island; Warren Austin, of Vermont; Frederick C. Walcott, of Connecticut; Hamilton F. Kean, of New Jersey; Henry D. Hatfield, of West Virginia, and John G. Townsend, of Delaware.

Copeland and David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, are the Democrats seeking to return.

Hatfield is opposed by the 29-year-old Rush D. Holt in West Virginia.

There is no senatorial election in New Hampshire this year.

In Maine, a month ago, the voters by a narrow margin returned the veteran Republican, Frederick Hale, to the Senate.

G. O. P. Is Sure Nice Will Win

But Democrats Likewise Claim Victory in Anne Arundel.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 5 (Spl.). The close of the campaign in Anne Arundel County found Democratic leaders claiming a complete sweep for State and local candidates, while Republicans likewise were confident that Harry W. Nice, gubernatorial candidate, would win by a small majority and that they also would elect some of their local candidates.

The Republicans base their prediction on the energetic campaign waged by Mr. Nice, whom they say will overcome the majority of approximately 2,000 given Gov. Ritchie four years ago.

While Democrats are sanguine, they nevertheless feel some uneasiness as to the strength that the Better Government League has gathered. This organization has indorsed some Democrats and Republicans, aside from placing independent candidates of its own in a campaign for tax reduction and governmental reform.

The closest fight indicated is that for clerk of the Circuit Court, former Senator George T. Cromwell, Democrat, opposing Frank A. Munroe, Republican. A keen battle also is on for sheriff between Steven J. Everd, organization Democrat, Joseph S. Bean, Democrat, sponsored by the league, and Joseph W. Alton, Republican.

Reports of Ouster Movement Spur Glass to Run in 1936

Friends Say Press Stories Banished Thoughts of Retirement.

Virginia's fire-brand senior Senator, Carter Glass, of Lynchburg, plans to seek reelection in 1936, the Associated Press reports.

He made known yesterday in discussing rumors that he would retire at the end of his present term. Asked if he would run, he said:

"I will if I live."

Glass discussed what he said were hopes of younger men in the party that he would step down. He was emphatic that the hopes would not be gratified.

Persons close to the Senator said that any hesitancy that Glass might have had about running in 1936 for his third full term was banished by newspaper stories and word-of-mouth reports that a movement was under way to oust him.

Glass' friends said he had toyed with the idea of retiring, but the reports made up his mind. He has decided to meet the challenge at the polls.

The Virginian's outspoken criticism of the present Administration was said to have given rise to the movement to take over the office he already has held 14 years.

Any such movement would meet with the determined opposition of Senator Harry F. Byrd, junior Senator and, as Democratic national committeeman, the party leader in Virginia. Byrd has let all questioners know that a fight on Glass would be a fight on both Glass and Byrd.

Glass will be 77 years old next January. His term expires in January, 1937.

Merchant Plans NRA Court Test

'Interference' Denounced by Hagerstown Man.

Tentative plans to institute court action to prevent the NRA from "interfering" with his business were announced here yesterday by H. L. Mills, Hagerstown, Md., ice and coal dealer.

"Federal court action," Mills said, "seems to be the only means I have left to protect my rights under the Constitution. I'm tired of these threats from NRA State compliance officers to put me in jail and to cut off my head."

Mills said he received a telegram from W. A. Harriman, NRA administrative officer, ordering him not to display the Blue Eagle because of alleged code violations.

"I never did have a Blue Eagle," he said. "I don't want one and I'll give any one a $1,000 reward to find one in my place of business." Mills said he has 60 employes in Hagerstown, Frederick and Westmoreland, Md., and Chambersburg, Shippensburg and Mechanicsburg, Pa.

West Watches Cutting Versus The New Deal

Fight of Administration Against Supporter Holds Spotlight.

Denver, Nov. 5 (AP).—New Deal policies provided today the backbone of political argument in the Rocky Mountain States, where four members of the United States Senate, eight national representatives and three Governors will be elected tomorrow.

National attention has been drawn to the New Mexico Senatorial field, where the Independent-Republican Bronson Cutting, supporter of the Roosevelt Presidential campaign two years ago, has been thrown overboard by the Administration party in favor of Representative Dennis Chavez, Democrat, seeking the seat Cutting has held many years.

Besides contributing money to the Chavez campaign, the National Democratic organization sent Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Senate floor leader, into the State to attack Cutting's political philosophy as "long on denunciations" but lacking in constructive suggestions. Several prominent Senate progressives campaigned for Cutting.

Another Senate Fight.

Another Senate seat also is at stake in New Mexico. Senator Carl A. Hatch, Democrat, is opposed by former Governor R. C. Dillon, Republican, for the remaining two years of the term left vacant by the elevation of Senator Sam Bratton to the Federal Circuit bench.

At the upper end of the region Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat silver monetization leader, is battling against George M. Bourquin, Republican, fiery former United States district judge. Judge Bourquin has attacked New Deal measures. The outspoken Wheeler has replied with equal vehemence, accusing Bourquin of threatening the continuance of Federal activities within the State.

Montana, too, will elect a second member of the Senate, filling the remaining two years of the term to which T. J. Walsh was elected. Candidaates are former Representaitve Scott Leavitt (Republican), ousted by the Democratic landslide two years ago; and James A. Murray (Democrat), Butte attorney, new to national politics.

Fight in Wyoming.

Wyoming's Senatorial battle also is for an unexpired term—that of the late John B. Kendrick. Senator J. C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), close friend of the President and Postmaster General Farley and former First Assistant Postmaster General, now holding the place by appointment, and Representative Vincent Carter (Republican) are candidates for the place.

Two Colorado Representatives active in shaping agricultural policies in the West are among the Democratic quartet seeking re-election in this State. They are Edward Taylor, author of the new grazing district law, and Fred Summings, sugar-beet grower.

Montana's two Democratic Representatives are seeking second terms, while New Mexico and Wyoming are filling seats heretofore held by a Democrat and Republican, respectively.

Govs. Ed C. Johnson in Colorado and Leslie A. Miller in Wyoming, both Democrats, have engaged in ardent campaigns for second terms.

W. Va. Chooses Between Holt And Hatfield

Heavy Vote Is Expected as Both Sides End Fight Claiming Victory.

Charleston, W. Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—West Virginia's electorate of nearly a million voters will choose tomorrow between 29-year-old Rush D. Holt, Roosevelt Democrat, and the veteran Senator Henry D. Hatfield, Republican critic of the Administration, to represent them in the United States Senate.

Spokesmen for both parties claimed victory tonight at the end of a spirited campaign, in which both candidates stumped the State. Fair election weather was predicted and a heavy vote is expected.

The senatorial fight, revolving directly around the New Deal as an issue, overshadowed other contests in national importance, but interest also was keen in the election of six Representatives to Congress, 17 State Senators and 94 members of the House of Delegates.

Another question to be decided is whether West Virginia, "bone dry" for 20 years, shall abandon prohibition. The constitutional amendment, referred to the people by the State Legislature, would prohibit saloons by making it illegal to consume liquor at the place of sale. If adopted, the repeal amendment will not be effective until March 1.

Holt, former instructor at Salem College and member of the Legislature since 1929, will not be 30 years old until July, or until after the Senate meets again.

Senator Hatfield, in campaign speeches, has said the Democratic nominee, if elected, "could not take his seat" because of age ineligibility.

Replying, Holt has referred to Henry Clay, who was seated before he was 30, and says he is certain Senate colleagues will offer him "the same courtesy."

Hatfield, who was Governor from 1913 to 1917, based much of his campaign on his record as a public figure over a 20-year period. Holt lauded the New Deal.

Sinclair's Fate Leads Interest In West's Vote

New Ideas at Stake in Seven States, Polls to Be Guarded.

San Francisco, Nov. 5 (AP).—Battleground of progressivism for years, the Far West decides tomorrow the fate of new ideas in statesmanship and political economy, centering chiefly on the seething contest for the Governorship of California.

Five United States Senators, 35 Representatives, five Governors and a host of State and minor officers will be selected in the seven Far Western States. More than 3,000,000 voters are expected to turn out.

A Socialist turned Democrat, Upton Sinclair dominates attention in California by his effort to unseat Acting Gov. Frank E. Merriam, Republican, in a campaign said by some observers to be the most momentous since Civil War days. The third major candidate is Raymond L. Haight, Progressive and Commonwealth nominee.

Prepare for Trouble.

Fear of bloodshed or fraud at the polls brought preparations for guards and watchers at many voting places, especially in Southern California.

Campaigning on his EPIC (End Poverty In California) program, Sinclair has said this represented a "revolution, not of bullets, but of ballots," a "people's movement" and a "crusade for social justice." He asserted he stood on the Democratic State platform. One by one, however, Democratic leaders, kicked over the party traces, crying against "blind party regularity." Then a cold shoulder was turned by the National Administration.

A call for "complete repudiation of radicalism" was made by supporters of Merriam. He assumed the governorship upon the death last spring of Gov. James Rolph, Jr.

New Deal Issue.

Senators will be elected in Arizona, California, Nevada, Utah and Washington. This contest is of chief importance in Washington, where Senator C. C. Dill, Democrat, retired. The New Deal is largely the issue there between L. B. Schwellenbach, Democrat, and Reno Oddin, Republican.

Senators Henry F. Ashurst of Arizona, Key Pittman of Nevada, and William H. King of Utah, all Democrats, are running for reelection and have opposition. Senator Hiram W. Johnson of California, Republican, is the nominee of the two major parties and of two minor groups.

Borah Enlivens Campaign.

Contests for the governorship also hold the spotlight in Oregon, Idaho, Nevada and Arizona. A movement somewhat similar to that in California is found in Oregon. A self-styled "fighting Progressive," Peter Zimmerman, runs on a platform advocating a State bank and graduated income and property taxes. His principal opponents are Joe E. Dunne, Republican, and Charles H. Martin, Democrat. Their supporters have termed Zimmerman "an ultra radical."

Senator William E. Borah's denouncement of the New Deal in his support of Frank L. Stephan, Republican, for Governor, has enlivened the Idaho campaign. Stephan is opposed by Gov. C. Ben Ross, Democrat, who asks a third term.

Nevada's contests revolves about Acting Gov. Morley Griswold, Republican, and Richard Kirman, Democrat. The real issue is said to be the effort to oust the old regime supporting Griswold, who became Governor upon the death several months ago of Gov. Fred B. Balzar, Republican.

In Arizona Gov. B. B. Moeur, Democrat, has upheld the New Deal in his campaign for reelection against Thomas Maddock, Republican.

3 Reich Bishops Stand Adamant Against Mueller

Berlin, Nov. 5 (AP).—A firm stand of "no compromise" was taken today by three German bishops regarding the peace overtures of leaders of the Reich Church.

A spokesman for the confessional synod declared Bishop Hans Meiser, Bishop Theophil Wurm and Bishop Marahrens had definitely agreed to concede nothing to Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller and Dr. Arthur Kinder, leaders of the German Christian Church.

Furthermore, it was declared, the three bishops will refrain from attending a conference tomorrow among 20-odd Protestant bishops to find ways and means of composing the difficulties of the German Evangelical Church. The meeting was called by Bishop Mueller.

The belief was expressed that Mueller would announce tomorrow the appointment of Dr. Kinder in the place of Dr. August Jaeger, recently deposed adviser to Mueller. Kinder, who is one of the most active in seeking a compromise with the opposition, has been trying to persuade Meiser, Wurm and Marahrens that the elimination of Dr. Jaeger means Mueller in the future will steer a course acceptable even to the opposition.

Transient Directors Of FERA Open Parley

Atlanta, Nov. 5 (AP).—FERA transient directors from seven Southern States opened a two-day regional conference here today with Miss Helen C. Mawer, director of transient activities in the Southeast.

William J. Plunkert, of Washington, Federal transient director, will address the conference during its sessions. States represented were Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee and Alabama.

ground in the Senate and gain 60 to 70 seats in the House.

President Roosevelt was in Hyde Park, where he and Mrs. Roosevelt will vote in the ancient, little town hall, as they have done so many times before.

Individual Contests.

With continued political control of Congress assured to the Administration, attention centers more on the spectacular individual contests—the Pennsylvania senatorial fight, Upton Sinclair's apparently unsuccessful attempt to capture the California governorship, the Democratic raid in Vermont, where they are trying to pick off a Senator from the hard-bitten Republican granite hills, and the counter-raid in Nevada, where the Republicans are after the scalp of Senator Key Pittman, president pro tem of the Senate and chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

California polls will not close until 10 p. m., Washington time, so results of the Merriam-Sinclair battle will not begin to take tangible form until toward midnight or later.

In his radio appeal, Chairman Farley recalled that 40 per cent of the Republicans in Congress concurred in New Deal legislation. He gave an account of the Administration's good works, and following up Mr. Roosevelt's strategy in battering down party lines, Mr. Farley made a bid for Republican and independent voters.

Thanks for Support.

"I particularly want to include in this brief and inadequate expression of gratitude those Republicans, independents and thinking people of all political sects, who have been patriotic enough to lay aside party label in the public interest and have joined with us in bringing about the election of a new Congress sympathetic with the President's views," he said after thanking the precinct and district workers for their help.

"I am telling you tonight with full faith that by this time tomorrow night my words will be confirmed," Farley said, "that in the next Congress we will have at least six more seats in the Senate than we have now—maybe more than six. I will tell you also that so far as the House of Representatives is concerned, our majority will continue without material change. If we lose a few seats in one section of the country we will gain a few seats in the other sections. And the country need not be surprised if our majority there, already higher than ever before in our history, is increased rather than diminished. In any event, the House of Representatives will be thoroughly satisfactory from the Democratic point of view."

The goal of his Republican opponents, Farley said, is a gain of 31 seats.

"That, incidentally," he added, "is less than half the ordinary political turn-over in a by-election year. Thirty-one seats in the House of Representatives would make it possible for our adversaries to carry on their planned campaign of obstruction. That is why I appeal tonight to our friends and workers not to slacken their interest, but to increase their fervor on election day. That is why I say to you that every congressional district is a battleground that calls for your strongest endeavor, for every one of these contests might conceivably be the decisive factor in the great enterprise in which the Administration is engaged."

Most Stand Firm.

Republican Chairman Fletcher appealed in football terms to Republican rank and file workers.

"To night, as the campaign closes," he said, "I am giving the ball to the rank and file of our party for tomorrow's fight. We are up against a big, heavily stuffed team, but it has an unbalanced line, and the star quarter back seems to be undecided about his plays. After grooming Sinclair for ground gaining around the left end, he was put off the team last week and the line-up changed. A new back field of bankers has been signed up. It looks like a fake pass to the right."

Unwilling to compromise and halfway embrace the New Deal, as have so many individual Republican candidates, he gave notice that regardless of the outcome the fight against the New Deal will go on. This was regarded as a significant omen. It may foreshadow a fight within the Republican Party between those now in control, who want the party to resist the New Deal, no matter what comes, and those like Republican Senate Leader McNary, Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, and a considerable younger element which believes the party must shift to a more progressive attitude.

"Whether our victory be great or small," Flecther said, "the Republican Party and Republican workers everywhere will have to stand firm during the next two years. From present indications, even with the gains we shall make, the next Congress will be more reckless than the last one."

The Republican chairman said the Administration will continue its spending program, and that the public already is beginning to pay the bill in sharp rises in prices. He said that if the present measures of the Administration fail, the next danger will be that of greater radicalism.

Can't Stay Aloof.

"It is a thing which feeds upon itself," he asserted. "That, after all, is the most important problem which not only the Republican Party but the people of this Nation have to face during the next two years. The duty of meeting and handling this problem is not solely the responsibility of the Republican Party. It is the duty of every man and woman who has a stake in the country and cares for its future.

"Men in industry and business can no longer take the superior attitude that they are not interested in politics, for politics is interested in them and in their business, and our people will soon have to decide whether they want their business, industry, agriculture and banking run by men who have made a life study of their jobs, or whether they want them run by professional politicians and impractical professors.

"As has been said, it usually falls to the lot of the Republican Party to have to clear up the mess the Democratic Party makes of our national affairs. This one will, I fear, be a terrible mess, but we will be ready and we will do it along clean, sane American lines. My closing appeal to all Republicans is to keep their faith—the country will need it in the years to come."

Peanut Oil Firms Get AAA Benefits

Secretary Wallace ruled yesterday, according to the Associated Press, that peanut oil manufacturers who divert peanuts purchased this year into oil instead of other commercial channels will be entitled to AAA payments.

The decision followed announcement of similar payments for peanut growers under the general program for adjusting production and balancing the supply of shelled goods to the effective demand.

Payments will be made to manufacturers on farmers' stock peanuts grown in 1934, and purchased and processed after October 1. It does not cover peanuts sold under agreements by growers to divert their stock for oil manufacture.

Manufacturers who make such diversions will be paid $16 per ton on Virginia type peanuts; $12 for Spanish type and $85 for runner type.

Egg Truck Holdup Man Gets Life for Kidnaping

Los Angeles, Nov. 5 (AP).—Rouland Mikesell, 23, convicted of kidnaping a man he had never seen, was sentenced today to serve from 20 years to life imprisonment in San Quentin prison on two robbery and three kidnaping counts.

Three men who previously pleaded guilty to holding up a truck carrying eggs and driving off with it, unwittingly kidnaped a relief driver who was asleep in an inner compartment, had testified that Mikesell aided only in disposing of the stolen eggs.

Midwest Votes Made Into Test For Roosevelt

Democratic Pleas Drown Local Contests; Both Parties Confident.

Chicago, Nov. 5 (AP).—The principal question Middle Western voters are expected to answer tomorrow is whether President Roosevelt's personality has the same magnetic quality to draw votes as it had two years ago.

Heated fights for Congressional seats, bitter struggles for the Senate and State offices have marked the off-year election in the populous midsection, but in almost all cases the local issues have been overshadowed by the Democratic plea to "Go forward with Roosevelt," and the Republican counterthrusts against Administration policies.

Election eve brought declarations from Democrats that present Congressional majorities would be sustained and increased as strong counterclaims came from Republicans that the tide had turned in their favor.

Wisconsin Question.

Party claims in the hotly contested States tonight were:

Wisconsin—Will a third party be born tomorrow? That is the question in Wisconsin. The party? Progressive, and its founders are the La Follettes, Robert, seeking re-election to the Senate, and Phil, asking for the governorship. Democrats claim "after tomorrow the State will be 100 per cent for the New Deal." Republicans said: "Wisconsin will go back to normal with a sweeping Republican victory."

Michigan—Howard Lawrence, G. O. P. State chairman, predicts taking six of ten Democratic House seats. Democrats say claim unfounded. Emil J. Hurja, aid of Postmaster General Farley, entered State in behalf of candidacy of Frank A. Picard (Democrat) for the Senate against Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican). Estimated vote, 1,100,000.

Illinois—Republican State Chairman Justus L. Johnson, of Aurora: "Illinois will reduce the Democratic representation in Congress from 19 seats to 11 or less." Bruce A. Campbell, Democratic State chairman: "Our ticket will carry by a majority ranging from 350,000 to 500,000. We may gain one or two Congressional seats over 1932."

Dillinger Echoes.

Indiana—The recent reopening of the Dillinger escape probe has been hailed by Republicans as swinging many votes their way. Don B. Irwin, State Republican chairman, predicted a "comfortable majority" for the entire State ticket. Democratic leaders expect to retain ground won in 1932.

Minnesota—Charles M. McCabe, Republican State chairman, predicted election of Martin A. Nelson (R.) as Governor and as leader "of a new movement in Minnesota politics." Joseph Moonan, Democratic chairman, said John E. Regan would win for Governor by a plurality of 50,000 outside of the twin cities. Farmer-Labor Party headquarters confident that Gov. Floyd Olson will be reelected to a third term.

Iowa—Republican State chairman says G. O. P. will win by 125,000 majority; E. J. Fueling, Democratic State chairman, asserts his party ticket will go over by the same majority. He claims the Democrats will elect a complete congressional delegation.

Norris Stirs Interest.

Nebraska—Interest stirred by campaign of Senator George Norris for a one-house Legislature, and by two proposed State constitutional amendments, one to permit pari-mutuel betting and another to repeal State prohibition.

Ohio—Two veterans in political life claim victory for themselves and their party. They are Senator Simeon D. Fess (R.) opposing Vic Donahey (D.), former Governor, for the senatorship. It is predicted 2,700,000 votes will be cast.

North Dakota—Interest centered in the fight of Mrs. Lydia Langer (R.) to be elected Governor to "vindicate" her husband, former Gov. William B. Langer, ousted by the supreme court after being convicted of conspiracy to solicit political contributions from Federal workers.

New Lawyer Says Hauptmann Has 'Innocent Look'

Flemington, N. J., Nov. 5 (AP). Bruno Richard Hauptmann, Lindbergh kidnap-slaying prisoner, met his new counsel, Edward J. Reilly, for the first time today in Hunterdon County Jail and impressed the veteran Brooklyn lawyer as "calm and with the appearance of an innocent man."

Reilly later added that he and Lloyd Fisher, his associate counsel in New Jersey, "will get Hauptmann acquitted."

Reilly, his Brooklyn associate, Murray Edelbaum, and Fisher, who is a local attorney, came to Flemington after a conference at Perth Amboy with Attorney General David T. Wilentz. This meeting with the attorney general was referred to by Reilly as a "courtesy call." Actually it straightened out Reilly's replacement of James M. Fawcett as Hauptmann's counsel, and the question of what lawyers would be permitted to see the prisoner.

It was agreed that both Reilly and Fisher will have access to the jail to see Hauptmann at any time, that Mrs. Hauptmann will be allowed to visit her husband three times a week instead of daily, and that the year-old Hauptmann boy, Mannfried, will be permitted to see his father once a week.

For the first time since Lauptmann was brought here the guards were removed from the bullpen while he talked to the lawyers.

Plane Will Bring Tennessee Voters Absentee Ballots

An airplane carrying ballots for 42 absentee voters in the District of Columbia will speed here today from Memphis, Tenn., it was announced last night by Miss Margaret Mary Hickey, secretary of the Young Democrats.

The 42 Tennesseans were deeply disappointed when their ballots failed to arrive by mail, and Miss Hickey so informed friends of Senator McKellar.

McKellar supporters notified Miss Hickey last night that the plane would bring the ballots here and take them back after they had been marked.

Absentee Vote Cast in Capital Breaks Record

cratic Absentee Voters Bureau in the Willard Hotel, said last night that he and his aids had received 20,000 inquiries from absentee voters here.

That bureau, sponsored by the local division of the Young Democratic Clubs of America, is only one of a half dozen in the city, two being maintained by the Republicans.

Besides, virtually every Senator and every Representative has maintained a sort of absentee bureau of his own on Capitol Hill.

Guffey's Bureau.

There are a few others who are not yet even in office who have maintained headquarters here to get out the vote—Joseph F. Guffey, of Pennsylvania, for example.

Mr. Guffey, the Democratic boss of his State, is credited with getting jobs here for a large number of Pennsylvanians, and it is not likely that they have overlooked the business of voting for him in his race against Senator David A. Reed.

There are 39 States which accept ballots sent through the mails. Three of these, however, insist that the ballots not be marked and mailed until election day, and so today will see absentee voters from Kansas, Colorado and Rhode Island marking their ballots simultaneously with voters back home.

Hundreds Travel Home.

Not only have the absentee voters' bureaus here helped men and women get their ballots and mail them, but they have assisted them in traveling to those States which do not permit absentee voting.

Hundreds of voters, traveling by automobile, bus and train, have journeyed to such States as New Jersey, Kentucky, Indiana, Mississippi and Missouri to cast their ballots.

Relatively small though the absentee vote here may be, grateful candidates often have pointed out that a few hundred ballots sent from Washington might very well have been the margin of their victory.

John Barrett Weds Mrs. Cady in N. Y.

He Directed Pan American Union Here.

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—John Barrett, 68, former director general of the Pan American Union in Washington, and Mrs. Mary E. Cady, 68, of Coral Gables, Fla., were married here today.

Barrett gave his occupation as "a retired diplomat" and his address as Grafton, Vt. He is a son of Charles Barrett. Mrs. Cady was born in Wisconsin, a daughter of James D. Tannes. This will be her third marriage. Her first husband died in 1911 and her second died this year.

Menier, 'Chocolate King' Of France, Is Dead at 79

Paris, Nov. 5 (AP).—Senator Gaston Menier, 79, the "chocolate king" of France, died today at his home in Paris.

Senator Menier was well known in America and especially so in Canada, for he once owned Anticosti Island in the St. Lawrence, selling it, however, in 1926. He was kicked and beaten by Paris mobs during the rioting last February in the French capital, but announced later that he had not been hurt.

Uruguayans Scramble For Pirates' Treasure

Colonia, Uruguay, Nov. 5 (AP).—This port on the River Plate was in the throes of treasure fever tonight.

A crew of men was excavating an area 30 feet deep, 15 feet broad and 900 feet long in the hope of finding a fabulous hoard which legend says was buried here by the pirates Moreau and Molina in 1806. The government will get half of any gold found.

Five-Seat Gain In Three States Is G. O. P. Hope

Democrats Are Confident, Too; Predict Truman Will Win Missouri.

Kansas City, No. 5 (AP).—The closing tonight of campaigns in which State and local issues were etched sharply on a background of national New Deal policies found Republicans claiming they would gain at least five congressional seats in the general elections tomorrow in Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma.

Democratic leaders disputed the Republican claims, and also confidently predicted that Harry S. Truman, of Independence, Mo., would be elected Senator from Missouri by at least 200,000 majority over Roscoe C. Patterson, Republican incumbent.

In Missouri, Republican hopes for gains centered in the Seventh, Eleventh and Twelfth Districts. When the State was redistricted to cut the number of districts from 15 to 13, normal Republican strength was said to have been grouped in those three districts.

Claim 5 Seats in Kansas.

Republicans in Kansas claim they will win five of the seven congressional races for a gain of one seat. In Oklahoma, Republicans predict they will regain the Eighth District with the election of T. J. Sargent, but Democratic leaders assert the State's solid Democratic delegation of nine will remain unbroken.

Texas, as usual, took little interest in congressional politics after the primary, as the Democratic nominees were assured of election.

Alf M. Landon, Republican Governor of Kansas, ran for reelection on his record, but also insisted he has given the national Administration his cooperation. Omar B. Ketchum, Democratic candidate, campaigned for election as a vote of confidence in the Roosevelt Administration.

Both "wets" and "drys" predicted victory in the State prohibition vote, with a close contest in prospect.

G. O. P. Cries "Bossism."

In Missouri, Republicans campaigned vigorously on a charge of "bossism" by the Democratic organization controlled by Thomas J. Pendergast, Kansas City political leader. The indictment of three Kansas City police officials by a Federal grand jury on perjury charges, after an investigation of the Union Station slaying, was described by Senator Patterson as "wrecking the hopes of the Kansas City political machine to send its hand-picked candidate to the United States Senate." Truman, the Democratic nominee, campaigned on a platform of support for Roosevelt.

The New Deal and relief were the main issues in Oklahoma, were Will B. Pine seeks to be the first Republican to win the governorship of that State. E. G. Marland, oil man, urged voters to mark a straight Democratic ballot "from Governor to constable" to support President Roosevelt. Gov. W. H. Murray, Democrat, who could not seek reelection under the State constitution, withheld support from Marland and predicted Pine's victory. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, indorsed Pine.

Turner-Pangborn Win Second Prize In Aerial Derby

Melbourne, Australia, Nov. 5 (AP). Col. Roscoe Turner and Clyde Pangborn, the American team who flew from London to Melbourne, today were awarded the second speed prize for the great air race.

The team's flight was officially clocked at 92 hours 59 minutes 38 seconds, and the prize was $7,500.

This time and prize is compared to that of the winners in the speed race, C. W. A. Scott and T. Campbell Black, of England, whose time was officially given as 70 hours 54 minutes 18 second, for $50,000 and a $2,500 gold cup.

Third in the speed event were Cathcart Jones and Ken Waller, of England, whose official time was 108 hours 13 minutes 45 seconds, for $2,500.

An American-made plane won the first prize of $10,000 in the handicap race, for the official clockers showed that its pilots, K. D. Parmentier and J. J. Moll, of the Netherlands, had pushed it throuh the air from Mildenhall Airdrome to Melbourne in 76 hours 38 minutes and 12 seconds.

Japan Declared Ready to Build Powerful Fleet

New Type Battleship Is Reported at London Conference.

London, Nov. 5 (AP).—Japan, it was learned authoritatively tonight, has prepared plans for construction of a large number of warships of an entirely new type, in case her demands for naval equality go unheeded in the current conversations and a naval race be started.

Whether any official hint of such plans would be given to the powers during the conversations, as a trial balloon, could not be determined immediately.

The plans, secretly prepared, embrace a new ship of economical build, but so powerful that some of the present categories provided for the fleets of the world by the Washington and London treaties might be useless in comparison, it was said.

The ship apparently is similar to an advance model pocket battleship. It was understood it would be built only in event no new treaty based on Japanese proposals is adopted by the United States and Great Britain to take the place of the Washington treaty at the end of 1936.

The Japanese regard their proposals as the only effective method of making war impossible. The British and the Americans so far have rejected them and no compromise is in sight.

The Japanese emphasized again today that any compromise offer must come from the British or Americans.

With lengthy discussions in prospect, Norman H. Davis, United States Ambassador at Large, considered whether to go to Geneva November 20 for the scheduled conference of the steering committee of the disarmament conference.

It was expected the naval conversations would be resumed tomorrow, possibly with a meeting of the British and Japanese delegations.

Steering Committee Called in Geneva

Geneva, Nov. 5 (AP).—President Arthur Henderson today convoked a session of the steering committee of the disarmament conference here for November 20. In a statement to the League of Nations he urged negotiation of a convention for regulation of manufacture and traffic in arms.

He recommended this be done without awaiting the results of a general conference on the problem, upon which President Roosevelt had urged early treatment. The disarmament committee already had approved the plan submitted by the American delegation.

It was stated in German circles that Germany has no intention of denouncing the Treaty of Versailles and no intention to reenter the conference so long as any nation contests her claim to equality.

Germany was said to believe that to return without a guarantee of equality would endanger the conference and would likely lead to a renewed German withdrawal.

Henderson's recommendation to create a permanent disarmament commission was interpreted to mean that disarmament efforts will not be dropped. It was expected that Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff, of Russia, would endeavor to transform the projected commission into a permanent peace conference.

Envoy Denies Japan Arms Mandate Islands in Pacific

veloping naval or submarine stations there.

Ito explained that when Japan leaves the League of Nations after expiration of the two years' notice period (1935), she would continue to send reports to the mandate commission as stipulated in the contract between Japan and the League Council. He said Tokyo would even send delegates to Geneva if requested.

Reference to Saipan.

League officials have held Japan can not quit the league until she fulfills all her international obligations. They have insisted Japan violated the covenant when she occupied Manchuria.

The mandate commission issued a communique after the session that its chairman told Ito "suspicions were constantly giving rise to comment in the world press, and one method of refuting them would be to afford free and unrestricted access to the islands for foreign travelers and vessels."

The commission asked why exports had increased by 4,000,000 yen over 1932 and was informed it was because of the growth of the sea products industry.

Referring to airdromes, the chairman told Ito he thought they should be open to airmen of all countries. Ito agreed it was best to remove any suspicions, but insisted they were without foundation.

A commissioner told Ito he had read in a Stockholm newspaper that an American battleship, transporting an American scientific group which intended to study an eclipse of the sun, had been denied admission to an island under the mandate.

Ito said he had no knowledge of the report, that the Japanese government had organized a scientific expedition to visit its own islands, and had invited scientists of other countries. He said the island in question was open to visitors.

Morro Officers Fight to Avert License Voiding

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Capt. William F. Warms and four officers of the Morro Castle opened their defense today against charges of negligence in the disaster that cost 134 lives when the Ward liner was swept by fire off the New Jersey coast September 18.

Before two inspectors of the Steamboat Inspection Service of the Department of Commerce, they heard their stories contradicted by their chief radio officer, George W. Rogers. The trial is for revocation of their licenses.

Inspectors Alva R. Chapman and Henry G. Colgen questioned the witnesses in the customs house. Resumption of a Federal grand jury inquiry was delayed until Thursday because the same witnesses are to be called.

Rogers was subjected to cross-examination, mostly relating to the exact time of the fire's discovery, by Chauncey I. Clark, attorney for the Ward line. His recital was contradicted several times in turn by the ship's officers.

Morro Castle Removal Awarded for $149,000

A contract for $149,000 for removal of the Morro Castle from the Asbury Park, N. J., beach has been awarded to Merritt-Chapman-Scott, Inc., of New York City, it was stated at the War Department yesterday.

The bid was $10,000 less than any other. One bid for $80,000 was submitted informally and was not considered.

Once the ship has been floated, officials will determine final disposition. It appeared probable yesterday she will be taken to a New York shipyard and broken up for her metal. If the lower plates, now imbedded in the sand, are found in good condition, she may be converted into a Navy tender.

Long Must Face Ansell Libel Suit

slander resulting from a speech made on the floor of the Senate, but for libel in publishing and distributing a copy of that speech, together with a letter calling special attention to the article," the District Appellate Court found.

"While the published articles were in part reproductions of the speech, the offense consists not in what was said in the Senate, but in the publication and circularizing of the libelous documents."

Arrest, Claims Long.

Long not only claimed immunity from summons on constitutional grounds, but held service of process in civil cases can so hamper a man that it amounts to an arrest in the liberal sense of the word. He held "public policy" requires that a member of Congress be given the same immunity accorded those called here to testify in a trial.

Sustaining both lower courts in denying Long's motion, Justice Brandeis yesterday summarized the case in a few words, declaring the claim of "immunity" not properly taken.

Cases cited in support of the contrary view, Brandeis said, "rest largely upon doubtful notions as to the historic privileges of members of Parliament" before 1770. A British statute enacted that year held members of Parliament subject to civil process, provided they were not "arrested or imprisoned."

The immunity claimed should not be confused with the common law rule that witnesses, suitors and their attorneys, while in attendance during the conduct of one suit, are immune from service in another, the Supreme Court ruled.

Insull Bankers Hold Spotlight At Fraud Trial

Witness Says Halsey Stuart Pushed Investment Utility Trust.

Chicago, Nov. 5 (AP).—Samuel Insull bowed off the Insull trial stage today, leaving that battlefield to the 16 associates accused with him of defrauding investors.

The spotlight swung to Insull's investment bankers. Clarence T. MacNeille took the stand with the claim that Halsey Stuart & Co. gave Insull's Corporation Securities Co. an $11,000,000 boost when it began its career in 1929.

MacNeille created a stir when he stood up, in the midst of routine testimony, to declare his opinion of Insull.

"My opinion of Samuel Insull's business integrity is the highest I ever had of any man," said the 6-foot MacNeille, "except H. L. Stuart."

"That was grossly irregular," cried Assistant Attorney General Leslie Salter as prosecutors shouted their objections.

MacNeille, second of the 17 defendants to testify in the mail-fraud trial, related how Halsey, Stuart & Co. came to join forces with Insull, the Middle Western utilities king.

"Mr. Insull was very anxious" for Halsey, Stuart & Co. to join in pushing his first investment trust, Insull Utility Investments, MacNeille testified, and that company accumulated 152,270 shares of its stock in 1929.

When the Corporation Securities Co. was formed in October, 1929, the investment banking house turned this stock in at its cost of $3,407,000, MacNeille told the jury, althought it had a market value of more than $15,000,000.

MEMORANDUM TO ALL HEADS OF DEPARTMENTS, COMMISSIONS OR AGENCIES:

In order to expedite the Community Chest campaign for relief funds in so far as federal employees are concerned, a Governmental Unit of the Community Chest is being set up and with my approval Major-General Fred W. Coleman, U.S.A., has been named general chairman of that Unit. This procedure should reduce to a minimum the cost of collection and the money expended for administrative purposes.

In order that every federal employee shall be given an opportunity to make a voluntary contribution, you are requested to designate a chairman to organize and supervise the work in your Department, Commission or Agency. General Coleman will call on you shortly in reference to the chairman to be designated.

The importance of a maintenance of private relief work is so thoroughly appreciated that it is not necessary for me to stress it, but I feel that every worker in the Government service should have an opportunity, if he desires, to play his or her part in the raising of the funds for this worthwhile undertaking.

Supreme Court Upholds Fixing Of Milk Prices

Bench to Rule on Orders Taking Gold From Circulation

By Robert C. Albright.

The United States Supreme Court yesterday sustained the validity of one piece of recovery legislation—the New York Milk Control act—then took under scrutiny the drastic Roosevelt orders wiping gold from circulation.

Regulations fixing minimum prices for milk in the New York metropolitan area were upheld by the court in one of a score of important decisions, marking the heaviest court action in months.

Not the least vital of these assured prompt settlement of the dispute over constitutionality of gold payment suspensions. The court will determine whether holders of 30-year gold first mortgage bonds of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway can force payment in gold. It is the second such case taken under review.

The New York milk case, far-reaching in its effects on price-lifting objectives of the New Deal, echoed a decision last year upholding State milk control legislation. Yesterday's findings held that "comparative inefficiency, not tyrannical compulsion" accounts for weaker members of the industry who are "laggards in the race."

Support Held Significant.

Supreme Court support of price-fixing in the New York milk suit, brought by Hegeman Farms Corporation, wholesale Grade B milk dealers, was viewed in some quarters as significant of what might be expected in other decisions on major recovery policies.

In effect, the court found that fixing of minimum prices, if such action is not by "arbitrary flats," must go unchallenged even if some of the firms competing for business are unable to earn a fair return on investments.

No New Deal angle was involved in the bulk of decisions handed down by the court yesterday, covering a wide range of important civil appeals. Notable among these was a decision by the court to reconsider its recent refusal to interfere with lower court decisions upholding talking picture patents on which William Fox seeks to collect $100,000,000 for alleged infringements.

Temporary Victory Won.

Opposing interests, which only a short time ago apparently lost millions through the Supreme Court refusal, won at least a temporary victory in the movement for rehearing.

A simple method of developing sound film is involved in the patents held by Fox through the American Tri-Ergon Corporation. Appealing the lower court findings, Paramount Publix Corporation contends the process is not patentable. The patents call for printing of sound and picture on separate strips of film, to be combined later for simultaneous reproduction.

The case recently brought repercussions in the California political campaign. Upton Sinclair, Democratic candidate for Governor, is a friend of Fox, and recently wrote a biography of the motion picture executive. Opposition movie interests have been charged with fighting Sinclair because of his interest in Fox.

To Review Gold Suspension.

Supplying the first Supreme Court test of Administration monetary policies, the decision to review Government gold payment suspension affects an estimated $90,000,000,000 to $125,000,000,000 in securities carrying a gold payment clause, and about $21,000,000,000 in Government obligations.

Yesterday's decision conformed with action taken several weeks ago, when the court took under consideration an almost identical case in which a Baltimore & Ohio stockholder sought payment of interest in gold.

"The solvency of many citizens, industries and local governments, perhaps even the financial stability of the National Government, may be affected by the determination of this great issue," Solicitor General Biggs told the court, urging that action be hurried by taking the issue out of the hands of the lower courts.

"Succinctly the issue is this: Are all these obligations to be discharged at the rate of $1.69 for each $1 borrowed."

Other Decisions Made.

Additional decisions handed down included:

In a ruling affecting many large taxpayers, it was held that capital gains might be figured as net income for the purpose of making charitable deductions in figuring income tax returns.

Paintings worth $714,750, property of the late Thomas B. Clarke, of New York, and "loaned" to a Pennsylvania museum, were held subject to death or inheritance taxes in Pennsylvania rather than in New York, the home of the late owner.

Validity of the Kentucky gross sales tax law, under which an annual levy is assessed by a license tax on merchants, was taken under review.

Decision of the Indiana Supreme Court upholding the Indiana beverage act of 1933, which gave the State power to define even a non-intoxicating beverage as an intoxicant, was sustained, in effect.

The right of Federal courts to name receivers in bankruptcy, and take over from State officials property in liquidation for the benefit of creditors, was upheld.

Division Heads Complete Plans For Fund Drive

Stirring Appeal Made by Wheeler; Campaign to Open Monday.

Striking the first note of the Community Chest campaign, 350 division chairmen and key men of the group solicitation unit completed their plans at a mobilization dinner last night at the Raleigh Hotel.

Five speakers—W. W. Wheeler, chairman of the Chest's speakers unit; Dr. William McClelland, president of the Potomac Electric Power Co.; H. L. Rust, jr., chairman of the Chest's campaign committee; James A. Councilor, campaign auditor, and Newbold Noyes, of the Evening Star—addressed the gathering of workers.

Although the formal opening of the campaign is Monday, the group solicitation unit, it was announced last night, will start its drive for contributions today, when key men will distribute pledge cards to workers in all Washington firms who employ more than 20 persons. Return of these cards will not be asked until the official opening of the campaign.

Wheeler's Appeal.

Mr. Wheeler made a stirring appeal to the workers who will do their bit toward filling the Chest's quota of $1,675,000.

"I am speaking," he said, "in behalf of mothers—widowed mothers, deserted mothers—in behalf of orphaned children, of helpless cripples, of the homeless aged."

The Chest was described as the "only and the best means of meeting our civic responsibility in taking care of our less fortunate citizens" by Mr. Rust.

Both Mr. McClelland and Mr. Noyes stressed the necessity for employers to ask their workers to back the Chest, not through coercion, but through "coercion of the heart." Mr. Councilor described the methods of handling pledges to facilitate auditing and accounting work.

Among Those Present.

On the platform at the dinner were Chairman Clarkson, Lloyd B. Wilson, Mr. Rust, E. C. Graham, Clarence Phelps Dodge, Herbert L. Willett, jr., Mr. Noyes, John H. Hanna, Mr. Councilor, Bernard Wycoff, Gen. Frederick William Coleman, Capt. H. A. Gardyne, Joseph D. Kaufman, Laurence E. Rubel, Harry Hites, Francis G. Addison, Mr. Wheeler, William Montgomery, Clarence A. Aspinwall, W. W. Everett, S. Percy Thompson, Eugene MacLean, John Saul, Karl W. Korby, Laniel P. McLachlen, the Rev. Albert H. Lucas, Sanford Bates and Bert M. Luchs.

Two similar precampaign meetings are scheduled this week. Tomorrow night the metropolitan unit will meet at the Willard Hotel, and Thursday night the special gift unit will meet ot the Mayflower Hotel.

Department of Commerce workers yesterday morning appeared in the auditorium in relays and listened to a series of talks by department officials, who urged their cooperation in filling the Chest's needs.

Secretary Roper and Assistant Secretary Dickinson told the Federal workers that there is a vital need that relief be taken out of the hands of the Government and placed back to States, cities and private agencies. The Chest is a step toward that return, they said.

Kingsford-Smith Plane Seized For $2,750 Claim on Coast

Los Angeles Man Says Flier Owes Him Money for 1928 Ocean Hop.

Los Angeles, Nov. 5 (AP).—An attachment today tied up the monoplane Lady Southern Cross, which carried Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith and Capt. P. G. Taylor from Australia to California.

While Sir Charles was being saluted in Hollywood as a conquering hero, a deputy city marshal cocked a chair against the wall of the hangar where the plane rested and took possession of it in the name of the law.

The attachment was levied in a suit filed by E. Beverly, assignee of Tom Catton, who charged Sir Charles owed him $2,750 for services in 1928, when Kingsford-Smith was preparing for his historic flight from Oakland to Australia.

Beverly asserted Catton advanced money, goods and services worth $1,750. He claimed $1,000 interest.

Kingsford-Smith, here in an attempt to sell the ship, made known that the plane, despite its crossing of the Pacific in 15 hours, 49 minutes, was not considered commercially acceptable. Rigid British and Australian aviation restrictions prevented commercial use of the low-winged monoplane in any of the Dominions, the Los Angeles manufacturer of the ship explained. The manufacturer said the plane probably will be rebuilt here and resold in regular commercial channels.

"You've no idea how the blamed thing itches," he said.

P. G. B. Morriss, friend of the aviator, called a neighborhood tailor. Measurements were taken, seven tailors went to work and in less than an hour Kingsford-Smith had a suit.

nominated the permanent committee, in his report said:

"While it is not yet known whether the committee's most important services will be in connection with proposed legislation or with seeking to improve the administration of existing law, our group is clear that the success of any legislative work which the permanent committee attempts will depend considerably on:

Aims Are Outlined.

"(1) Its ability to prevent conflicting proposals from being simultaneously urged by civic groups, as well as (2) the extent to which Congress is able to depend on the views of the committee as actually reflecting general public sentiment."

Explaining the basis for the selection of nominees, Miller said:

"In constituting such a committee, it is evidently important, so far as possible, to avoid including anyone having an ax to grind, or anyone appointed or serving for the honor or the publicity, or anyone having a political or official position closely related to the administration of justice, or anyone whose natural approach to the solution of these broad public questions is personal rather than impersonal."

Many Names Considered.

The organization group, Miller said, sought to include the following: (a), a lawyer or lawyers who have had actual experience in prosecuting criminals, but whose present practice does not ordinarily comprise such cases; (b), a member interested in the science of government; (c), persons experienced in drafting legislation; (d), persons experienced in presenting bills to Congressional committees, and (e), a preponderance of persons "long identified with the District and its interests as a community."

It was explained that several scores of names were considered before the nominations were made and that "a substantial number" was removed from consideration only after it was found they could not serve.

Two of the members, Noel and Yaden, were also members of the nominating group.

Decision of the committee of 40 to name two additional committees to deal with specific problems was reached during a lengthy discussion of the subcommittee's report.

Noel was instructed to have his organization group bring back the nominations next Monday.

held for several hours on suspicion of being spies.

The State Department yesterday said it would apply strong diplomatic pressure on Germany to ascertain the status of two Americans held in German jails for several months on open charges, according to the Associated Press.

Miss Steele's arrest by secret police came to the department's attention on October 10, when Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, requested information on behalf of her brother, Arthur Steele, of Nampa, Idaho.

Roiderer had lived in Munich for about two years. He was arrested while seeking to cross into Switzerland and held for suspected violation of the currency regulations, although it was understood the charge against him was much more serious.

American consuls in Munich and Berlin pursued the case throughout July, but have been unable to get action, officials said. The Roiderer case has been referred to the people's court of the department of justice in Berlin.

However, the arrest of two other Americans—Helen Lyster, of New Rochelle, N. Y., and G. Griffith Johnson, jr., of Washington—in Munich, Germany, is considered by the State Department as a closed incident.

William Phillips, Acting Secretary, said an investigation in Munich of the arrest showed they had unknowingly walked on a forbidden military field with a camera.

6 Chinese Get Delay On Gambling Charges

Gambling charges against six Chinese, arrested Saturday when police raided a building in Washington's Chinatown district, were continued for two weeks by Police Court Judge Isaac R. Hitt yesterday.

Arraigned on counts of setting up a gaming table, Charlie Soo, Chaing Tong and Lee Sing were released under bonds of $2,000 each. Similar charges held Moy Kim, Tom Sing and Lee Wing under $1,000 bonds. The defendants were represented by Leo A. Rover, former District attorney.

White House May Combine Housing Units

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Plans to merge into a single agency all Government units dealing with housing are under consideration at the White House, it was authoritatively reported yesterday.

Existing organizations which would figure in this consolidation program would include the Federal Housing Administration, the Home Owners Loan Corporation, the subsistence homesteads and slum clearance divisions of the Public Works Administration.

Several of the President's advisers were said to have indorsed the merger proposal as likely to spur the still paralyzed construction industry, which has failed to respond satisfactorily to any of a long series of recovery hypodermics. Suggestions for a more compact housing set-up already have gained some support on Capitol Hill.

Benefits Claimed.

Among arguments advanced by proponents of the revamping scheme were that overlapping functions of the existing agencies would be eliminated. Federal spending could be coordinated and opponents of bureaucracy would be appeased.

Mr. Roosevelt probably will divulge his attitude on all phases of the housing program, including possible consolidations, in a message to Congress in January.

It has been apparent at the President's press conferences for several weeks that he has been devoting a great deal of time to housing problems. Only last week he set a precedent by approving a basic maximum 5 per cent interest rate for private capital invested in home mortgages under a drive directed by James A. Moffett, FHA administrator.

He charged usurious rates extracted in many sections of the country slowed up and in some instances prevented building. He insisted people should be educated to understand they can reasonably expect only a 5 per cent return on insured mortgages.

Earlier the President disclosed his recommendations to Congress would include a proposal for a large increase in Federal housing projects, both in rural rehabilitation and urban slum clearance.

Work Under Way.

The FHA in August opened a national home modernization campaign intended to result in a building revival of approximately $1,500,000,000, affecting 13,000,000 homes. The organization last week launched a separate movement to promote new building through cheaper financing. A potential $15,000,000,000 volume of new construction was envisaged.

Slum clearance and low-cost housing allotments of the PWA to date total $150,000,000. Washington received a tentative allotment of $4,300,000, including $500,000 for the new Alley Authority.

Meanwhile, the subsistence homestead division has begun 63 projects, for which almost $18,000,000 of the $50,000,000 available for such experiments has been alloted.

John H. Fahey, HOLC chairman, recently reported his organization has saved 431,702 homes from the auctioneer's flag by loans totaling $1,299,455,459.

2 Billion Loss In Bank Crisis Seen by Jones

4,500,000 Tied Up After Collapse Will Be Paid, Says RFC Head.

(United Press.)

The 1933 bank collapse will cost American depositors $2,000,000,000.

That was the figure set yesterday by Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as the probable loss to thousands of bank depositors whose banks have yet failed to reopen.

Favorable banking news came from other Government banking agencies. Chairman Leo T. Crowley of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation predicted that the Government would complete its rebuilding of the banking structure by July 1, and another agency revealed figures showing bank failures this year at the lowest level in 14 years.

Will Recover $4,500,000.

With nearly $1,000,000,000 of RFC funds already lent to closed banks to make immediate pay-offs to depositors, Chairman Jones estimated that $4,500,000,000 of the $6,500,000,000 in deposits tied up in banks in the March, 1933, holiday ultimately would be recovered. Several months ago he estimated only $4,000,000,000 would be recovered.

Crowley, meanwhile, reported progress in strengthening of the open banks with the aid of another billion dollars of Government money.

The FDIC is rebuilding the banks by raising their capital until it equals one-tenth of the deposits of the banks.

5,550 Institutions Aided.

With the capital bolstered in about 5,500 institutions, Crowley predicted this would be completed when the Government's permanent FDIC program goes into effect July 1, next.

Complete figures on the rate of bank failures so far this year have not yet been compiled, but one high Government official said that they do not exceed 75 and these among the smaller institutions.

Racing Foe Buys Ticket as Evidence And His Nag Wins!

Austin, Tex., Nov. 5 (AP).—Henry C. Kyle, State Representative and foe of horse race gambling, won a horse race bet today. Now he says he is puzzled over what to do with the money.

Seeking to demonstrate that the law was violated within the shadow of the Capitol, he displayed on the floor of the legislature a ticket on Escoba Land, running at Arlington Downs.

He had purchased a $2 ticket, carrying odds of 12 to 1 to place, from a bookie in an office building.

An Alternative.

J. L. Garvin, editor of the London Observer, has long been a distinguished spokesman of moderate conservative opinion in Great Britain. And he only reflects a thought which has occurred to many other moderate minds when he concludes that an Anglo-American naval agreement is necessary in the event that the London conversations fail to keep Japan within a continuing accord.

His opinion, expressed editorially after consultation with both British and American delegates, is that in case no possibility remains of a trilateral agreement "there will have to be an agreement between two, that is, the United States and Great Britain, or in the long run it will be worse for the English-speaking world."

While this is doubtless an effort to influence rather than to reflect either British or American policy, it is the first time that such an alternative to a continuing trilateral agreement has been brought prominently into the foreground of the present discussions. It is a possibility which is beyond the scope of the official exchanges among the delegates at London. Yet it can not be overlooked on either side of the Atlantic. And it should not be overlooked across the Pacific.

Whether a bilateral agreement would ultimately become more than an avoidance of an uncalled-for and wasteful naval race between the two leading sea powers would depend upon circumstances which can not be foreseen. In any event, it is easy to see that bilateral agreement would be better than none. The future implications of such a development would be for Japan to ponder.

On Play Reviewing.

Drama criticism, according to one careful New York critic of the drama, is in special disfavor just now. Quite regularly for several weeks now the critics have been indulging in "fairly consistent negations," much to the consternation of those who, for all sorts of reasons, have a bread-and-butter interest in the stage. These interested persons, perhaps not without reason, are accusing the daily reviewers of "standing between plays and their natural audiences." This brings up the old question: What is the proper function of the first night reviewer?

Mr. Brooks Atkinson, that eminent chronicler, has always insisted that play reviewing "is not a form of the higher criticism; it is a practical form of news reporting." In order to buttress his case, if it needs such support, he dips into a recent compilation on the American theater as seen by its critics, from 1792 to 1934, which the late Montrose J. Moses began and which John Mason Brown completed. He points out that the rancorous critic, who jauntily sails a negative course, sometimes turn out to be as ridiculous as the critic who smiles and says nothing, does not even report.

For instance, the contemporary critic who said that "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is of a dangerous nature and "is not according to good faith in the Constitution," was neither reporting nor criticizing. For, as Mr. Atkinson says, "plays like that are dangerous only when their underlying motives are true." The "critic" who condemned "Mrs. Warren's Profession," saying it could be only expurgated by cutting the whole play out, on the grounds that "you can not have a clean pigsty," was in the same category. Even the sometimes smart William Winter outdid himself when he said Ibsen wrote "flaccid, insipid, tainted, obfuscated, nauseous plays!"

The point is that the play reviewer must first of all report what he sees on the stage. Granted that he is intelligent, wise in the way of the theater, and that he is subservient to no interest but that of his public, then neither his negations nor his affirmations will give his readers any reason to believe that he is "standing between plays and their natural audiences."

Labor's Come-Back.

In an off-year, local elections assume a new importance. This is true in this country today, and it was true last week in London when the Labor Party showed a remarkable resurgence of strength. Its candidates gained more than 500 seats in London boroughs and in other municipalities throughout the country. There is, in this tremendous sweep, a national significance which one does not generally associate with the election of purely local officeholders.

The turnover clearly indicates a new popular confidence in the party which seemed so discredited over three years ago, when Premier Ramsay Macdonald deserted the Labor Party for the national coalition government. Then the party was torn by dissension and repudiated by many of its followers. But the signs universally read in last week's voting are that British Labor is coming back. Inspired by its new-found strength, it will enter the coming national campaign with increased confidence and vitality. Previously this fall Labor captured control of the London County Council and its victories last week have, as one reporter puts it, practically converted Greater London into a Socialist capital.

But victory in important municipalities does not mean that Labor has staged a complete come-back, by any means. The party lacks national leaders. Ramsay Macdonald has lost face entirely. Henderson, Snowden, Lansbury and other spokesmen are old men now, scarcely to be expected again to lead a militant party. In its search for a youthful and vigorous leader, Labor will perhaps push forward Herbert Morrison, former Minister of Transport, who is credited with engineering most of the gains in London. Undoubtedly the municipal triumphs will bring other younger men to the fore, so that by the time the next general election is called the dearth of leadership will be less apparent than seems the case today.

November 6, 1934.

Just as a crowd has a psychology of its own, different from that of the sum of the individuals composing it, so the elections today represent something much more important than the fate of each and all of the candidates involved.

In a confused way the millions of voters who will go to the polls appreciate this. They have shown it not merely by registering in what are unprecedented numbers for an "off-year" contest. In many cases they have also shown their awareness of portentous times by searching patiently for nuggets of gold in the rivers of campaign oratory; by striving conscientiously to decide between the merits of rival ideas rather than those of rival candidates.

That is the real significance of today for the American people—the fact that the voting is getting away from a basis of party and back to a basis of principle; the fact that the electorate is dimly seeking to strengthen constructive national policies regardless of the fate of political machinery. Today, in many constituencies, men will be voted in or out on the basis of what they stand for rather than on the basis of what stands behind them.

It is both the strength and the weakness of the Administration that it has consciously sought to bring about this change. The strength is found in the probability that the New Deal, as symbol of a break with an old, unhappy past, will profit today from its fine moralizations and its sedulous advocacy of a richer life for the average man. The weakness is that the Administration has so far appealed rather to the emotions than to the intelligence of the electorate. Millions will today vote Democratic believing that they vote for a reasoned philosophy of government. Close observers of the Washington scene, knowing that this philosophy is not yet worked out, must wonder whether it will be developed in time to avert a reaction two years hence.

For, as the old-fashioned activities of Messrs. Farley and Hurja have shown, there is as yet little realization in the Administration that a real new deal demands high-grade political as well as careful economic planning. Plenty of ardent theorists have been called in for the latter purpose. But for political strategy the advice of Tammany Hall rather than of the universities is sought. The concern of the Postmaster General with patronage and relief expenditures provides only two of many indications that the Administration is much more anxious for reform in the financial and economic than in the political field.

Yet none who have given any consideration to the sweep of history will deny that economic change determines political change. To concentrate on the desirability of the former while ignoring the necessity of the latter is to court disaster. It is good to control the security exchanges. But a policy which sandbags Wall street while salvaging ward heelers is contributing to the progress of demagoguery, not that of democracy.

All this, albeit somewhat vaguely, is understood by most of those who are going to the polls today. They will register not so much their preference for individual politicians as their hope that the New Deal is what it claims to be, or their fear that it can never achieve its promise. At the moment, obviously, the hopes rather than the fears are dominant.

They will not remain so unless the Administration can from now on show that it is interested in political as well as economic progress. The two are indivisible. No government can successfully combine reaction in one with rapid evolution in the other. To attempt to do so is merely to show that it is the power rather than the responsibility of office which is taken seriously.

"Sorry I'm Early!"

Another "first" in aviation has been achieved. The eastward crossing of the Pacific, by Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, will rank in aviation history with Lindbergh's transatlantic hop and Wiley Post's solo around the world.

Much air has been cut since Lindbergh's epic, and what was then astounding, while not yet commonplace, has become so nearly the latter that whenever it is achieved we take it more or less for granted.

To cross the Pacific, from Melbourne, Australia, to Oakland, Calif., a distance of 7,365 miles, in 51 hours and 49 minutes of actual flying time, is an amazing accomplishment. But it occasioned hardly any comment yesterday as the world went about its business. Elections and football were in the air, and the Pacific is a long way off.

Soon long-distance flying promises to be so common that the arrival of a heavy passenger plane from Melbourne at a local airport will cause no more conversation than the arrival of an ocean liner in New York does today. And this will be true whether or not Washington gets a field adapted to the flying of today rather than that of 1914.

One of the remarkable features of the depression is the spirit of the aviators. They have achieved and planned greater achievements, laid out new routes and broken old records, regardless of the tribulations of the earth-bound. Their heads in the clouds, they have seen far horizons, and passed them.

Their spirit has been that of Kingsford-Smith. Hopping from his plane at the end of the long flight he said, "Sorry I'm early." Just like that!

Cutting Milk Costs.

When Commissioner Allen launched his campaign to lower the cost of milk for families on relief rolls, he announced that it was his purpose to increase milk consumption, not to release funds for other kinds of expenditures. The Commissioner is now convinced that a mere reduction in milk prices will not produce the desired results. Consequently, he is preparing to carry out his tentative plan for distributing milk tickets to relief families.

Although there are many objections to the principle of relief "in kind," there are strong arguments in favor of making an exception to the rule in case of milk, and possibly some other necessaries. The demonstrated disinclination of the unemployed to take advantage of the recent reductions in milk prices by making larger purchases will hardly be overcome by a further reduction.

Moreover, there is no guarantee that the amounts saved on the milk bill will not be dissipated through unwise spending. Commissioner Allen hints, indeed, that a study of the expenditures of families on relief rolls have brought unpleasant revelations which may necessitate much closer supervision of relief expenditures. An extension of the system of payments in kind may, therefore, be in prospect, especially if efforts are made to secure special price concessions from dealers in other necessaries of life.

Moreover, the problem of milk prices concerns not only relief families, but many others who are still self-supporting. In Commissioner Allen's opinion, a reduction of 2 cents in the standard price of milk would increase consumption by many families close to the relief border line. Whether this group of underprivileged families would respond any more enthusiastically than the destitute to the lure of lower prices is, of course, open to question. Taking the population as a whole, however, it is possible that consumption might be considerably increased.

At any rate, the discrepancy between the prices charged for milk in Baltimore and in the District is a proper subject for investigation to determine how far such a differential is justified. Commissioner Allen has been successful in obtaining substantial concessions in prices for relief milk. He has a special and legitimate interest in seeing that other poor families shall be assisted to keep off relief rolls by reducing the cost of such necessaries as milk to the lowest level which fair dealing with producers and distributors will permit.

Not Empty Promises.

Skeptics who asserted that the bankers' pledges of cooperation with the Administration were only empty promises may revise their opinions after reading the statement of the retiring chairman of the A. B. A.'s committee on Federal legislation—Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank.

In his official report Mr. Fleming, now first vice president of the A. B. A., makes a strong and unqualified appeal to the banks of the country to assist the housing program of the Government to the limit of their ability. He points out that the housing act has not created a Government agency in competition with the banks. Instead, private institutions are relied upon to make housing loans, with Government guarantees substituted for indorsements and collateral that would otherwise be required.

Whatever views one may hold concerning the wisdom of Government guarantees of this sort, as a general policy, they undoubtedly enable banks to make loans more freely to worthy borrowers who would have been regarded as acceptable risks in normal times. Cooperation, therefore, in financing the housing program does not necessarily entail any sacrifice of sound banking principles, but merely a willingness to utilize new facilities that encourage rational loan expansion.

In this field, as well as in other lines of activity, banking cooperation to aid recovery is urged in the interest of the banks themselves. Mr. Fleming emphasizes particularly the importance of taking a broad national viewpoint when passing judgment upon existing banking laws and proposed revisions. Whenever suggested legislation has not been "in the best public interest," he says, the A. B. A. has made vigorous efforts to protect the interests of both the public and the banks against innovations. But it has simultaneously endeavored to avoid being obstructionist in its attitude or arbitrary in its judgments.

Criticism of this sort, accompanied by constructive suggestions, is not only helpful. It also provides the only solid foundation upon which to base the kind of cooperation that is capable of benefitting the country and the banks, too.

Of Infinitive Importance.

(From the Boston Transcript.)

We suppose that the champions of the split infinitive will point with glee to an expression in the New York Times leader of Monday. The editorial writer remarked that "the White House hastened flatly to deny" that the Administration was indorsing the candidacy of Upton Sinclair in California. The cursory reader gets the idea that the White House is hastening somewhere on flat feet—decidedly an ungainly, undignified gait to attribute to a speeding White House. However, as a friend of the unmutilated infinitive, in season and out, the Transcript would be reluctant to admit that "the White House hastened to flatly deny the charge" is much better either in sound or sense. The Transcript's own notion is that "the White House hastened to deny flatly" and so on conveys exactly the intended meaning and leaves the unsplit infinitive still in its august integrity, a mighty bulwark against assault.

No Truce For Him.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Those businessmen who are attempting to compromise with the President in an effort to hasten recovery can not be said to be either practical or patriotic. If they were practical, they would see that they can not depend on the promises of an Administration with an unenviable record of broken promises.

Since March 4, 1933, there has been a persistent effort by the New Dealers to fasten on the United States a bureaucratic system of "social management" crossed with Tammany politics that disregards not only our constitutional rights and liberty but also economic laws, sound government and common honesty. American patriots, regardless of party, have determinedly and fearlessly assailed those seeking to perpetuate themselves in power at the people's expense.

Because the enemy wishes to compromise, to sign an armistice until after election, meanwhile planning to carry out its program for the next two years at least, is no reason for letting up in this fight. The American people can be emancipated from this menace by nothing less than victory. Their will must be imposed on the Administration from now on.

In the light of history, it is apparent that no World War armistice should have been signed before complete victory. So, until the blighting power of the New Deal is entirely broken, we must adopt as our figurative slogan "On to Berlin!" and carry on.

Fire And Smoke.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You recently carried an editorial commenting on the speech to St. Andrew's University a few days ago of Gen. Jan Christian Smuts, who lamented the spiritual decadence of some nations today that is resulting in the tyranny of dictatorships.

Bolshevism in Russia is not a cause; it is an effect; it is not a fire; it is the smoke.

Effect can not always be successfully combated; the cure lies in removing the cause. Armament rivalries, imperialistic dreams and plots of crowned heads to expand their influence and power in selfish disregard of the best interest of the masses of the people, brought on the World War.

The powers that were in command determined on a course of deflation. This was to increase the value of wealth already accumulated, reduce the cost of industry's operation—a large part of which were wages and salaries of employes—and to perpetuate the place of dominating political and financial powers of the United States in Wall street.

Rightly you say that if we are "to preserve that which is best in Western civilization, we must correct economic and political ills."

If one starts a fire, there is bound to be smoke. One can't sow seeds without reaping the harvest. Lament the "trend of the times" all you want to, but such lament is merely fighting the tide with a whisk broom.

"Forward Together."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is not often that I am privileged to see The Washington Post, though I am well aware of its distinguished reputation.

By chance I picked up your issue of October 30 and was impressed by the editorial captioned "Going Forward Together." It was not only well written, but the desirability of church union was cogently emphasized, exhibiting insight into the essential problem of organized religion as it confronts present-day forces of antireligion or irreligion.

Two Celebrations.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please correct the mistake made in The Post on October 31 concerning the report that the Filipinos in Washington celebrated Rizal Day on the evening of October 30, on which occasion Judge Charles S. Lobingier was the guest of honor. Instead, the Filipinos celebrated Philippine Flag Day, under the preparation of the Filipino Club.

However, Judge Charles S. Lobingier, former legal adviser to the Philippine government, our principal speaker of the night, evidently unprepared to speak of the Filipino flag, chose for his subject the life of Jose Rizal. His research concerning the interesting life of the Filipino hero and martyr was indeed very commendable, and all those who heard his clear, rounded voice will long remember him.

For the sake of clarification, let me say that the Filipinos everywhere will celebrate Rizal Day on December 30, the date when Jose Rizal willingly died for his beloved Philippines and for his downtrodden countrymen.

"An Oppressed Minority."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was astonished to see in The Post of October 31 that there is a man who has enough courage to say something in regard to "An Oppressed Minority."

This iniquity is going on in the Dodecanese on a much larger scale. In 12 Greek islands, with a purely Greek population, Greek language is forbidden, Greek schools are closed and no Greek signs are allowed on the shops of Greek merchants. Military service is compulsory, and in case of war they will have to fight on the side of their oppressor.

When we think that Rome's greatest men came to study Greek and especially rhetoric on the island of Rhodes; that Cos in the native island of Hippocrates, the father of medicine; that each one of these islands is closely connected with Greek mythology, and that Greek language has never ceased to be spoken there, we must consider this state of affairs as the most cruel irony of fate.

Is it not a crime to see the wonderful relics that these people cherish most of all—their language, their traditions, their very soul—smothered today by the iron grip of a foreign power without a voice being raised in protest or in pity, in the whole wide world—a world that has so generously profited by this inheritance?

Thinks It Would Help.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish, through your impartial newspaper, to compliment the American Legion and the V. F. W. for their splendid stand recently taken at their national conventions in favor of the immediate cash payment of the veterans' bonus. I think it will be a good idea to pay off these veterans at once in order to promote prosperity and to take millions off the National charity rolls.

JOHN ALFERI.
Los Angeles, Calif.

"Park Here!"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The attention of the authorities should be called to conditions in the operation of many automobile parking lots, especially the small ones in the downtown section.

I have noticed that between 9:20 and 9:30 a. m., cars are moved from the parking lot and parked in all available space in the streets. As fast as the cars are called for, an attendant of the parking lot has another car ready to place in the space vacated.

On the alley side of many lots, cars are lined up with 3 to 6 feet projecting into the alley. They interfere with the movement of business cars that are compelled to use the alley.

Investigation of these conditions should be made and regulations drawn that would impel parking lots to restrict their operations to their own property and give other lines of business a chance.

SOCRATES.

Better Off?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt once stated that Government employes were better off, as a group, than most others in the United States. Bearing this in mind, it is significant that Government employes are now earning less compensation than they received in the very worst days of the Hoover Administration. If Government employes are better off than most, then the entire country is very much worse off than it was at the height (or depth) of the Hoover era, and President Roosevelt has just stated that, in effect, we shall not come up to the Hoover depression level until July of next year.

When Does It Come?

Dictionary definitions of Indian summer are open to the objection that the Indianapolis News makes to one of the most recent; they are somewhat vague. If that is true it is because the living definition of Indian summer, from which the dictionary definition is derived, is often annoyingly vague. Most of the dictionaries start by calling Indian summer a period of such and such characteristics, whereas a human being wholly unacquainted with an unabridged dictionary often needs but a single warm, dry day late in the fall to set him talking about Indian summer. Properly speaking, the open season for Indian summer ought to lie between the end of September and the middle of November, for what comes earlier than the first of October can be called a continuation of summer and what comes after mid-November can be called an open winter.

The British have a convenient habit of applying a different name to unseasonably warm weather, according to whether it falls in September, October or November, whereas American speech is limited to the one descriptive term. But if the vocabulary is narrower, so is the space for an unseasonable season. Most of the dictionaries agree on dry, warm and mild weather late in the fall, with a hazy atmosphere, as the condition precedent to the existence of Indian summer, but the American is not so exacting as the lexicographers; he will waive the hazy atmosphere; fail to insist on the mildness of the weather. In fact, one warm surge of the sun from behind a cloud on a fall day often is enough to set him talking about a favorite season. Enjoyment of Indian summer is so largely psychic that some superficial inconsistencies in the actual weather surely can be overlooked by a man of pure heart and good spirit.

"Cream and Sugar, Sir?"

Post Office, Tuesday.

"THE Great American Mystery, it still baffles."

Our French friend was speaking. He is on his first visit to the United States.

"It is not your so marvelous skyscrapers," said he. "I understand their construction—there I both admire and sympathize. Nor is your national attitude vis-a-vis the war debts and the gold standard: There, though I can not agree or sympathize, I at least understand.

* * *

We ourselves have always felt that the widest chasm between an American and a Frenchman was the coffee chasm—far wider than the difference in language, for instance. However, we had never before been able to secure the views upon it of a 100 per cent Frenchman who had any experience on the American side of the gulch. All the Frenchmen with whom we had discussed it were either Frenchmen who had never drunk a cup of American coffee at its native font, or else Frenchmen in the diplomatic service who were too polite to reveal their genuine feelings.

Therefore, we let this undiplomatic Gaul run on.

* * *

"You drink cream and sugar in your coffee," he pursued. "At least, you do so unless it is after-dinner coffee—and enough often you do so then.

"Only today I lunch at one of your amusing pharmacies and I think how droll it is to sell food and poison in the same shop. Then I find the coffee rightly belongs there. For I ask a cup of coffee, and, behold, the so charming girl behind the counter hands me a cup of coffee with cream in it!

* * *

"Sugar in coffee—yes," continued our French friend. "That is reasonable. That we do in France. When one asks for a glass of coffee at a French cafe, my faith, in order not to have it served with sugar, one must speak quickly! It is a medicinal custom. It is also an economic custom. Sugar makes coffee readily digested. Also hot coffee poured into a glass, it is likely to crack the glass unless one first puts some sugar there.

"But cream?" Our Frenchman threw wide his arms. "Cream in coffee," said he, "is poison. It is the negation of science and the quintessence of extravagance."

* * *

We ventured to point out that, from Le Havre to Marseilles, it was virtually impossible to bully or bribe a waiter out of the habit of serving "breakfast coffee" over half of which is milk.

"Ah, yes," the traveler serenely explained, "at breakfast! At breakfast, one does not drink coffee; one drinks cafe-au-lait. Surely, you will not attempt to maintain that milk is more economic than cream. Also, I tell you that milk in breakfast coffee is good hygiene."

We asked: "If cream added to coffee makes a poison, why is milk in coffee good for you?"

The response was not entirely satisfactory: "Of why it is so I am ignorant. Yet that it is so, that goes without saying."

"Don't you Frenchmen put something else in coffee?"

"But, yes; I have already told—in black coffee, sugar."

We said we didn't mean that.

"What then?" he inquired. "Sometimes, it is true, a little cognac in the black after-dinner."

"Don't you put chicory in coffee?"

* * *

He was no more embarrassed than if we had asked him the contents of a French cigarette. He said:

"In breakfast coffee? Of a verity. And therein, my friend, reposes the superiority of French breakfast coffee over that of all other nations."

He didn't defend this adulteration, which we Americans regard as a French scandal second only to the Stavisky swindles. He bragged of it. Chicory, he said, gave the right aroma to breakfast coffee. The sense of smell and the sense of taste were, he said, closely and delicately allied. And he said the mixture of chicory with coffee was a science—nay, an art—in comparison wherewith ordinary coffee-blending remained as crude as much of the so-called whisky-blending now prevalent in the United States.

"My friend," he whispered, "you have been most kind to me in the showing to me of Washington. Now I make you a return. I give you the secret of successfully blending chicory with coffee. It is this: According to the idiosyncracies of the nose of the drinker, insert into the coffee any amount of chicory up to one quarter of the amount of the coffee. But never—never in any circumstances whatever—insert more than one quarter."

* * *

There is what our French friend told us. What we didn't tell him was an incident related to us by a German friend. And that was this:

"Early in the World War, and very early one morning, our company captured a French village. Our captain sent for the mayor and ordered 100 kilos of chicory. The mayor said he didn't think there was that much in the place, but he'd try to get it—and he succeeded. Then the captain told him to bring 50 kilos more. The mayor protested it was impossible—but he finally collected 46 kilos. He said he was desolated, but this included the last grain procurable.

"'Are you quite sure?' asked the captain.

"'I pledge you my honor,' said the mayor. 'I pledge you my life.'

"'All right,' said the captain. 'In that case, you may now bring me a cup of coffee.'"

Unfair Trade Charges Split Canadian Party

By T. W. L. MacDermot
(Special Correspondent of The Post).

THE typhoon which has struck the Canadian political world during the last week has startled many. In its ultimate results it still presents the observer with a first class conundrum. It has led already to the resignation of the Minister of Trade and Commerce, Hon. H. H. Stevens, to an exchange of correspondence between him and the Prime Minister, whose mordant phrases will not easily be allowed to die, and to the appearances of serious divisions in the Conservative Party all over the country.

As one looks back over certain events of the year, it is possible to see how the storm gradually worked up from small beginnings and by a very understandable sequence reached its climax last Thursday and Friday when, in a short 24 hours, the ministerial relations of Mr. Stevens with the party of which he has been a member for 25 years were ended.

The story is briefly as follows: Last January Mr. R. B. Bennett, the prime minister, was unable to fulfil a speaking engagement in Toronto, and asked Mr. Stevens to take his place. Mr. Stevens did, and in his subsequent remarks to the National Shoe Association, on the basis of information that had recently reached him, launched a flaming attack on "unfair and unethical competition," on mass buying by chain and department stores with its damaging effects to the small shop, and on sweated labor in the clothing industry. No firms were specified, but leading figures in the spheres of business covered by Mr. Stevens' words rebutted his charges with fervor.

As the session went on, a parliamentary committee was set up with Mr. Stevens as chairman, to investigate the alleged malpractices. In the evidence that was adduced, a large volume of testimony was given to cases of high salaries and low wages in certain quarters of Canadian industry. The hearings were not completed when Parliament ended, and the committee was turned into a royal commission to carry on the work and to report to Parliament in due course.

• • • •

THEN, on July 28, there appeared in the newspapers, first extracts, then almost complete reproductions of a mimeographed "pamphlet" or small book containing a speech made by Mr. Stevens to a private "Parliamentary study club." It contained, in language more unguarded and more icily explicit than is usual, not only a great many more charges of flagrant dishonesty against a great many more named companies and nationally-known commercial figures, but also a burning declaration of Mr. Stevens' inflexible determination not to rest until these unspeakable conditions of exploitation were cleaned up.

When Mr. Bennett got word of the pamphlet, he at once telephoned Mr. Stevens, then at Winnipeg, en route to British Columbia, and was informed that the pamphlet was not intended for circulation. The prime minister then suppressed any further distribution of the document, but was unable to recall all the copies. It was duly given wide publicity when various newspapers plucked up their courage to do so.

A long interval followed. The prime minister and Mr. Stevens did not meet to discuss the matter. But it came up before the Cabinet on October 25. During the day Mr. Stevens decided to resign, and the following day a letter containing his decision was handed to the prime minister. In it, Mr. Stevens practically confined himself to attaching a copy of a letter of resignation he had offered in January after the original speech. He expressed the view that Mr. Bennett's stand was now based on much the same ground—namely, "representations made to you by Mr. Burton of the Simpson Company"—as he had taken in January on "the representations of the T. Eaton Company." The Simpson and Eaton companies are two of the largest department stores in Canada.

IN the earlier letter Mr. Stevens had reviewed the events of January, described some of the cases of "unfair" and "unethical" practices he had had in mind, and expressed his conviction that so acute was "the suffering of both workers and employes in several branches of industry" that "the federal Parliament must take cognizance of it."

The Prime Minister accepted the resignation. He reviewed the circumstances which led to this. He said that after talking over Mr. Stevens' January resignation with him privately, it had been withdrawn, and then he himself had proposed the resolution in the House of Commons that led to the creation of the committee. From the time of its appointment, Mr. Bennett added, "The committee had an absolutely free hand, and no effort of any kind, shape or form was made to in any way limit or restrict its activities," except to point out once or twice the constitutional difficulties that might obstruct certain measures.

Then came the phamphlet. In answer to Mr. Stevens' statement that it was not meant for circulation, Mr. Bennett pointed out that it refers to "readers" not "hearers." It was, he said, suppressed for two reasons: (1), that it as "fundamentally unsound" for the chairman of a royal commission to discuss the committee's proceedings before the evidence was completed: (2), representation had been made to him that statements contained in the paniphlet "were at variance with the evidence given before the committee, and were without any basis in fact." Such statements were injurious to the individuals concerned, to Mr. Stevens, and to the work of the commission.

The Prime Minister repeated that the statements with respect to several Canadian enterprises and individuals were untrue in whole or in part. Mr. Stevens had been asked to state his views in face of these complaints, to express regret for any misstatements he had made, and to withdraw such statements.

Mr. Bennett added that Mr. Stevens could continue as a private member of the committee and indicated the intention of the Government to carry the investigation to a conclusion and, by every proper method, to get all material evidence available.

• • • •

ON the following Tuesday Mr. Stevens replied to Mr. Bennett in a long letter, refusing to apologize or withdraw, and accusing him of making untrue statements about the support given to Mr. Stevens by his colleagues in the Government. He had prized his liberty of action, he said, and his sense of duty more than the mere retention of office. His public utterances, he said, had been made to inform the people of Canada "of grave social and economic wrongs." It was, he added, for the "inarticulate sufferers" that he had been striving "with the hope that remedial measures might be found."

Mr. Bennett accepted the letter briefly, and there the correspondence stands. The Commission, under a new chairman, has resumed its work, and no doubt will make its report in due course. But the detonations of the debate continue. The affair has, of course, numerous party and personal angles which are not easy perhaps to assess or disentangle. In any case many hope that this feature of it will be kept at a minimum. The significant aspect is the effect on the public and on political objectives and principles brought about by the respective positions of the two protagonists.

The Prime Minister has based his stand on, first, the irregular conduct of the chairman of a commission in indicating judgment on a case still sub judice, and, secondly, the necessity for cabinet solidarity and responsibility in the announcement or discussion of policy by a minister of the crown. He also insisted on the ethical question raised over the accuracy of Mr. Stevens' pamphlet.

Mr. Stevens' attitude is quite different. In brief, it is that he is satisfied that grave conditions of social injustice prevail in certain parts of Canadian economic life,—so grave and so pitiable that the importance of removing them transcends all other questions. And to that task he is going to bend all his energies.

It is no exaggeration to say that quite apart from the effects on the Liberal or C. C. F. (Socialist) parties, this parallelism of views—because they do not meet each other—is having the most convulsing consequences on the Conservative party. It has already suffered heavy blows in provincial elections. It is coming to the end of its legal term of office, and has a large body of achievement behind it. But now it has to absorb this.

Powerful Conservative papers like the Montreal "Gazette and Star" stand by Mr. Bennett,—others by Mr. Stevens. Wires of endorsement for the latter are coming in from organized bodies of all sorts; for example, the Retail Association of Calgary, Mr. Bennett's own city. The president of a Junior Conservative Association in Toronto has resigned because he disapproved of Mr. Stevens' treatment. Another conservative "speaks" of "drastic remedies" which will have to be applied to the party.

• • • •

THE AIR is now filled with the fiery particles of speculation, hope and resentment, and for the partisan there is scope for all these. But aside from partisan considerations, which are ends in themselves, the results seem to be clear. The two leading figures in a governing party can not go to the mat in a violent public correspondence without serious reverberations for the party. Particularly is this so when they each take their stand on such deep-rooted principles.

Premier Bennett has a high sense of public responsibility and his present job is to govern, to hold his ministry intact, and to do so by constitutional means. He has acted on this line, but perhaps at great cost for his party. For Mr. Bennett's is not the popular line.

That belongs to Mr. Stevens, who also with a strong sense of public duty, has conceived it as his duty to run up the flag of social justice and stake his political future on its vindication. The choice, therefore, seems to be between the champion of constitutional correctitude and the champion of social justice, and because the choice does not happen to be this at all, it seems to matter very little.

It really is not nearly as simple as this, because in the midst of public ideals and a sense of duty, there is political expedience and personal temperament. But the public tends to simplify, and it is fairly clear how it has sided in this quarrel. For the time being Mr. Stevens has the floor.

"Which is Mrs. Whittington, but don't point!"

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

WHEN a couple of the newspaper boys, including this one, wrote that Mr. Roosevelt, in view of the activity of the Democratic national committee, had apparently withdrawn his earlier pat of Messrs. La Follette and Cutting, the President promptly invited the former to dinner at the White House. He is not to come until after the election, of course, but in the mechanics of politics the actual eating of the meal is not important. What is important is that the invitation was extended.

BARGERON

This is what was carried in the Wisconsin press, and throughout the State the voters knew that the Senator stood well in Mr. Roosevelt's affections. The Democratic senatorial nominee in that State has not been extended any invitation to dine, so the implication is plain that Senator La Follette stands in better than he.

Manifestly we were wrong in our contention about the Wisconsin Senator which, however, thickens the plot rather than weakens it.

• • • •

The truth is that it would take more than a White House dinner invitation to offset the fact that the Democrats are trying to get Cutting's scalp. Some of the prognosticators believe they have succeeded in getting it. The national committee has cooperated in every way posible. National speakers, including the Democratic leader, Senator Robinson, have been sent into the State against Cutting. No stone has been left unturned to bring about his defeat.

Why is it then that Mr. Roosevelt, after giving both LaFollette and Cutting an earlier pat on the back, should withdraw it from one and leave it on the other? They are both of the same Progressive mold. Their votes 99 times out of 100 are alike. They speak the same voice, sing the same songs.

Cutting, it is true, led the fight against the Administration on the economy bill, but LaFollette went right along with him as did Norris and the rest of the Progressives.

On the face of things it is impossible to see why Mr. Roosevelt should want LaFollette reelected and Cutting defeated.

• • • •

As a matter of fact, Mr. Roosevelt was presumably so appreciative of the New Mexico Senator's support of him in 1932 that he is understood to have offered the latter the post of Secretary of Interior in his Cabinet. The Senator's refusal of the post really changed our destinies or did something like that, because it was then that we got Mr. Ickes. And everybody will agree the country has never been the same since we got him.

Looking back, in fact, it is apparent that some super force must watch over us and take care of us. Because, suppose Mr. Cutting had taken the job and we had not got Mr. Ickes?

But I am digressing. One would think that certainly if Mr. Roosevelt wanted the Progressive LaFollette returned to office he would also want reelected the man in whom he had enough confidence to offer a place in his official family.

• • • •

The answer to the riddle lies in the identity of the Democratic senatorial candidate in Wisconsin. It's Mr. Callahan, a warm Al Smith supporter, who, in fact, held as much of his delegation as he could against Mr. Roosevelt at Chicago in 1932.

He is the Democratic candidate in Wisconsin, so Mr. Roosevelt would like to see LaFollette win because he is a Progressive. In New Mexico the Democratic candidate against Cutting is Mr. Chavez, who did nothing like Mr. Callahan did at Chicago in 1932. So his election is desired—because he is a Democrat.

Idealism doesn't seem to figure in the New Deal's plans so much as vindictiveness:

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

FELIX is Latin for "happy." And you would say Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy was born to be happy—his parents loving and protective, his father immensely wealthy, he himself an assured musical genius at 12, when he played the piano for Goethe and had the first citizen of the age almost weeping with admiration.

But Mendelssohn, like everyone else born under the moon, had his ups and downs. It is, I think, from the sure delineation of these moods, of this essential humanity, that Schima Kaufman's biography—"Mendelssohn: 'A Second Elijah'" (Crowell, $3.50)—gains its brilliance. Here is our most thorough life of Mendelssohn, documented, studied, provided with a chronology, a bibliography, and a full list of Mendelssohn's musical works, and thus presumably acceptable to scholars. And yet here is a swift and anecdotal story to hold the plain reader, with action, drama, and insight on every page. That Mr. Kaufman is a well-known violinist in the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra should give his book a professional hearing. But further, Mr. Kaufman can write with grace and zest.

Germany a 100 years ago was strikingly similar to Germany today. Jews were only less severely persecuted. When young Mendelssohn could no longer endure the jibes at the musical academy, his parents had him baptized. They themselves recanted, and added the name Bartholdy to differentiate themselves from other Mendelssohns. But even then, Felix had to fight his way. Much of this resistance, more unconscious than not, was against his father. Even as a grown young man and an accepted figure in music, Felix could not pay amorous homage to the great cantatrice, Malibran, without eyeing his father across the drawing room to see how the elder Mendelssohn was taking it. And later in life, Felix had to wage a long battle with the powers in Berlin, musical and political, to gain recognition.

You will like the book best, perhaps, for its lively conversations and anecdotes. Here is Mendelssohn calling on Sir Walter Scott and finding the great man disappointing (but the Scotch scenery and air stayed in Mendelssohn, to come out in "Isles of Fingal" and "Scotch Symphony"). Here is Mendelssohn talking with Heine (half "leering and derisive," half "the tearful trifler"); paying compliments to Chopin and grateful for them in return; disgusted with the way Rossini drank Rhine wine; falling head over heels in love; playing for Queen Victoria and Prince Albert (it was Albert who called him the "second Elijah"). And when this volatile, gay, and harassed man died, it was almost literally of a broken heart—leaving us some of the most sheerly lovely music ever written.

In the above book, Heinrich Heine does not put his best foot forward. It takes the sympathetic, rather solid writing of Antonina Valentin to set him in proportion in the pages of "Poet in Exile: the Life of Heinrich Heine" (Viking, $3).

Mme. Valentin, a Pole, fell in love with Heine's verses at the age of 11. She grew up to become a political writer and biographer of Stresemann, but she never forgot her idol. Now, with vast care, she shows us a man we know best as a lyric poet, but whose social passion and savage lucidity made him one of the prime critics of the time. Mme. Valentin wrote the book before Hitler came in power. Yet you will find many parallels and prophecies. Germany is merely repeating itself—it needs another Heine in these days.

• • • •

Biographies of Edison appear annually. The latest—"Edison: His Life, His Work, His Genius" (Bobbs Merrill, $3.50), by William Adams Simonds, is distinguished for its detail, particularly in explaining the inventions themselves. Mr. Simonds corrects many points in previous biographies, but adds no especially fresh interpretation. Still, if Edison's life is new to you, you will find this book holds everything you could want to know. I hadn't heard before of the man who came up to Edison, then in his eightieth year, and asked about the laboratory's organization and methods.

"Organization?" replied the great inventor. "Hell! I'm the organization!"

Nine years dead, Sun Yat-Sen is already so decidedly an idol in China that Lyon Sharman had great difficulty in getting reports of the man himself. "Sun Yat-Sen: His Life and Its Meaning" (John Day, $3.50) is thus a bit remote and scholarly. But if the Kuomintang is only an exotic name to you, and the Chinese Republic a subject not entirely at your fingertips, you will have much to learn in this able, critical study of the man who has affected more lives than any other leader in recent times. Mr. Sharman spent his childhood in China and loves it with a passion—but his reverence for the great revolutionary does not mar the justness of his estimate. The book is solid reading, but quite worth your attention.

• • • •

Nothing fascinates American readers like a crowned head. But it is not mere glamour which makes "The Revolutionary Emperor" (Ballou, $3.50) so interesting. For Saul K. Padover, a novelist and teacher of history at the University of California, takes for his subject the Emperor Joseph II of Austria and the Holy Roman Empire—an enlightened despot of the eighteenth century who forsook the interests of the aristocrats and tried to aid the masses. A hundred and fifty years ago it was in vain.

Bertita Harding, in "Phantom Crown" (Bobbs-Merrill, $3.50), recites the grandoise and pathetic tale of Maximilian and Carlota, figureheads of Napoleon III's illstarred attempt to found an empire in Mexico. Carlota died only seven years ago, and now the full story is told for the first time, charmingly, by this Hungarian woman who grew up in the shadow of Maximilian's court.

Studded with royal names and personalities is Marie of Roumania's "The Story of My Life" (Scribner, $4). You can revel, if you like, in hundreds of mild and sweetish anecdotes about almost every crowned and de-crowned head in Europe. But I don't recommend it to any save regina-philes.

Two Novels

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

THE sudden death of the novelist Archibald Marshall, which took place at his own beloved Cambridge in England some weeks ago, was a loss to the world of letters and a personal grief to me, as he was my intimate friend.

Naturally enough, I have been thinking of the long list of his original novels—typically English novels that dealt with scenes in country and town life in Great Britain; and apart from the novels in the Clinton series, I am inclined to think that the best two are "Exton Manor" and "The Greatest of These." Those of my readers who enjoy a good story well told, with attractive characters and entertaining conversation, will have a thoroughly good time if they will read or reread these two books.

If I believed in the transmigration of souls, I should believe that the soul of Dickens had at birth entered William DeMorgan (author of "Joseph Vance") and that the soul of Anthony Trollope had entered Archibald Marshall. Mr. Marshall of course was quite aware of his mental kinship to Trollope, for in a preface to an American edition of "Exton Manor," he said he had tried to follow not only Trollope, "but the whole body of English novelists of his date, who introduced you to a large number of people, and left you with the feeling that you knew them all intimately, and would have found yourself welcome in their society. That particular note of intimacy seems to be lacking in the fiction of the present day, and I should like to have it back."

"Exton Manor" is an accurate picture of English life in a small town, where the good people are not heroes and the bad people are not villains. The good people are cultivated, considerate, and charming; the bad people are self-centered, which means they are bores. You become deeply interested in the story, because the people are real; some of them you like immensely, others you detest. But if you want to know life in a small British town, this is the book to read.

"The Greatest of These" is perhaps even more interesting that "Exton Manor," and it is certainly more important; for it is based on a truly great theme. The moment you have finished reading the first chapter, you are conscious that you have in your hands a masterpiece. Every leading character in the book appears in this first chapter and there is a real plot; a real backbone to the story. Furthermore, there is a spiritual quality to this novel, which, while it does not in the least lessen one's absorption in the plot, makes one remember the book and (if one has the right point of view) receive lasting profit. Two points of view, represented by two persons, are brought together by charity, by sympathy, by understanding.

The Once Over

Extra! Scientists Report on Football Drinking.

Report of examinations and inquiries made by Dr. K. Primrose Heffelpotter and Dr. Gregory Noggin, eminent scientists, after exhaustive research into the question: "Why does drinking at college football games approach the proportions of a Bacchanalian orgy?"

• • • •

Case No. 524 (undergraduate)—Says he can't figure it out himself, except that it seems the thing to do. Can go to baseball, tennis, basketball games, etc., without a thought of becoming intoxicated during the contests, but finds it impossible to survive first period of a gridiron classic without a "brannigan." Appears otherwise intelligent and normal.

• • • •

Case 1,176 (out of college about three years)—Found under a tree outside a football stadium several hours after game; claims he is extremely shy and can not stand rendering himself a conspicuously outstanding figure at football games by being stone sober and in no way overstimulated. Drinks very little elsewhere.

• • • •

Case 665 (noncollege man)—We submit his own theory as submitted in Turkish bath two days after game: "It's like this: I can follow a baseball game or any other sport and know what's going on. But football is so different. I never know what is taking place on the field because of the many new rules, so I figure I have to be a little stupified to get the illusion of enjoyment. And it enables me to cheer at all times without knowing why." Case quite baffling and subject to further study.

• • • •

Case 008 (girl of 20)—Considers it extremely disgraceful to drink out of a bottle at a house party, dinner, reception or dance, but thinks it in good taste at college football games. Says: "It just makes the football game seem a little less complicated than otherwise."

• • • •

Case 337 (very old grad)—We give his explanation: "I used to think I swigged liquor at a football contest because of the cold weather, but that can't be it. The weather during the past 10 or 12 seasons has been almost humid." Case for a psychoanalyst.

What Do They Mean, New?

Russian scientists have invented a false heart. It is a pump with an electric motor and gears. That kind of heart is northing new. We know people who have never had any other kind and who have thought only of conserving on the electricity, at that.

G. O. P. Defaults Help New Deal Vote Today

Republican Opposition More Helpless Than Ever Before in Party History.

By Elliott Thurston.

IN analyzing the victory which the New Deal, by all the signs, is bound to score in today's elections, the extraordinary helplessness of the opposition can not be overlooked. Never before in its 70-odd years of existence has the Republican Party been so divided and confused, so lacking in anything remotely resembling a national unity of policy and purpose. It has never been so impoverished in ideas and in money.

While a good many Republicans are complaining that the party lacks brains and leadership, the fact is that its best minds remain or are supposed to be too unpopular to be effective in leadership even if they agreed upon a policy. The cause of their ineffectiveness lies deeper. It arises in large measure from the impossibility of assessing the meaning of the New Deal.

If the New Deal were static, if it had a fixed policy, instead of a changing one, opposition would have some basis on which to found a case. But it has been true all along that President Roosevelt's experimental method confounds the critics. If a policy proves unpopular the New Deal is in a position where it can promptly discard that policy. Thus the Agriculture Administration is able to disavow scarcity programs which have proved unwise and unsound. The critics are left empty-handed, save as they can arouse opposition generally against the trial and error method.

• • • •

DURING the early part of the campaign, a number of eminent Republicans, joined by equally eminent Democrats, were charging that the New Deal is in essence socialistic. They warned that consciously or otherwise, the New Deal was undermining the traditional foundations of this country, and precipitating some new, alien, un-American order destructive of "liberty" and the Constitution.

Since then Mr. Roosevelt has made enough conciliatory gestures toward the conservatives to persuade many, if not all of them that the New Deal is neither consciously nor blindly heading toward socialism or any other imported "ism." Upton Sinclair, as a symbol of so-called radicalism, has been cold-shouldered publicly after having first been tolerated or, in the case of Mr. ("Call me Jim") Farley, embraced. Whether through fear or whatever motive—the motive being unimportant—leading bankers and business men have concluded that their best hope of salvation for themselves and for the country lies in trying to play with instead of against the New Deal.

All of which leaves those crusaders, who have been shouting about socialism and other "isms," holding what looks to most of the public like a wind-filled bag. And, in general, the opposition has not only found the ground out largely away from under its feet by the deft shifting of New Deal emphasis, but it has been left with only a poor line of political goods to sell to the masses. It is still handicapped by being too close to the disasters of the past. It is more handicapped because, being blamed politically for the past, it can not convincingly sell fears for the future, which are never popular political wares at best. And it has been left little else to sell save fears for the future.

REASONING men everywhere know that the dangers of ruin of the national credit and currency are real dangers. But the voting masses not only do not apprehend it, but they are inclined to believe the Republican pointers-with-alarm. There are just as many Democrats who are filled with the same fears, but they remain for the most part silent, hoping for the best—but certainly disinclined to join the Republicans.

This is all apart from the fact that never before has an Administration had so much money to spend on the electorate, or spent it so lavishly. Never before have the outs found it so hard to raise money. Contributors who might be expected to chip in feel that they would be wasting their money on the Republican campaign now. Others do not care to risk being known as contributors against the omnipotent regime which will hold sway from Washington for at least two more years, and perhaps six.

Undoubtedly the New Deal is popular with the masses. The great run of voters feel that the New Deal is on their side, more sympathetic with their problems and hopes than past Administrations have been. The opposition is made to seem on the side of "the interests." Selling the idea that the salvation of the masses lies in preserving legitimate banking and business interests is an almost impossible task when the sellers are accused of having made a botch of things themselves. Only a few of the Republicans have had the courage to attempt it—Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, being one of the few.

A great number of Republicans have adopted Jim Watson's slogan, "If you can't beat 'em, join 'em." This has left national leadership of the party in a hopeless position, as Chairman Fletcher long since found out.

Thus, while the New Deal is evidently destined to score as great a mid-term triumph at the polls as any Administration ever has, the victory is more by default than ever before.

Yawl Off for Bermuda In Trip From Ireland

St. John's, Newfoundland, Nov. 5 (AP).—Alone in a tiny yawl, a British navigator was sailing the second leg of a voyage from Ireland to Bermuda today.

Prospective fall gales over the Atlantic failed to daunt Commander R. B. Graham, R. N., and his 24-foot craft was well at sea—a day out of Newfoundland's capital—with a brisk northwest wind behind. He was confident that he would have little trouble making Bermuda, 1,200 miles away.

Education Program Held.

The National Education Week observance of the Alexandria Parent-Teacher Council opened last night in the Maury School auditorium with a number of speakers of interest on the program. The Rev. Percy Foster Hall, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, was chairman.

The meeting tonight will be at 8 o'clock in the George Mason High School auditorium; the subject to be discussed, "Character Education." Members of the committee are Miss Clara Pitts, supervisor of elementary education, Alexandria public schools; Mrs. Dorothy Hoge, principal, Mount Vernon School; Dr. Edwin W. Broome, superintendent, Montgomery County (Md.) schools; Miss Anna Halberg, professor of education, Wilson Normal School, Washington; Mrs. Fannie Lee Goodwin, teacher, Lee School, Alexandria; John A. Rorer, in charge of extension teaching, University of Virginia; Leroy Bendheim, chairman, Alexandria school board; Dr. Dudley Willard, professor of education, George Washington University; Miss Eunita Pratt, Alexandria High School.

Thomas L. Risheill Dead.

Thomas Lewis Risheill, a former resident of Alexandria, died on Sunday in a Baltimore hospital after a long illness. He was a son of the late Thomas Van Buren and Emms Rudd Risheill, of Alexandria. Besides his wife, Mrs. Ida Deneale Risheill, he is survived by one son, Thomas Lewis Risheill, jr., of Washington; three daughters, Mrs. Richard B. English, of Alexandria; Mrs. Webster Johnson and Mrs. Calvin Anderson, of Baltimore; a brother, Lawrence Risheill, of Alexandria, and three sisters, Mrs. May Bailey and Mrs. Emma Buckingham, of Washington, and Mrs. Sallie Prettyman, of Atlanta, Ga.

The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. English, 130 Summers drive, Alexandria.

The men's mission opened at St. Mary's Catholic Church on Sunday night, and will continue throughout the week, with morning masses at 5:30 and 8 o'clock.

The children's mission will be on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons at 3:15 o'clock. The mission is being conducted by the Rev. Father C. J. Gallegher and the Rev. Father Charles Conner.

Salvation Army Meets.

A home league meeting of the Salvation Army will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Salvation Army Hall, 319 King street. A program for the winter's relief work will be mapped.

The Mary Custis Lee-Seventeenth Virginia Regiment Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, will hold a meeting at 8 o'clock tonight in Lee Camp Hall.

The charter members of the Potomac Fire Company, now Potomac Truck and Engine Company, No. 2, and Rescue Squad, No. 1, of the Alexandria Fire Department, will hold their tenth anniversary dinner tonight, at 7:30 o'clock, in the George Mason Hotel. Samuel B. DeVaughan is in charge of arrangements.

Dr. John W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education, will be the guest speaker at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Alexandria Rotary Club at 12:30 o'clock today in the George Mason Hotel.

Woman Injured Here When Struck by Taxi

Mrs. Laura Maynard, 55, of 919 L street northwest, is believed to have suffered a fractured skull yesterday when she was struck by a taxi. The accident occured in the 4000 block, Wisconsin avenue. Mrs. Maynard was taken to the Georgetown University Hospital, where, it was said, her condition is serious. George F. Offenbacher, 36, 2121 First street northwest, the taxi driver, was charged with reckless driving.

Fairfax School Board Urged By Parents to Reopen School

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The School Board of Fairfax County, Va., yesterday again refused to reopen the old one-room Sydenstricker school. Last month the citizens petitioned the board to reopen the school, which was closed last year because of lack of regular attendance. The board did agree, however, to revise the school bus schedule for that territory so the children would not have to leave home so early in the morning for other schools.

The resignation of Miss Mary M. Snead, principal of the Oakton school, was accepted and Harry M. Nipe was appointed principal. Miss Snead resigned because of ill health. Miss Madeline Long was appointed as a teacher at the Forestville school in place of Miss Margaret Jeffries who also resigned because of ill health.

A district meeting of the principals of the elementary schools will be held November 19 in Warrenton for a discussion of the new State curriculum. The board authorized the principals to dismiss their classes for that day.

The abandoned school buildings at Vale, Jefferson, Rock Hill and Red Hill are to be sold by the school board following the necessary public notice.

Light Vote Predicted.

Despite the effort of both political parties in Fairfax County to arouse the interest of the voters in today's election it is predicted that a very light vote will be cast.

While it is generally conceded by both major parties that United States Senator Harry Flood Byrd and Representative Howard W. Smith will be reelected, the Republicans have expressed belief that their candidates will poll a heavier than usual off-year vote because of the growing dissatisfaction in many of the New Deal policies.

Attack Case Investigated.

Police of Fairfax County, Va., yesterday were continuing their investigation of the alleged abduction and attempted assault on a 17-year-old white girl near Masonville, Va., between Falls Church and Annandale Sunday night.

According to the police, Dorothy Stewart, of 1513 O street northwest, Washington, and Frank Stevenson, of Takoma Park, Md., were riding on a side road near Masonville when their car became mired. Help was obtained from a garage man in Falls Church and while attempting to pull the car out of the mud the assisting automobile's radiator ran out of water.

Leaving the girl in the wrecking car, the two men went for water. While they were gone, the girl told police, a colored man came by in an automobile, forcing her into it. She was found in a dazed condition beside the road near Falls Church a short time later by a passerby, who later located young Stevenson. She was taken to the office of Dr. C. A. Ransom in Falls Church and treated for shock. She told police that the colored man, about 19 years old, attempted to assault her and then shoved her from the car.

Drive Is Made In County on Vote Round-up

Prince Georges Democrats Hold 'Book Majority'; G.O.P. Is Confident.

Political workers of both parties in Prince Georges County, Md., are prepared for a final round-up of voters of the county today.

Leaders of each of the opposing sides claim sweeping victory, but each is uncertain on what the majority will be.

The workers were out in full force yesterday and over the week-end, making last minute calls on doubtful voters.

Campaigns are Ended.

Democrats have a book majority of 5,000, however, and also have the National Administration on their side. Republicans have to beat the New Deal as well as the county candidates.

Final and official results probably will not be known until late Wednesday, officials said. A heavy vote is expected. The polls will be open from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m. today.

Crowds Attend Rallies.

Democratic leaders point to the fact that their rallies have brought out the largest crowds in the recent history of the county as partial basis for their claim of victory. Gov. Ritchie was greeted by 5,000 persons on his visit to the Coliseum at Maryland University recently and other county meetings have been well attended.

Republicans also have had a large attendance at their meetings and have been putting on an intensive campaign. There is a probability that several Republicans will be elected even if the county goes Democratic in most offices.

The State Democratic ticket has the edge in betting in the county and most of the Democratic county candidates are favorites.

Gambrill Held Favorite.

Representative Stephen W. Gambrill is favorite for reelection to his Congressional post. He has been in ill health through most of the campaign and has not been able to get around for much campaigning, but his personal political strength is expected to overcome for his weak campaign efforts. Joseph Allison Wilmer, his Republican opponent, has been putting on a strong campaign, however, and is expected to make a good showing.

One Republican, Thomas Edward Latimer, is sure of election as county surveyor since he is the only candidate. William A. Duvall, Republican, and Joseph H. Blandford, Democrat, are believed strong contenders in the commissionership race. The rest of the ticket expects a pretty strong fight, however, since control of the county commissioner board also means control of the appointment of county police.

Interest in Women's Race.

Two women are on the ticket, Mrs. Eva C. Chase, Republican, running for delegate, and Mrs. Anna W. Roussel, also Republican, who is in the race for judge of the orphans' court. Since women have never achieved election in the county heretofore, the vote on these two is attracting attention.

The general consensus, however, gives the Democrats the best chance in the race for the House of Delegates, although Oliver Metzerott, Republican, is a strong contender. Egbert Fuller Tingley, youthful Democrat, a comparative newcomer in county politics, is said to have made a good showing.

Sasscer Victory Seen.

State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer is a 10-to-1 shot in the campaign for State senator.

His reelection, it is believed, would give the county the honor of having the president of the Senate.

William Till Davis, Republican, is conceded the best chance in the race for register of wills. R. Ernest Smith, Democratic candidate for treasurer, also is favored.

The race between J. Guy Bell, Democrat, and Joseph V. Wyville, jr., is expected to be close, with Bell leading in the betting odds about 5 to 2.

Fusionists Put Eleventh Hour Appeal on Air

In a radio speech in which he summarized the principles of the Fusion movement, Joseph A. Cantrel, Fusion candidate for the House of Delegates, last night urged voters of Montgomery County to support his party at the polls today.

It costs every resident of the county $4 a year to support the present liquor dispensary administration, he declared, although in Wicomico County it costs citizens only 26 cents per year and in the whole State of Ohio only 4 cents.

He especially assailed the county commissioners' purchase of a large plot of land for erection of a liquor warehouse which, he said, cost them 23 times the assessed value of the property. Another transaction he assailed was purchase of a school site at Four Corners for $51,389, for which the county paid, he said, $4,445 an acre when "land around it had been selling at $1,780 per acre."

In a 30-minute address over WJSV, Cantrel charged misuse of PWA labor, favoritism in road repair and construction, use of police in political campaigns and certain bank transactions, and urged an investigation into the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission.

Montgomery County, he charged, was being administered at a cost four times more than its neighboring county, Frederick, and that its bonded indebtedness, including sanitary commission bonds, was nearly half the indebtedness of all Maryland and nearly equal to that of all Virginia.

Cyril Haas, of FDIC, Now Kentucky Colonel

He is Cyril R. Haas, assistant chief of the protection division of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. While in Kentucky in 1921, Col. Haas was noted for his as a state investigator.

Wood Leaves Fusion Party In Montgomery

Victory Is Claimed Despite Withdrawal of Leader in Organization.

Approximately 21,000 voters will go to the polls in Montgomery County today to "cast the die" for or against the continuation of a powerful Democratic regime.

With the odds lightly in favor of the Democratic machine, the opposing Fusionist Party laid last-minute claims to a clean sweep in the less thickly settled outlying districts.

In the more densely populated metropolitan area, for many years the strong "E. Brooke Lee" Democratic fort, the Fusionist adherents stake their hopes on a 50-50 chance.

The claims were made in the face of a heavy eleventh-hour setback they received in the resignation from the Fusion ranks of Sumner Wood, of Chevy Chase, one of the organizers of the party.

Although Wood's former colleagues attempted to minimize the importance of his resignation, the Democrats branded it as convincing proof of a split in the enemy's ranks.

Resignation Statement.

The Democratic State central committee immediately obtained a statement from Mr. Wood, printed it in circular form, and yesterday, only a few hours after the resignation, flooded the county with the literature. The statement read:

"My sense of decency and fair play could no longer tolerate many of the charges made by Fusionists against the Democratic Administration. I am a life-long Democrat. I organized the Harvard Democratic Club in 1924.

"The political maneuvers of a certain element, which for the last month has completely dominated the Fusion Party, is derogatory to the best interests of its citizens and destructive of the general credit standing of the county.

"To allege that Montgomery County is bankrupt is a dangerous political move and rankest kind of imaginary horror. In the early part of the campaign, the Fusion Party had high ideals.

Says He Was Misled.

"I was misled into believing the bonded indebtedness of the county was twice its actual figure and have since found many Fusion statements to be half-truths or deliberate misrepresentations of fact.

"The absurdity of comparing the liquor dispensary with the little Kings Valley School, which pamphlet definitely originated in a Fusionist Party member's office—I was there when the photographs were ordered—caused me to question the wisdom of placing the county government in the hands of anyone who would use such artifices."

The Fusion Party last night declared Mr. Woods' resignation was "ridiculous and absurb." They charged it was simply another and final bid by "Organization Democrats" to embarrass their party.

Thomas M. Anderson, chairman of the Fusion central committee, said: "Mr. Woods' withdrawal from the Fusion ranks is amusing for several reasons.

"In the first place Mr. Woods declares he will not vote the Fusion ticket. Yet, at the same time, he announces his intention to support four Fusion candidates.

Revenge Charged.

"It is apparent, too, that he is still rankling over the fact residents of his own district were responsible for his failure to receive the nomination for the House of Delegates given Joseph Cantrel.

"The fact he did not make his switch-over until the very eve of the election has too obvious a motive for any voter to take seriously."

Another to take a "last minute crack" was Judge Henry J. Hunt, of the Orphans Court, who is aligned with the Fusion movement.

Judge Hunt issued what he termed an answer "to the Democratic machine bosses" who, he said, charged him with being an ingrate.

The "ingrate" charges were made when the Democratic leaders referred to Judge Hunt's announcement that the Washington and Georgetown Gas Light Co. had contributed $3,750 to the Democratic campaign.

State's Attorney Stedman Prescott declared this occurred many years ago and had nothing to do with the present campaign.

Judge Hunt, in his reply, also charged that "this same Democratic machine, which is soliciting votes of Roosevelt supporters, is the same State Democratic machine that tried to crucify Franklin D. Roosevelt on the cross of oblivion in Chicago."

Polls Disorder Warning Given

Prescott Tells Fusionists in Montgomery Not to Try Intimidation.

Threatening to call State election officials to "preserve the sanctity of the polls," State's Attorney Stedman Prescott, of Montgomery, yesterday warned against any attempt to intimidate voters in today's elections.

Mr. Prescott, a candidate for the State Senate on the Democratic ticket, addressed his remarks especially to the Fusion Party. In a statement issued from his office in Rockville, he declared:

"Reports have reached this office that Fusion leaders are planning to resort to questionable tactics at the polls in a desperate attempt to secure last-minute votes.

"Fusion leaders must remember that it is one thing to carry on a campaign of vilification such as they have done and an entirely different thing to violate the laws pertaining to elections at the polls.

"All the forces of this county and State will be utilized if necessary to prevent fraud, bribery and trickery when the voters go to the polls. The sanctity of the ballot box must be preserved."

Capital Society to Attend New York Horse Show

Members of Diplomatic Corps Planning to See Events; Fashions to Be on Parade at Evening Performances.

Many members of Capital society are spending several days in New York, having gone to be there for the elections today. A number will linger a few days longer to attend the famous National Horse Show, which opens at Madison Square Garden today and continues until November 13. Members of the Diplomatic Corps, who take a great interest in the show because their countrymen are entered and because they enjoy witnessing the display of superb horsemanship, will also go to New York to attend.

The show not only creates interest in this country but in Europe, for it is one of two horse shows in the Western Hemisphere recognized in Europe as international, the other being the Royal Winter Fair at Toronto, Canada.

The color scheme for the show will be autumn flowers and leaves, which will make an excellent background for the uniforms of the five international military jumping teams, as well as the pink coats of the hunt teams and the formal black and white attire of the civilian and feminine contestants.

It will be hard to distinguish between the Irish Free State, Canadian and United States teams as they flash over the hurdles, for they will be garbed in khaki, and also between the French and Chilean horsemen, for they both will wear tunics of horizon blue. But there will be no mistaking the scarlet and gold of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who will ride at this show for the first time. No longer can England's great horse show at Olympia, of which the king is a patron, hold the record of being the only show outside of the Dominion at which the "Mounties" have performed.

"Mounties" Appear Every Night.

The performance Saturday afternoon will be particularly eventful because of the competition for the Good Hands Cup, which is now a country-wide championship class. It has been arranged so that each evening's performance will start with a "touch-and-out" class and, for the convenience of the late diners, the international jumping will take place in the middle of each evening. Like the international jumpers, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police will appear every night.

One of the most attractive and unusual features will be the "Gay Nineties" class Saturday evening. The contestants will have to exhibit old-type horse-drawn vehicles. According to the prize list, "the older the vehicle the better." All exhibitors in this class must be in costume corresponding to the period of the vehicle they bring into the ring.

The audience which will attend the show in the evenings will be in the most formal of evening attire, for it will be a veritable fashion show, the ladies gowned in the latest models and the men in evening dress and top hats.

Diplomats Will Attend.

Among the members of the Diplomatic Corps of Washington who plan to attend are the Ambassador of Great Britain, Sir Ronald Lindsay, who will go to New York Friday to be present that evening at the British War Veterans Ball, to be given at the Waldorf-Astoria; the Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye, who will leave the end of the week; the Ambassador of Chile, Senor Don Manuel Trucco, accompanied by his son, Senor Don Manuel Trucco, jr., and his three daughters, Senorita Marta Trucco, Senorita Graciela Trucco and Senorita Rebeca Trucco, who will go Saturday and remain until November 13; the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite, who will leave today to attend the show and see the Irish team perform. Mrs. Harry Baxter, daughter of the Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern, also will witness the show. The Military Attache of the Mexican Embassy, Brig. Gen. Juan F. Azcarate Pino, who is spending several days in New York before going to Kentucky for a brief visit, expects to attend the show before leaving. The Commercial Attache of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Gaxiola, will leave today for New York. The latter will sail tomorrow aboard the Orizaba for her home in Mexico. Senor Gaxiola probably will attend one performance of the show before returning here.

Deb's Diary

Who, What and Where —as She Sees It.

DEAR DIARY:

Well, well, I'd say that Washington is quite the approved place in which to make one's debut. Of course, each year there has been a good-sized "class" of young ladies (Capitalites) graduating into grown-up society, but now it seems that they are coming from here, there and many places to join our far from thinning ranks.

The roll call of those from afar is interesting and brings out many names oft heard in the history of the nearby countryside. There is Marjorie Walsh, from New York; Mathilde Bruce Rodgers, from the same place; Janet Harrison, from Leesburg; Silvine Clagett and Mary Jane Stanley, from Marlboro and Laurel, Md.; Anne and Helen Potts, from Frederick, Md., and another on the Virginia side, Rannie Richardson, from Fairfax.

Then, too, there are those from across the seas, lovely blonde Valerie Prochnik, from Austria; Christinia Beck-Friis, also blonde, from Sweden; Czechoslovakia will be represented again this year among the debs because Gladys Broz will take enough time out from G. W. studies to make her bow. Also counted from across the Atlantic, although really an American, is Christine Long, who is coming from Rome and will shortly be seen at all of the younger set affairs.

Talk to Be Given By Mrs. Habersham

Will Lecture on Palestine and Holy Land.

Mrs. Elmer Oliver and Mrs. R. Winston Holt, presidents of the day and night branches of the Woman's Auxiliary of St. Margaret's are sponsoring the illustrated lecture on Palestine and the Holy Land which Mrs. F. A. Habersham, who has lately returned from abroad, will give in the parish house Wednesday at 8 p. m.

Mrs. D. L. Cady Becomes Bride Of Dr. Barrett

Widow of Poet Marries Former Pan-American Union Director.

Mrs. Daniel Leavens Cady, of Burlington, Vt. and Coral Gables, Fla., was married at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Wallace, in New York, to Dr. John Barrett, of Grafton, Vt., and Washington.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Roelif H. Brooks, rector of St. Thomas Episcopal Church, Fifth avenue and Fifty-third street. Mr. Harrison A. Cooke, of Burlington, Vt., nephew of the bride, gave her away. Mr. John W. Barrett, of Freeport, Ill., nephew of the bridegroom, was his best man. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Cooke, niece of the bride, and Mrs. Barrett, wife of the best man.

Social and Charity Leader.

Mrs. Barrett's first husband was Dr. Daniel L. Cady, who died last winter and who was known as Vermont's poet laureate. In Vermont and in Florida she has figured prominently in the social, cultural and charitable activities. She is a member of the D. A. R., and women's clubs of the two States.

Dr. Barrett, who received degrees of Doctor of Laws from several universities of North and South America, is a retired diplomatic officer. He was United States minister to Siam, Argentina, Colombia and Panama. For 14 years he was director general of the Pan American Union, building it up into a world-recognized international institution and providing it with its beautiful building which is an architectural feature of the Capital. President Theodore Roosevelt described him as "the foremost protagonist of present-day Pan Americanism."

Founded Society.

He was also founder of the Pan American Society, Inc., with headquarters at 67 Broad street, New York City, which today is the principal unofficial Pan American organization of the Western Hemisphere.

Mr. and Mrs. Barrett left after the ceremony for their winter home at 2109 Granada boulevard, Coral Gables. They will arrive in Washington today for a brief stay. They will spend most of the winter making trips to Latin American countries, and will return to Grafton and Burlington, Vt., early next summer.

Shoes or Suede Are Kept Neat By Tiny Brush

Inexpensive Gadget Makes Footwear Look as Good as New.

By Katherine Smith.

YOU whisk it out of your bag and show it to your friend. "What's this?" you ask. "It's a lipstick," is the answer.

You smile mysteriously; your friend suggests that it might be a cigarette lighter that looks like a lipstick. Both guesses are wrong. It's a suede brush!

Pull off the neat black top, slide up the gadget with a quick finger, and a little wire brush appears. Give it a twist to make it secure, rub it over your shoes, and they look as good as new.

The suede shoe problem is solved. Hereafter, if you brush them in the morning, they look like last years' merchandise at the end of the day, and if your dinner date prevents you from hurrying home to brush your shoes again, what is there to do?

Evening Accessory.

Where will designers stop in making one thing serve as two? Dresses do double duty, coats are modeled for several purposes, and now here's a bag that serves three!

First of all it's a "cuff-muff" bag. That means you can keep your hands warm in the interior, and you can slide it up your wrist as a fancy separate evening cuff. Best of all, there's a little silk envelope inside fitted with coin purse, mirror and comb.

Chanel is responsible for this clever and attractive evening accessory. The bag is two fat puffs of velvet and comes in black, brown and other colors. Get one to match your evening wrap, or dress.

Another "muff" bag is called the "Dachshund," because it's long and slim. It will slide generously up both wrists. Also in velvet, it is loosely shirred, the top "zippers" open, a coin purse is inside.

White Pottery.

White pottery is just white pottery. But when its whiteness takes on an opalscent color and it begins to resemble mother of pearl, then white pottery becomes an aristocrat in its line.

One store has a big table covered with this ware. Some are shaped like the old Greek vessels, one vase is three lovely lilies, with hollow stems to hold other flowers. Flat and tall, big and little, these containers offer a large selection.

Gift For the Bride.

Another gift for the bride—144 silver spoons in a cherry stone! This is no joke. The stone has been hollowed out, and 12 dozen tiny spoons go inside.

A little ivory knob screws on to keep them in. Take off this knob and the spoons fall out, looking like a pile of silver dust. A tiny funnel is necessary to put them back in their case.

Of all the trick gadgets and novelties, this is one folks will remember you by. But don't lose one of the spoons, because you'll never be able to find it again. The tiny silver bits are rather hard to locate.

Evening Capes.

Evening capes acquire more dash and militarism. One hip-length cape is of white-corded silk, threaded with gold, and lined with red or black velvet. It has high-standing collar and fastens with little gold frogs. Best of all, it's reversible and can be worn either right or wrong side out. Neither side is a wrong side, however, and you have two capes in one.

Lace Collar.

Frame your face with the workmanship of the old masters. Rembrandt, Van Dyke and others have kept these lace collars alive in their portraits, now designers copy them painstakingly and fashion them of hand-made lace.

Three of these have been copied from the following portraits: Van Dyke's Self Portrait, his Portrait of a Lady, and Rembrandt's Queen Elizabeth.

These three models are of hand-made Venice lace. Other pieces, though not handmade, are as beautiful. So, if you have a face that makes a picture, put it into the proper frame.

Hat and Box.

Like the evening capes and "cuff-muff" bags, all good things come in twos. This time it's a hat and box.

Here's the system. The hat is a Dobbs model, called "Miss November." Dobbs has created some lovely new shades, and a strikingly becoming shape. The boxes are made of sturdy cardboard in bright colors, and equipped with a strap across the top. The box itself is suitable as a traveling hatbox, in which you can carry your Dobbs or any other hat you choose to travel with.

Inexpensive Nightgown Pretty and Easy to Make

Pattern No. 631.

MUCH AS WE may like beautiful nightgowns, they are usually one of the luxuries we deny ourselves. This design, however, takes pretty gowns out of the luxury class. It is easy to make and it can cost as much or as little as one wants to pay.

The gown is bias cut with an Empire line. The lace trimming and the arm frills may be omitted if a more tailored effect is desired. A ribbon belt ties in the back. The pattern is accurately cut in sizes 14 to 20; 32 to 38. Size 18 (36) requires 3⅛ yards of 39-inch fabric for the lace-trimmed version, 3⅝ yards of 2-inch lace, 2⅜ yards of 1½-inch ribbon. For the tailored version size 18 (36) requires just 2¾ yards of 39-inch fabric.

Culbertson on Bridge

Alternative Squeezes.

A very remarkable deal turned up in a local duplicate game. It was remarkable both for the swings produced by the bidding and for the opportunity offered in the play. The contract at diamonds with a club opening lead offers the opportunity to parallel a well-known double Dummy problem.

The player who reported this deal is confessedly reluctant to bid a grand slam in duplicate play. While every experienced match point player recognizes that there is no percentage in favor of bidding a Grand Slam as against being content with a small slam, this player has an aversion to grand slam bids that amounts to paranoia. But owing to the web of circumstances in which he was caught, the first bid that he made on this deal was seven diamonds!

West, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

West	North	East	South
1♡	2♣	2♠	Pass(1)
4♠(2)	5♣(3)	6♠(4)	7◇(5)
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—South was sure he would have another chance to bid and decided to wait until the opponents had bid a game and then bid five diamonds, hoping by this procedure to induce the opponents to be content with doubling five diamonds rather than going to a possible slam.

2—Not a bad bid, since East has made a free spade bid, but motivated largely by the desire to induce North to try a five-club "save."

4—East falls for the triple cross! He is sure from West's jump assist and from North's evident desire to save that six spades is a certainty. North, with his two Aces, licks his chops in pleasant anticipation.

5—And now South's Fabian tactics have put him on a choice spot. He has no inkling of whether the spade slam can be made, nor whether the diamond save will be worth while. The player took a deep breath and burst forth with a grand slam bid. It need scarcely be remarked that North moaned hollowly as he laid down the two Aces after the opening lead of the club King.

The deal now offers a beautiful double Dummy problem: South to make the grand slam at diamonds against any subsequent defense. The South player solved the problem as follows:

On the opening lead East discarded a heart. Declarer took a round of trumps, and when the trumps did not split, abandoned the idea of trying to ruff the third heart for fear of overruff by East. He led a few more rounds of trumps and then led the Queen of hearts. West covered, and North won with the Ace. A club ruff put South back to cash the rest of his trumps. North saved one club, the small heart and the spade Ace. The lead of the spade to the Ace now squeezed West in clubs and hearts, in which two suits he held the only stoppers.

It was immediately asserted by the East player that had West not covered the Queen of hearts the contract would have been defeated. The South player then demonstrated that in this event he would have made his contract by a prettier form of the squeeze—the trump squeeze.

If the Queen of hearts is allowed to hold, blocking the suit, the Declarer will at least preserve double entry into the North hand. He will lead all his trumps but one, North saving the two blank Aces and two clubs. West will be compelled to save two clubs and two hearts. South retains two hearts, a spade and a trump. The lead of the spade to the Ace now effects a trump squeeze. If West lets go a heart, North will cash the Ace of hearts, setting up the Jack. On the other hand, if West discards a club, North will lead a club for South to ruff, and the heart Ace will then give reentry to the long club.

Finally, it should be noted that East is helpless to save the situation by saving his third-round heart stopper. If East fails to let go a heart on the opening club lead, South will simply take the heart finesse at once and, after unblocking the suit, regain entry with a trump to lead and ruff out his third heart.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutler.

Angina Pectoris or Breast Pang.

FEW diseases cause such intense suffering for a short space of time as angina pectoris. Fortunately the pain is not continuous and the relief experienced when the pain leaves is most striking.

The three cardinal symptoms are: Pain, fear of a fatal outcome, and disturbance of breathing. Many patients will describe the pain as agonizing and viselike, as though the breastbone (sternum) were being crushed toward the spine. The length of time that this sensation persists may be but a few seconds, although some attacks may last for several minutes. When asked to locate the site of the pain the sufferer will usually place his hand on the upper portion of the breastbone. The pain may radiate down the left arm, and is sometimes felt along both arms. Occasionally it is experienced in the neck, the face, or back of the head.

Associated with pain is the fear of death. When the attack comes on, if the individual is walking, he stops, momentarily holds his breath, and then takes short breaths as if he were afraid to inhale. The face is usually grayish and covered with a cold sweat. Following a seizure exhaustion may be felt for days.

Once the character of true angina has been recognized, the patient should be put to bed for a complete rest and every possible effort made to restore the circulatory system to reasonable competency. Exercise must depend upon freedom from pain and should be indulged in only if symptoms of discomfort do not ensue. Worry and overwork must be eliminated and exposure to cold must be avoided.

As a safeguard many physicians provide persons with angina with ampoules of amyl nitrate or tablets of nitroglycerine.

Tasty Dishes Are Made With Cold Potatoes

Cottage or Shepherd's Pie and German Dumplings Delicious.

By Dorothea Duncan.

NOTHING in the realm of leftovers can be as unattractive and seemingly as hopeless as cold mashed potatoes. Don't be discouraged, however, when the family fails to eat all the mashed potatoes prepared for dinner. Here are some new and old ways of transforming that most unexciting leftover into dishes that will become family favorites, once they have been tried.

German potato dumplings served with pork chops and cream gravy, will make a great hit. This will be a heavy meal, so reserve it for a cold day, and use a green vegetable, as spinach or cabbage, and substitute a salad for dessert.

Here is the way to prepare the dumplings. Break day-old bread into large crumbs (about one-third as much bread as leftover potatoes) and brown well in butter in a frying pan. If the potatoes are not soft, moisten them with a little hot milk. Stir potatoes into the butter and crumbs. Mix enough flour into the mixture, so the potatoes and crumbs may be rolled into firm balls. The balls should be the size of a popcorn ball. Roll the balls in flour and place in boiling water for five minutes. Serve at once with cream gravy.

Princess Potatoes.

2 cups mashed potatoes
1 egg
melted fat

If the potato is cold and firm, cut into strips 2 inches long, 1 inch wide and ½ inch thick, otherwise shape into flat cakes ½ inch thick. Dip the strips or cakes first into the melted fat and then into the egg, which has been slightly beaten, and lay them carefully on a greased pan. Cook in a hot oven (400 degrees to 450 degrees F.) until brown.

Leftover mashed potatoes and meat can be combined to form a delicious Cottage or Shepherd's pie.

Cover bottom of greased baking dish with hot mashed potatoes. (Heat cold potatoes by adding a little hot milk and beat well over boiling water). Add a thick layer of roast beef, chopped or cut in small pieces (seasoned with salt, pepper, and a few drops of onion juice) and moistened with some of the gravy; cover with a thin layer of mashed potatoes and bake in a hot oven (425 degrees F.) long enough to heat through.

Someone has asked for a recipe for caramel frosting, so here it is. If you are constantly having bad luck with your frosting, try using a candy thermometer to test it instead of trying it in water for the soft-ball stage. The thermometer method is always a sure one.

Caramel Frosting.

2 egg whites.
1 teaspoon vanilla or ½ teaspoon lemon extract.

Make a sirup of the sugar and water and cook to the soft-ball stage (238 degrees F.). Remove from the fire and cool while the egg whites are beaten, then pour the sirup in a thin stream on to the stiff egg whites, beating the mixture constantly until thick enough to spread. Add the flavoring.

Chopped nuts may be stirred into the frosting just before spreading.

This recipe for cranberry sauce will answer all the questions that have been asked about it.

Cranberry Sauce.

2 cups sugar.
2 cups boiling water.

Cook the cranberries and water together until the skins of the berries are broken. Add the sugar and simmer for 5 or 10 minutes. Chill before using.

If a strained sauce is desired, cook the cranberries and water as told above, and rub through sieve. Return the strained portion to the fire, add the sugar and simmer for 5 or 10 minutes.

Simple Dessert and Salad.

For the hastily prepared dinner, plan a salad which can be made in advance so that all it will need at the last minute is to be turned out of the mold, garnished and brought to the table. I was thinking of a jellied salad, but the ingredients for a fruit salad might be combined in the morning and mixed with the salad dressing a few minutes before serving.

Simple desserts are becoming more and more popular, so let's have cooked or fresh fruit and cookies or cake to finish this meal. If you are having a mixed fruit salad as I just suggested you might serve cookies or wafers with it and let it serve the purpose of a combination salad-dessert.

JENNIFER HALE

By Rob Eden

"DO YOU realize, Young, that I've paid out $3,000 to a firm of private detectives to find out who killed Corey. If there had been any evidence against Ives, I would know. You're on the wrong track. I thought you said you had something to tell me," Kent flung himself on the bed in disgust.

"Don't get me wrong, I'm only doing this for Mary—for Jennifer. But as sure as I'm living and breathing Ives killed Corey. I don't know why yet, but I'm going to find out. That's why I came to you. I want your help. I don't want a word of this to get out, and I don't trust any one here enough yet to hire them. I thought you might help me. This is my investigation, Mr. Severn. No one knows what I've been doing, and I don't want them to know until I'm ready. I don't want Ives to get word of it."

Andy's voice was quivering with emotion.

Ives Was Nervous.

"Notice Ives in court this morning?"

Kent shook his head.

Andy continued triumphantly. "I noticed him. I've been watching him every day he has been at the trial. I watched him on the witness stand. That's where I got my hunch. Much too anxious to clear Jennifer, Much. Then today, I followed him into the hall, and into the washroom, after the jury came in. He didn't see me, and he doesn't know I saw him take a bromide."

"What's a bromide got to do with it?"

"Everything! Don't you see! Why should a guy seemingly as strong and healthy as Ives take a bromide? That wasn't the only bromide I saw him take. He took one when he got off the witness stand that first time. I followed him out then. That got me to thinking."

"And because Ives takes a bromide, he's guilty?"

"Sherman isn't smart enough to have killed Corey. Ives is. And murderers have been discovered, Mr. Severn, on less evidence than bromides. Are you with me, or aren't you?"

"With you!"

This is the third time you've been up here this week, Mr. Young," Mrs. Richardson chided the detective as she let him into the apartment of her late brother in Moore House. Helen Richardson wasn't occupying David Corey's apartment. She was living on the fourth floor temporarily until her return to San Francisco, but the keys for Corey's apartment were still in her possession.

"You don't need to stay if you're busy, Mrs. Richardson," Andy assured her as he followed her into the room where Corey had died.

"I'm not busy, and I have to stay in any event. The police made me custodian of this apartment. But I can't see what you want here again." She was getting rather tired of his visits, getting rather tired of Mr. Young himself, to tell the truth. Since she had paid him the reward of $7,000 for the capture of Jennifer Hale, he had bothered her a good deal. At first he had been amusing, the first detective she had ever known. Now he was becoming a nuisance.

"My last trip." He smiled as engagingly as he could. He must keep in Mrs. Richardson's good graces.

Going to Leave.

"It will be the last. I'm closing up David's apartment tomorrow. There's no need to keep it any more, since the trial is ended."

Andy moved quickly across the room. A slight frown quivered on his face for a split second and then was gone. Mrs. Richardson closing the apartment tomorrow! He didn't have what he wanted from it yet! And it was here, he knew it was here. Today he would have to find it.

"Just once more."

"You must be writing reams on the case," she murmured. Andy had told her to excuse his many visits, that he was making a complete dossier of the case.

"My first big case. You can't blame me for being interested in it." His fingers pulled out the two items he wanted, Corey's personal check book and the bank statement that had come in the afternoon mail, September 1, and which was opened and in the top drawer when the police had gone over the murdered man's effects. Young knew every check listed in the statement. He had looked over all of them twice before. He knew every stub in the check book.

Made Out to Ives.

Again he spread the canceled checks out on the desk in the order they had been when he found them. Seven thousand dollars worth of checks. The one made out to Parker Ives interested him the most. He looked at the date again, August 6, and he gazed at the signature with a magnifying glass. It tallied with the rest. Five thousand dollars payable to Parker Ives, August 6. He took up the check book, half full of blank checks and half full of stubs. The stubs were printed neatley in ink. Corey always printed his stubs, Andy had found out. The check book was the regular pocket personal size, with a folder at the back for a bank book. The bank book was there, too. Everything was as it should be.

The stub was there which said that a check had been made out to P. Ives, for $5,000 August 6. Printed like the rest of of the stubs, in its proper place in the book. Not numbered, but none of Corey's checks were numbered.

All as it should be——

All Personal Loans.

This wasn't the first big sum Corey had lent Ives, either. There was another sum for $3,000 in June, entered in an old check book, the stubs of which were in the desk, and which Andy had already studied carefully.

All personal loans Corey made away from his office, and from his personal check book. He made a good many of them, some of them small, some of them fairly large. He never mixed his personal business and loans with his regular and office business.

The bank balance was correct, and the stub balance as far as it went, correct, for the last few checks Corey had made out weren't entered on the bank balance sheet. But that was as it should be, too. Andy knew that those checks were by now. He had already been to the bank about them. The total was right. David Corey's private account, which was separate from his business account, balanced to the penny in the Security First National Bank.

"Both of these were in this top drawer when the police came, weren't they?" he pointed to the green check book and the big manilla envelope, which had held the canceled checks and the statement.

"The statement was, but the check book wasn't. I remember one of the elevator boys found it the day I got here, and brought it to me. David had dropped it in the elevator, and somehow it had got back of the cushion of the seat. I gave it to the police, who put it in the drawer."

A Clue at Last.

Andy's hands were shaking, but his voice was calm as glass as he continued, "When did you get here?"

"I flew down in my own plane. I must have arrived about 4 o'clock Saturday morning."

All the time assuming the two items which interested him most were in the top drawer when the police came! Because he had neglected to ask Mrs. Richardson! But he musn't make her suspicious. She was perfectly satisfied with the verdict against Jennifer.

"Then the elevator boy gave you the check book Saturday?" He spoke as if the thing were of no importance.

"Some time in the afternoon, Saturday."

"Oh, anybody can mislay check books. Now that I remember it, he lost a book once in San Francisco and had to advertise for it, because it had his pass book in it. But it finally turned up. I sent it back to him. It had dropped down back of the seat of my car."

Brain Was Busy.

Andy murmured something about unavoidable accidents, but his brain was busier than it had ever been before. The bank statement in Corey's box September 1. The check book apparently in Corey's pocket September 1, because the last stub was a stub made out to Moore House for $150, marked rent. This was the only check Corey had made out the day he died.

The bank statement opened. No he must find out. He made a mental note to ask the detectives who had searched the desk the night of Corey's death. Some time between the time Corey made out the check for the rent at Moore House and the time he was murdered his check book had been lost. Lost or stolen from his lifeless body. Andy preferred to think it was stolen after Corey's death. That fitted in with his plans.

And then right before him was the evidence he wanted from the canceled checks and the stubs. Looking into his eyes. Slowly he began fitting the ribbed edges of the torn checks to the ribbed edges of the stubs. God, what an idiot he had been!

Blot Told Story.

All of them matched perfectly, except the last check, the one made out for the rent. There was a blot at the perforated edge where the check had been joined to the stub, a large blot which apparently had stained both the check and the stub. True, the blot had been reproduced on the stub, but not carefully enough! The blot on the stub was larger than the one on the check, out of proportion.

Andy put the canceled checks back in the manilla envelope, and the stubs back in the leatherette folder. He put both items in the drawer. Then he deliberately knocked an onyx paper weight from the desk to the floor. In the moment that Mrs. Richardson's eyes left the desk for the floor, he whisked the check book and bank statement from the drawer and slid them into his pocket. He couldn't risk asking for them, and he had to have them. The onyx paper weight wasn't broken.

Coolness of Coeds To Sports Amazes German Student

Burlington, Vt., Nov. 5 (Spl.).—The average American coed's lack of enthusiasm about sports is both a surprise and a disappointment to Fraulein Elizabeth Borgwaldt, German exchange student at the University of Vermont.

"In Germany," she said, "we always think of America as the land of sports, but girls over here don't seem to be very active. And they hardly ever go hiking. At home we always hike just for the pleasure of it."

Fraulein Borgwaldt believes American students also miss much from life by not being more leisurely in their activities.

"At a German university ball," she said, "we always have tables to sit at, where we can talk and drink our wine. Here the main object seems to be to dance as much as possible in the time allotted for dancing. On rainy days at home we can't walk, so we go to a restaurant and sit for hours talking."

Psychology Important in Training Dogs

Like Children, They Need Care and Kindliness, Declares Expert.

AMONG American women, the ownership of dogs is on the increase, according to statistics recently compiled by dog experts in New York City. Moreover, it appears that women are more successful than men, as a general rule, in the training and management of dogs. This, it is said, is due to the fact that women are better "dog psychologists" than men.

Dog psychology, according to the scientists, is the important thing in bringing up a puppy. And one of the foremost dog psychologists in America is a woman—Miss Emily Buzby. She has written a brief and simple study of the elementary principles of dog-raising, which appears in the current issue of the Woman's Home Companion.

There is really no more excuse for an untrained troublesome dog than there is for an ill-mannered, annoying child, declares Miss Buzby. Your puppy must be taught to obey, to be cleanly in its habits, to refrain from jumping all over the unsuspecting guest, and from making a nuisance of itself at meal time. And all of it must be taught with kindness. Miss Buzby tells exactly how to do it.

Obedience, she points out, is easily taught. Call your dog by name, and when he comes to you, give him a tiny piece of apple or cracker. Tell him to "lie down," pressing lightly on his back. When he does it, give him another reward. Do this over and over.

If your dog runs away, reward him when he comes home. He will come back sooner the next time. If you whip him when he returns he will not wish to come back. Make a big to-do over every good little thing he does.

It is very necessary that a puppy be weaned and able to eat food properly before being taken from his mother. If you wish to have the pick of a litter or for any cause must buy your dog very young, pay for it but make arrangements for it to stay where it rightfully belongs until it is at least six weeks old, better eight.

He may cost anywhere from $1 to $500, but to begin with, irrespective of his worth, he needs good food, clean water, a warm bed, sunlight and exercise.

Miss Bray to Deliver Lecture on Art Tonight

Workers in Brass, Delhi, India

INDIA, BURMA and CEYLON

By Walter T. Biscoe

Possessing an intimate knowledge of magical India and its myriad inhabitants, Mr. Biscoe will initiate his audience into the enchantment of the Far East. The Ellora and Ajanta cave temples of the pre-Christian era . . . Delhi . . . and a host of other places will be visited. Mr. Biscoe will also describe various Indian customs, including a child wedding . . . and tell the immortal love story that led to the building of the world-famous Taj Mahal.

Half Century of Married Life Is Reviewed After Anniversary Party at Capital Home

Neighbors Fill Shorts' House On Anniversary

By Elizabeth Young.

A LITTLE CREATURE of fire and spirit, Adelaide Smith, of Bloomings Valley, Pa., must have been when, 50 years ago, the day after she passed her sixteenth birthday, she became the bride of tall, gangling, blue-eyed worshiping James Shorts, the Pennsylvania country boy who, on seeing her two years before at a neighborhood party, "wanted to know right straight who she was and where she was from."

"Go on ma, you tell her about that love affair," Pa Shorts half bashfully, half teasingly urged his better-half from the hallway where he was candidly formalizing his attire with the addition of a necktie and suit coat.

"Oh—! That love affair—!" sniffed ma, tossing her head, pursing her lips, but failing even to conceal the pride and happiness shining in her eyes. She was patently very tired. It was the let-down from the unaccustomed effort of the day before, when she had played the dual role of hostess and honor guest as neighbors and members of the Epworth M. E. Church triumphantly took possession of the Short's cheerful home at 1806 Bay street southeast, to honor the couple's fiftieth wedding anniversary. As the evening hours wore on to midnight, even standing room had been at a premium.

"Pa" Rocks With Mirth.

"You wait 'til I get through here, I'll bet I'll take you to the cellar," stormed Mrs. Shorts. But pa, with the bravado of the privileged bad boy, stood in the doorway, smacking his knees and rocking with mirth. This little spitfire held no terror for him.

Between them they pieced the story out. James Shorts, at 17, was by way of being a gay dog of a fellow up to the night his eyes fell on 14-year-old Adelaide Smith at a neighborhood dance. He was a farmer boy. She lived in town. He'd had many girls; she had several beaux. But from that night on their paths began converging.

On Grover Cleveland's election day they were married, and on the day he took the oath of office they set up housekeeping on a farm.

Mrs. Shorts looks back over 50 years of married life and marvels at the ignorance and the will-to-do which girls of her generation took with them into wifehood and motherhood.

Had to Learn the "Hard Way."

"I never had any training so far as work goes, but I sure learned," Ma Shorts recalled, with unconscious grimness. ("Now, ma., you know you could make good cookies long before you were married," her husband interposed.)

"No," Mrs. Shorts went on. "We didn't have all the ideas about cooking, and lightening housework, and raising babies, like they have now. If we had, it would have been easier for us. We had to learn it all the hard way 'round."

Three children they reared and two they lost—the firstborn son and second child, who was accidentally killed at 2½ years, and their third, a girl, who died at 13 months. Mr. Shorts' eyes filled at mention of the little boy's death. He removed his glasses to wipe them.

"Pa went off his handle, as you might say, the winter after that ha,pened," Mrs. Shorts recalled. Her eyes went to his, and their glances met like a handclasp.

"That was when I learned the healing value of work. It's unbearably hard to lose a child when the doctors have done all they could, but when it's by accident——," her voice died away.

Saved by Winter of Work.

"I picked him up——. My arms seemed numb to the elbows," Pa said unsteadily.

"I wasn't without a piece of work in my hands all that winter," Mrs. Shorts resumed. "I crocheted a bed spread, block by block, and then crocheted it together. I sewed, pieced quilts, embroidered. I never sat down without some work in my hands, and the days were full of work. Yes, it was work saved us that winter."

Then there was the time their other son, Hallie, now going on 39, teacher of history in Eastern High School, went off to war.

"I think it's all wrong—war," Mrs. Shorts said curtly. "I don't believe in war in any form or manner for any purpose. We get nothing out of it—not even our money back. We raise our children to be a comfort and a credit to our old age; and nobody but us mothers who let our sons go to war know the grief and the useless heartaches we suffer. We were lucky that ours came back. What must it have been to those mothers who never saw their sons again?"

Matter of "Give and Take."

"I don't know that I ever managed mine," she said. "Well, maybe——" she amended, as Pa looked a trifle dubious. "I used to try to get him to do things my way, of course. Sometimes he did; sometimes he didn't. Keeping a home together is a matter of give-and-take; give-and-take."

As for divorce, the way to avoid it is simply to have nothing to do with it, in Mrs. Shorts' opinion.

"I might have found plenty of reasons for divorce, if I'd been looking for 'em," said she, with a baffling glance at Mr. Shorts. "But I think the better way is just to put up with and keep still! But Pa was always pretty good. He always stayed at home good.

"But not her——" Pa chuckled. "I was asking her just the other day: Will you ever get old enough to just stay at home?"

"I think a woman should go," retorted Mrs. Shorts. "There's nothing makes a woman so narrow-minded as just staying at home with her nose to the grindstone the whole time. When anyone says 'Come on and go' to me, I get on my hat and go. I know my work will be there when I get back."

"Yes," said Pa, "I always say 'If she had bread in the oven, she'd turn off the light and go.'"

Looking back on 50 years of marriage—she celebrated her golden wedding anniversary Sunday—Mrs. James Shorts, of 1806 Bay street southeast, says the way to avoid divorce is simply not to consider it, whatever the provocation. In work she found the solace for sorrow. She doesn't believe in women staying too close to home.

Women Evince Wide Interest In House Races

Only Two of Seven Women Incumbents Considered "Sure to Win."

FEMININE interest in today's Congressional showdown is now centered on four or five focal points in the country, where women candidates as well as their supporters are enjoying a case of election day jitters.

While only two of the seven women incumbents are generally conceded victory, heads of the women's divisions of both major parties are loath to admit the possibility of defeat of their candidates.

"It's in the bag for all our women. Already I'm working on plans for the 1936 campaign," smilingly declared Mrs. James H. Wolfe, educational director of the Democratic women's division.

Mrs. Yost Confident.

"I'm sure all our women are going over. I'm on my way to West Virginia to vote," exclaimed Mrs. Ellis Yost, with equal pre-election assurance.

However, with two colorful women candidates on opposite sides in the New York representative-at-large race, and touchy situations surrounding a number of feminine aspirants in other States, some are doomed to disappointment.

Uneasiness Expressed.

Although Republican statisticians do not concede victory to Caroline O'Day over their candidate, Natalie Couch, they express uneasiness over the probable effect of Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt's hand in the campaign.

Democrats, on the other hand, feel sure of victory in New York, but can not mask a slight concern over the Indiana and Kansas situation, where the effects of the drought still hang like a sword over the heads of all political aspirants.

While Republicans expect Florence Kahn of California to win, Democrats are chuckling slyly over the strength of her opponent, Chauncey Tramutolo, Democrat of San Francisco.

Mrs. Miller to Address Poet Laureate League

Hope Ridings Miller, editor of the weekly verse column in The Washington Post, will be guest of honor and speaker at the meeting of the Poet Laureate League, Inc., which will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at the Hamilton Hotel. Mrs. Miller will discuss the recent trends in poetry, and the growing interest in American poets.

Books With Sound Effects Predicted

Prophet Visions Them in Form of "Talkie" Films.

Talking books along the same line as the talking motion picture are predicted by Samuel G. Hibben, director of applied lighting of the Westinghouse Lamp Co.

"Reading in bed will hold even greater pleasure when the talking book of tomorrow takes its place on the library shelf," Mr. Hibben said. "Book lovers will be able to recline in their favorite chairs and hear books acted with all the atmospheric trimmings of music and sound effects.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

How's Girl to Know When She's in Love, Youth Asks.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: A girl friend of mine is in something of a quandary and would like to have you help her. She finds herself surrounded by several boys who are showering her with attentions and her query is this:

Is it possible to love very much more than one person of the opposite sex? Or is it a case of mere liking for one, and more than liking for another? What do you think? Sincerely, SAMUEL.

DEAR SAMUEL: Are you sure it's a girl friend, and not yourself, who's in the quandary?

* * * *

Certainly it's possible to like very much any number of persons of the opposite sex, all at one and the same time, provided one is so fortunate as to know a number of persons who engender one's liking. As a matter of fact, it's also possible to be in love with one person, and to find that others still continue to exert their individual appeal: of mind, of manners, of personality.

* * * *

Until a girl falls in love, however—or allows herself to be convinced that she has—she is more or less without a yardstick for measuring the comparative importance of her liking for this, that, or the other youth. Yet when the immemorial malady seizes her, she instinctively recognizes the symptoms for what they are.

* * * *

I don't think the girl's emotions have reached a serious stage of development where any of her suitors are concerned. Neither she nor they will be blind to it, when and if such denouement unfolds.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Strictly Speaking

What About These?

1. What is the distinction between "ability" and "capacity?"
2. What States are called the Empire State of the North and the South, respectively?
3. What is the correct pronunciation of Bismarck?
4. What is the origin of the phrase "The goose hangs high?"

Check Answers Here.

1. Ability is active power, or power to perform, as opposed to capacity, or power to receive.
2. New York and Georgia.
3. BIS-mark, not BIZ-mark. In German the "s" before the consonant has a sharp, hissing sound.
4. Originally, "The goose hongs high," that is, cries high, as in fair weather; hence, prospects are good.

Robe de Style With Floor-Length Skirt Is Again Popular for Evening Wear

PARIS, Nov. 4 (AP).—Historical times stretching over the past 500 years have laid their touch on the winter mode which has been launched by Parisian designers.

But a touch is as far as the influence goes, for femininity's garb in general has been created on lines and with fabrics as modern as tomorrow.

The glamorous robe de style with its full, floor-length skirt, beloved by women for many years, is back for evening wear. In stiff velvets, satins and laces—black, white, purple, green and red—its full graceful skirt will sweep through the most exclusive drawing rooms this winter.

The Empire mode with a high waistline and toe-length skirt, though much less often seen, is also present, while the greatest evening favorite of all is a modification of the slender streamline silhouette which is the preferred profile for day.

Sweeping Sleeves on Wraps.

Evening wraps sometimes go back to the Middle Ages for their inspiration and appear in the fitted, floor-length, sweeping-sleeved designs worn by the beauties then. More often, they are cut on modern full-length lines furred with fox, or in three-quarter lengths.

The elegant formality of 1910 appears in the informal dinner mode which combines black wool or quilted satin suits having five-eighth length jackets with filmy lace or shimmering lame blouses and big hats.

The same vogue for suits marks the mode from dawn until dark. They appear in hairy tweeds worn with bright wool blouses for morning and in rich dark wools accompanied by blouses of velvet or lame for afternoon.

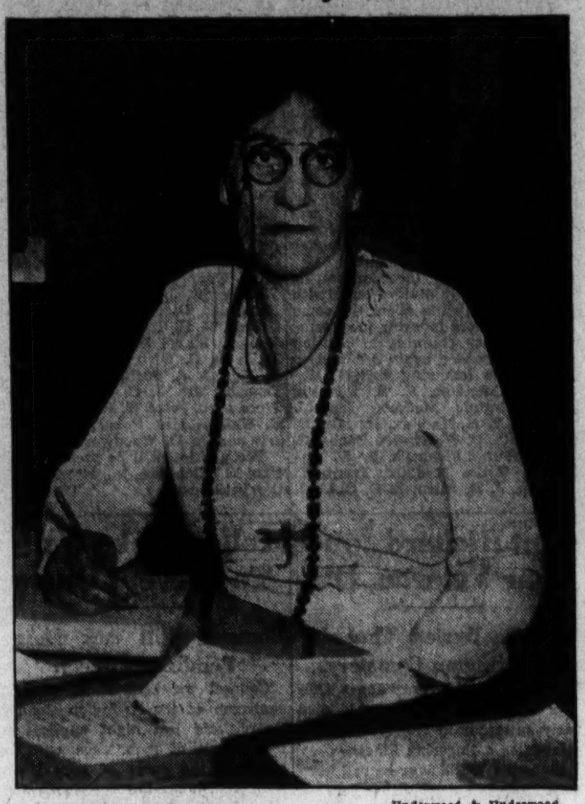
"Geographical" Gadgets.

Into the daytime mode (cut on [redacted] silhouette and topped by three-quarter le[redacted] coats to make ensembles, or by dark full-length buttoned coats to make other costumes) walk scores of interesting "geographical" gadgets. Cossack coats snugly belted to the waist and furred in astrakhan, Cossack toques, Tyrolian hats and Persian tunics are all seen.

Other novelties are "purely Paris." Molyneaux makes frocks whose sleeves are cut in one with gloves buttoning at the wrist so that they may be tucked back in the house. Schiaparelli puts three-tiered "parachute" capes, standing one over the other, on coats, and fashions muffs narrow and 2 feet long which she calls "dachshund."

At left is shown an evening gown in the romantic mood. Its wide skirt, quaint puffings and ruffled chiffon petticoat arouse memories of a bygone fashion era. The cloth is mauve taffeta. A cluster of violets is worn on the tight bodice, which has a low shoulder line.

Two Projects Are Pushed To Create Jobs for Women



Underwood & Underwood.

Increasing unemployment among women can be relieved only by the creation of new jobs for women, thinks Miss Bertha Neinburg, distinguished economist, who was recently appointed assistant director of the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

IF EVERY housewife could make her spare hours pay, the problem of meeting monthly bills from the butcher, the baker, and the candlestick-maker would cease to draw white threads through her hair.

If girls really in need of jobs had some hope of obtaining employment, and older women had some assurance they, despite age, could hold positions as long as they were competent and needed the money, the general morale of women would be much improved.

But how? What can be done for women in need of employment? What for the older woman wage earner? What channels can be opened whereby the housewife can become a contributor to the family purse and still have enough time to take care of domestic duties?

Time Called Critical.

"I am deeply grateful for the privilege of being with the Women's Bureau at this time," Miss Neinburg said yesterday at her office. "Women today are looking to us for help as never before, and projects now being worked out for them are both interesting and challenging. Women wage earners are, in fact, in one of the most critical periods of the history of women in industry. And I use the term 'industry' to include all lines of work."

Miss Neinburg arrived at this conclusion after she had made a special study of the opportunities for employed women.

"Obviously, then, new jobs for women must be created—which means there must be a public demand for the products of those jobs," she said. "We are now considering two projects, which if successful will create work for women, both inside and out of the home."

The first of these—in her words a "long-range" project—is the establishment of a porcelain industry.

Real Opportunity Seen.

"By porcelain, I mean fine, translucent china of the same quality as that is now imported," she explained. "There is much raw material for such an industry in this country, and it seems this is a real opportunity to develop an authentic American business that will give employment to thousands of women and many men.

A "pilot plant" for the designing and making of porcelain has already been planned under the supervision of the Tennessee Valley Authority, which is working on the project in cooperation with the Women's Bureau.

"We are also concerned with helping those thousands of women who would like to turn their spare hours into money," Miss Neinburg went on. "So another plan we are trying to complete pertains to the homemakers who feel the economic pressure so acutely they are willing to devote their spare hours to work at anything at almost any price. If worked out successfully, this plan will provide employment for girls and women who have neither household responsibilities nor paying occupations."

In this connection Miss Neinburg pointed out that many southern mountaineers, in great need at the present time, are skilled in handcrafts.

"For a number of years," she said, "educators and missionaries have tried to preserve the mountaineer's deft and distinctive hand production, which was a measure of self-culture and self-sustenance for a people cut off from the march of an industrialized civilization for a century and a half.

Valuable Rural Industry.

"According to surveys that have been made, 95 per cent of the handwork among the mountaineers is done by women. Now, if it were possible to create a demand for such handwork, woman power, virtually going to waste, could be developed into a valuable rural industry."

Such an industry, Miss Neinburg said, would be more successful if the work could be brought out of the home into a community center where the handcraft could be designed, made and marketed.

"We can't hope to compete with Europe in the making of fine embroidered work and intricately designed laces, but quilting, appliqueing, tufting and the making of hooked rugs are only a few of the types of handcraft that are truly American and would be much in demand if they could be made under supervision and marketing by a well-organized plan," she added.

"In a community center established for this purpose, women would have a chance to work under the direction of trained designers and would have good materials with which to work. Moreover, prices could be controlled more efficiently through a community center.

"If such a project could be worked out, and women in the South who are skilled in handcraft could turn their spare hours into money, while women with no domestic responsibilities could be permanently employed, economic conditions throughout the country would be improved. Other projects indigenous to different parts of the United States would naturally follow and the general earning power for both men and women would be increased."

Miss Neinburg's knowledge of economic conditions and the problems of wage earners is the result of extensive study and wide experience. She has been with the women's bureau since last April. For ten years previous to that time, she was economic consultant to both Federal and private concerns.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

UNLESS a boy of 8 is a very adept reader, he will shun books that are printed in small type and lacking in illustrations. Yet this does not mean that his reading efforts need be confined to the second-grader's literary diet. Publishers today are issuing many volumes that are excellent reading for the 8-year-old, and which entice him to read because of the glamorous illustrations, large type, wide margins and other inviting features.

"Animals in the Sun," by W. W. Robinson, is one of the attractive new offerings. The fact that Dr. William Beebe, the distinguished scientist, has contributed the introduction vouches for its authenticity.

"The Willow Whistle" and "Wind in the Chimney," both by Cornelia Meigs, are excellent choices since they both deal with pioneer days.

"Midget and Bridget," by Berta and Elmer Hader is appealing because it is the story of two little burros down on the Rio Grande.

If you are in the vicinity of the Washington Public Library, stop in the children's room and ask the librarians there for advice.

Guild to Hold Crafts School Benefit Today

Teaching Problem Children to Lead Useful Lives, St. Gertrude's Aim.

IN THE pleasant, sunlit rooms of St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts, on Sargent road, 30 little girls who would be unhappy and unable to learn in the average school otherwise, are being taught to lead adjusted useful lives.

For this school, which is operated by the Benedictine Sisters, under the direction of Dr. Thomas Verner Moore, is for children whose mentalities are below average, and whose present behavior problems are too great for their parents to handle. At St. Gertrude's these children are given academic work that takes them through the eighth grade, and they are taught arts and crafts that will enable them to become self-supporting, useful members of society.

Pervaded by Family Spirit.

The Ladies of St. Gertrude's Guild will hold a card party at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Wardman Park Hotel for the benefit of this school, which is not one of the organizations included in the Community Chest and is in great need of financial aid.

There is little of the "institutional atmosphere" about St. Gertrude's School. A family spirit pervades the place. The craftroom seems to be an ordinary schoolroom, where children are taught weaving, pottery, metal-work and embroidery.

The program is based on the theory that the child must not be allowed to feel inferior or conspicuous. The teachers are especially trained for the work, and long experience has taught them the best methods of dealing with the unusual quirks of the retarded child's mind. The problem child is capably handled at St. Gertrude's School. The teachers, under Dr. Moore's direction, attempt to get at the "basis of the child's misbehavior.

Training Held Remedy.

The child with an uncontrollable temper who makes a scene when her wishes are crossed learns soon after she arrives that her tantrums are not tolerated there as they were at home. When she learns that they are futile, she discontinues them. When there is a physical basis for the child's misbehavior, specialists prescribe the cure.

"We are convinced," Dr. Moore said, "that the problem of the retarded child is one of education and training. We must not think that because a child can not learn from books he is incapable of learning at all.

What Today Means

IF NOVEMBER 6 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m. and from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 10:30 p. m. until midnight.

You may be agreeably surprised by the thoughtfulness of a friend on this November 6. Your financial resources might possibly be increased through an unexpected source of supply. You may be confronted by a very humorous situation which might possibly involve you in a pleasantly surprising adventure, if you meet a friend who is from another section of the country. You will possibly meet a person whose charming personality will make a deep impression on you, and if you are not already married may become very attentive.

If a woman, and November 6 is your birthday, you are of a very artistic temperament, with a deep appreciation for the finer things in art, literature and music. You possess high ideals, many of which you are likely to see realized.

The child born on November 6, when it reaches its teens, should use its hands with surprising ease. Lesson in either drawing, music, or elocution may eventually be very helpful in this child's future life.

If a man, and November 6 is your natal day, cultivate people whose taste is similar to yours. You have a great deal of discernment, as well as discrimination. As a dramatic or art critic, painter, sculptor, author or clergyman you might find your proper sphere. The right kind of a wife should prove invaluable to you.

Virginia Plans Big Celebration Of Armistice

Roosevelt to Lead State's Observance; to Last 5 Days.

Richmond, Nov. 5 (AP).—An extended celebration of Armistice Day in Virginia will result this year from November 11, falling on Sunday, a survey today revealed.

W. Glenn Elliott, State adjutant of the American Legion, said that practically all of the 126 legion posts in the State plan observance of some sort, but that their activities will begin as early as Thursday and run through next Monday.

Prominent persons from outside the State have accepted invitations to participate in exercises at several places, among the visitors of note being Frank N. Belgrano, jr., national commander of the legion; Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, and Robert Fechner, national director of Civilian Conservation Corps camps.

To Be Led By Roosevelt.

President Roosevelt himself will lead the celebration on Virginia soil, coming to Arlington Sunday morning to lay a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. He will be accompanied by Mr. Belgrano, who later will address Legion Post, No. 24, at a luncheon meeting in Alexandria.

Fredericksburg, emphasizing the fact that the celebration is intended to honor soldiers of other conflicts as well as the World War, will hold exercises Sunday afternoon at the National Cemetery at Maryes Heights, where six Union soldiers who fell in the War Between the States will be reburied.

Their bodies were found in shallow graves in the course of excavations made in development of the National Battlefield Park, at Fredericksburg, and they are "unknown" except for buttons indicating the army to which they belonged. It is these exercises that Mr. Fechner will attend.

Roper to Speak.

Secretary Roper will make an address at Portsmouth Saturday morning at invitation of the legion post there.

Mr. Belgrano also is invited to be the principal speaker at Richmond's celebration which is to be climaxed by a large mass meeting Sunday night. On Saturday a legion demonstration is planned between the halves of the University of Richmond-Davis Elkins football game.

Incorporation of Marshall, Va., Will Be Sought Again in Court

Sentiment in Municipality Is Divided on Plan, With Rival Camps Claiming Equal Total of Votes; Action Is Set for Nov. 30.

Marshall, Va., Nov. 5 (Spl.).—Judge J. R. H. Alexander of the Circuit Court of Fauquier County will be petitioned again on November 30 by a group of Marshall citizens for the incorporation of this municipality. Incorporation was refused some weeks ago by Judge Alexander, who left the matter open for further consideration.

Sentiment over incorporation is said to be keenly divided here, with both sides claiming about the same number. Those favoring incorporation who are planning to petition Judge Alexander again are said to include the following signers:

The petition will be presented by Paul C. Richards, jr., attorney for the petitioners.

Capt. Richard Jones War Veteran, Dies

Will Be Buried Thursday in Arlington Cemetery.

Since the World War he had been with the Postal Savings Service, from which he was retired four years ago.

Entering the Army during the Spanish-American War, Capt. Jones went to the Philippines, where he was made top sergeant in Company G, Twentieth U. S. Infantry. During the World War he served as captain at Camp Fremont, Palo Alto, Calif.

Capt. Jones was a thirty-second degree Mason, and a member of the Henry Lawton Camp of Spanish War veterans.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ima E. Jones, and two daughters, Miss Margaret Jones and Mrs. L. J. Perrin.

Funeral services will be held at the W. W. Chambers southeast chapel Thursday at 11 a. m. Burial will be with Masonic and military honors in Arlington National Cemetery.

Kelley Seeks Writ To Prevent Ouster

Counsel Will Ask Delay Pending Appeal.

Counsel for Lyman M. Kelley, chairman of the Arlington County Board, said last night application for a writ of mandamus will be made to the court of appeals in Richmond today to force suspension of the order of Judge Frederick W. Coleman removing Kelley from office following his conviction at an impeachment trial. Kelley was found guilty of soliciting and accepting a bribe.

In removing Kelley from office, Judge Coleman ruled the office vacant and it became the duty of Judge Walter T. McCarthy, of the Arlington Circuit Court, to appoint a successor.

Should the writ be granted it will stay execution of the order until Kelley's counsel can perfect and file an appeal from the conviction which was returned October 19.

Hyattsville Roll Call Starts.

The annual Hyattsville Red Cross roll call will begin tomorrow under the leadership of Mrs. James Severe, local chairman, assisted by Mrs. Arthur Moon.

Mrs. Richards, Pioneer Capital Reporter, Dies

First Woman in Senate Gallery; Death Comes in Exeter, N. H.

Mrs. George Franklin Richards, pioneer woman correspondent in Washington, died yesterday at her home in Exeter, N. H., according to an Associated Press dispatch. She was 79.

Complications resulting from a broken hip, suffered in a fall in her home, ended the career of the first woman admitted to membership in the Senate press gallery. She was accredited to the Worcester (Mass.) Gazette and also represented several other New England papers.

For ten years she was the Senate press gallery's only woman member. Her spare, black-clad figure was a familiar sight on Capitol Hill through many administrations.

She was a stanch Republican and a militant opponent of suffrage for women. Among her closest friends were the late Secretary of War, John W. Weeks, and former Senator Moses, of New Hampshire.

Her Washington home was a small residential hotel on Capitol Hill. When it was torn down a few years ago she moved to the Dodge Hotel, a few blocks away.

Among her numerous newspaper duties was the writing of a column for her home-town weekly, which two weeks ago failed to appear for the first time in 24 years.

Mrs. Richards was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Bartlett Webster, of Manchester, N. H. Following her marriage to George Franklin Richards, she made her permanent home in Exeter.

Funeral Is Set Today For John T. Williamson

Funeral services for John Thomas Williamson, 73, prominent farmer of Pohick, Fairfax County, who died Sunday, will be held today at Pohick Episcopal Church, with the Rev. C. A. Langston, rector, officiating. Interment will be in the Pohick Cemetery.

Mr. Williamson is survived by his widow, Mrs. Annie Laura Williamson; one son, George Williamson, of Lorton, Va.; four daughters, Mrs. Allie Taylor, of Alexandria; Mrs. Earl Williamson, of Lorton, and Mrs. Ethel Childress and Miss Edna Williamson, of Pohick; three sisters, Mrs. James Lee and Mrs. Emma Penn, of Alexandria, and Mrs. Mary Pettit, of Fairfax, and a brother, Edwin Williamson, of Glendale, Md.

Mrs. Rambo Wins Speaking Contest

Eastern Shore Honors Go to Sudlersville Woman.

Denton, Md., Nov. 5 (AP).—Mrs. W. W. Rambo, of Sudlersville, today won the Eastern Shore district honors in the State farm women's speaking contest sponsored by the American Farm Bureau. She will compete in the State contest at College Park next Monday.

Second place in the Eastern Shore contest was won by Mrs. Evelyn Harris, of Betterton. Other speakers in the district contest were Mrs. Raymond Mueller, of Easton, and Mrs. Tatiana Sonderegger, of Marydale.

Mrs. Harry Williams, of Wharton, presided, and judges were E. I. Oswald, of College Park, and Mrs. Randall Forelein and Mrs. Hester Beall Provinsen.

Middleburg Hunt Rides to Hounds

Middleburg, Va., Nov. 5 (Spl.).—A chase of 55 minutes was enjoyed by the Middleburg Hunt this morning with 30 local hunters in the field.

Starting at Groveton at 10 a. m., a fox was jumped several hours later on the Walter Bowes farm. It took a northerly direction and the run took the hunters over the Ferguson, Creighton and Walter Simpson farms. The animal was finally denned on the Robert Wildman estate.

The weather was warm for fox hunting but the ground was damp and the hounds did excellent work. Frederick Warburg, of New York, rode with the local hunt today.

William S. Chichester Dies at Aquasco, Md.

Aquasco, Md., Nov. 5 (AP).—William S. Chichester, 74, former director of roads for Prince Georges County, died at his home here yesterday. Death was due to a heart attack.

Chichester until recently had been a member of the southern immigration committee and a director of the Southern Maryland Tobacco Association. He was born in Warrenton, Va., and established his home in Maryland about 40 years ago.

Charles Yauch, Tariff Expert, Is Dead at 60

Charles F. Yauch, 60, for many years chief of the sundries division of the United States Tariff Commission, died yesterday at the Garfield Hospital.

He was one of the original staff of the Tariff Commission, beginning work there in September, 1917, after 17 years in the Government service in the Bureau of Census, Departments of Interior and Commerce and the Interstate Commerce Commission. He was with the Tariff Board when it was abolished in 1912 and then was transferred to the cost of production division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

While on the staff of the Tariff Commission Mr. Yauch was in charge of many important investigations conducted by the commission, and, because of his expert qualifications, was intrusted with certain special missions in Europe. Mr. Yauch was an active adviser to Congressional committees and to members on the floor of Congress during debates.

Mr. Yauch is survived by his wife, Mrs. Blanche D. Yauch; a son, Charles Darby Yauch, and a daughter, Miss Mary Louise Yauch, all living at the Yauch home in the Clifton Terrace Apartments. He also leaves his mother, Mrs. Mary Yauch, and a sister, Miss Elizabeth Yauch, both of New Carlisle, Ohio, where Mr. Yauch was born December 21, 1873.

He received his early education in Ohio and attended the Ohio Northern University. He received his LLB from George Washington University in 1902. He was a member of the Masonic Lodge in his home city.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at the Hines chapel, Fourteenth and Harvard streets northwest. Burial will be at New Carlisle.

'Racket' Warning Is Given by HOLC

Fines Facing Mortgagees Who 'Mulct' Mortgagors.

Fines or prison terms, upon conviction, await mortgagees who agree to accept HOLC bonds in exchange for mortgages and then seek to require mortgagors to make further cash payments to the mortgagees, the HOLC warned yesterday.

Taking cognizance of a situation said to prevail in all States except New York, the corporation pointed out that if the appraisal of property is not high enough to warrant the corporation giving the mortgagee the full amount of his lien, the mortgagee is free, within a stated period, to withdraw his consent to accept the bonds. If he does not withdraw his consent he can not thereafter require the mortgagor to make up the difference in cash, it was stated, and any agreement to pay such difference is illegal.

In addition, the corporation pointed out, it is illegal for any mortgagee to require the applicant or a third party to pay any difference that may exist between the face and market values of the bonds.

Sales of Cash Registers Rise to $14,339,075

Dayton, Nov. 5 (AP).—An increase of 35 per cent in the volume of business for the first 10 months of this year of the National Cash Register Co. over the same period a year ago, was reported by the company officials today.

Sales for the period totaled $14,339,075, as against $10,562,100 for the same period last year, a gain of 65 per cent in sales in October over the volume for the same month last year also was reported, with sales for the period totaling $2,229,450.

Rise in 'Gas' Prices Seen In Maryland

Independents' President Says 'Hot' Oil Flow Has Stopped.

Head of Big Company Asserts War Will Go On to End.

Baltimore, Nov. 5 (AP).—H. A. Crouthamel, president of the independent gasoline dealers of the State, predicted today gasoline prices will rise from 2 to 3 cents a gallon within a week or ten days.

His statement, he said, was predicated upon stoppage of the flow of "hot oil" from Texas and depletion of the local supplies.

An official of a large oil company said "We'll keep putting the price down to meet competition as long as there is any competition." The price has dropped from 18.6 cents, including tax, to as low as 13 cents a gallon since a price war started about a month ago.

Crouthamel said action of the Petroleum Administration had prohibited the shipping of either crude or processed petroleum from any State unless it had been passed by a Federal board and given a "certificate of clearance," and that a board was sitting now in Texas to see that all shipped petroleum complies with the regulations.

Crouthamel said an attempt will be made in the next Legislature to lower the State gasoline tax on the grounds that immense amounts of the tax have been diverted from the State roads program. He listed $75,000 appropriated for oyster propagation in Chesapeake Bay in 1932, and $50,000 for other purposes in 1933.

He said that already this year, around a half million dollars has been taken from the gasoline taxes for use in other State departments.

"It would be all right if they gave us good roads with those big taxes," he said, "but the roads now under construction are being built with Federal funds."

He said the gasoline dealers were planning to oppose proposed additional gasoline tax for relief purposes.

Woman Slayer, Pardoned, Dies

West Virginia Widow, 35, Freed 2 Weeks Ago; Slew Husband.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—Pardoned from State's prison two weeks ago upon the advice of physicians, Mrs. Ida May Eddy Shaw, 35, is dead from cancer.

She was serving a life sentence for the murder of her husband, A. A. Shaw, the night of June 20, 1933.

Since her pardon by Gov. H. G. Kump, Mrs. Shaw had been bedfast at her mother's home.

Herley Lemon, her alleged paramour, who, the State charged, plotted with Mrs. Shaw to collect her husband's property and insurance, is serving a life term.

Building of Road Starts This Week

Nine-Mile Stretch Will Be Constructed on Route 50.

Winchester, Nov. 5 (Spl.).—Late this week it is expected that construction of a 9-mile gap on Route 50, the most direct and heavily traveled highway to Washington from this section, will be commenced. Convict Camp No. 29 is being established on the Goode estate, 3 miles east of this city, with Sergt. Brent in charge. E. F. Uebel will serve as superintendent of construction.

Most of the highway will be on new location, eliminating many hazardous bridges and curves. The work during the winter months will be conducted without disturbing the present highway. Early construction will be mainly between Winchester and Opequon, it was said, a stretch of approximately 4 miles. Options on approximately 50 per cent of the rights-of-way have been secured on this sector.

Winchester Firm Asked To Surrender Its Eagle

Richmond, Nov. 5 (AP).—D. R. Hunt, State NRA director, said today that the case of the Pine Motor Co., of Winchester, had been referred to United States Attorney Joseph Chitwood.

At the same time he made public a message to the company sent by the NRA board at Washington, stating that the Motor Vehicle Retailing Trade Code Authority had reported the company as violating the code in spite of warnings and asking that it surrender its Blue Eagles.

Two States Plan Celebration of Road Opening

Harrisonburg, Va., Nov. 5 (Spl.).—Gov. George C. Peery, of Virginia, and Gov. H. G. Kump, of West Virginia, will join hands Friday on top of the Shenandoah Mountain, west of Harrisonburg, to formally celebrate the modernization of another highway to connect Virginia and West Virginia, it was announced today by the Harrisonburg Chamber of Commerce, which is arranging the read completion ceremonies.

Gov. Peery accepted an invitation to make one of the addresses a few days ago. Gov. Kump accepted today. Representative Jennings Randolph, of the Second West Virginia District, and Representative Willis Robertson, of the Seventh Virginia District, also have accepted invitations. Members of the highway commissions of the two States are expected to attend.

The celebration wil be held on the State line on the crest of the Shenandoah Mountain, 3,000 feet above sea level. The completion of the highway opens the shortest route from central Virginia, such as Gordonsville, Charlottesville, and Richmond and Norfolk, to the Ohio River. It also will open a short route from central western Virginia through Pendleton County and counties in West Virginia, west of Pendleton, to Washington and other Eastern points, via the Lee highway.

The new road directly connects Harrisonburg and Franklin, W. Va., and traverses 30 miles of mountain scenery from Rawley Springs, Va., to Franklin, W. Va., which completed its end of the road from Rawley Springs to the State line last week. West Virginia constructed its end of the highway two years ago.

Middleburg Calls Probe of Accident

One Killed, One Hurt as D. C. Taxi, Car Crash.

Middleburg, Va., Nov. 5 (Spl.).—An inquest will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at the office of Dr. D. T. Saffer, in Middleburg, to determine the cause of the automobile accident this morning in which Jabe Hollingsworth, 22, of Middleburg, was instantly killed and Mrs. R. L. Edwards, of Washington, injured.

Hollingsworth, who was the manager of a filling station at Middleburg, was thrown from his car and his neck, legs and arms broken when his car collided head on with a Washington taxicab said to have been driven by R. L. Edwards, at a sharp turn on the Winchester-Washington pike, between Middleburg and Upperville. Both cars were demolished. Other occupants of Hollingsworth's car, Cletus Moore and Hackney Williamson, of Middleburg, received slight injuries. Mrs. Edwards was taken to the Emergency Hospital in Washington, Edwards is held as material witness. Town Sergt. E. W. Bosher and State Policeman Miller, of Frederick County, will testify at the hearing.

Hollingsworth is a son of the late John Hollingsworth, an old school Baptist minister, in Indian Valley, southwest Virginia. Among his survivors is a brother, C. R. Hollingsworth, of Loudoun County. The body will be shipped to his home in southwest Virginia for burial.

Milk Board to Hear Profit Plea Tomorrow

Richmond, Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—The State milk control board has arranged a hearing for Wednesday at 10 a. m., at which it will hear complaints of the Norfolk Independent Retail Grocers Association and the D. P. Stores regarding the profit allowance on milk sales in the Norfolk-Portsmouth market area.

It was said the issue apparently had narrowed down to a request from the retailers that they be allowed 2 cents profit instead of 1 cent on milk sold in pints. No complaint is expected to be heard against the 2-cent profit allowance on quarts or the 1-cent allowance on half pints.

The "battle of ballots" today holds unusual interest throughout Maryland and West Virginia, and in at least three Congressional contests of Virginia the outcome is awaited with interest. In West Virginia one of the "battles royal" is between the 29-year-old Rush D. Holt (Democrat), and the veteran, Senator Henry D. Hatfield (Republican), standing for reelection. Holt is a stanch New Dealer and declares that despite the fact he is a year younger than the senatorial requirement set by the Constitution, he feels sure he will be seated if elected. Maryland's gubernatorial race has attracted national attention with the 15-year-governor, Albert C. Ritchie (Democrat), standing for reelection with Harry W. Nice (Republican) offering the opposition. In 1919, Ritchie beat Nice for the Governor's chair by but 165 votes. Both Democratic and Republican camps in Maryland claim victory for their gubernatorial candidates. Dr. Joseph I. France (Republican), and George Radcliffe (Democrat) are contestants for the Maryland United States Senatorship now held by Phillips Lee Goldsborough. In Virginia, the nearby Seventh and Eighth Congressional Districts contests offer more than average interest. The New Deal is the campaign issue with Representative Howard W. Smith, Alexandria (Democrat), incumbent, being opposed in the Eighth District by John Locke Green, Clarendon (Republican), and Representative A. Willis Robertson, Lexington (Democrat), incumbent, having J. Everett Will, Luray (Republican), as his opponent. Both Democratic representatives are stanch New Dealers, while Green and Will have rapped many policies of the Roosevelt Administration.

Cities Expected To Get Liquor Cut of $300,000

Richmond, Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—How much Virginia cities may be expected to obtain as their share of alcoholic beverage control board profits for the current year is a matter which officers of the board prefer to leave to private speculation, they indicated today.

But, by some juggling with the best available figures obtainable from the board, it was deduced that under present provisions of the law localities of the State have no reason to expect much more than $300,000 to divide among them.

The audit report of the first quarter of the A. B. C. board's operations showed a net profit of $192,300, but A. B. Clarke, statistical secretary of the board, pointed out that this could not be used as basis for an annual estimate since only a few retail stores were in operation for a short part of the period.

Assuming that heavier sales later in the year will make up for the lighter earlier months and that last month's average will be representative of the year as a whole, the annual volume of business would be around $12,000,000, and if the 17.5 per cent profit ratio is maintained the board's earnings would approximate $2,100,000.

Under provisions of the control law, the first $1,675,000 of annual profits goes to the State and localities are to receive two-thirds of all additional profits, distributed on the basis of population.

Thus, if the profit this year should be $2,100,000, there would be $425,000 above the State's exclusive figure and the localities would get approximately $283,000.

Along the Tri-State Trail

It appears that Harry W. Nice, the Republican candidate for the Maryland Governor's chair, believes that "the early bird catches the worm."

Yesterday morning, Nice was up before sunrise and off to Locust Point, near Baltimore, where he addressed a group of longshoremen.

After the address, Nice and his audience had to wait eight minutes before the sun peeped over the horizon.

And speaking of the early bird, we prophecy that there are gaing to be plenty of early birds chasing worms this morning.

The bird will be the campaign worker anxious to get the vote out for his particular candidate, and the worm will be the voter, who, incidentally, becomes an extremely important person just before any election.

And indications are that there will be plenty of "early birds" right in the back yard of the District of Columbia—the State of Maryland.

Virginians, on the other hand, will have few "early birds," it appears, and when Father Cavalier has counted votes tonight he probably will gain the idea that the worms had little chasing from the birds. In other words the Virginia election is expected to be ultra-quiet with hardly a 60 per cent normal vote out.

Speaking of elections. Do you old-timers remember the days of bonfires?

Well, if you do and if you live in Baltimore the bonfire will just remain a memory tonight, regardless of who wins. The reason? Read this straight from Police Commissioner Charles D. Gaither to all police officers:

"Exercise the strictest vigilance to prevent the appropriation and collection of material for bonfires, as well as making of such fires in the streets and to arrest all persons offending against the law in this particular."

Ommert chased a rabbit into a hollow log and stuck his arm through a hole in the log. The rabbit got out but Ommert didn't. It took him half an hour to extricate the arm.

Jail Official's Ouster Sought

Action at Richmond Based on Gangsters' Escape.

Richmond, Nov. 5 (AP).—Commonwealth's Attorney T. Gray Haddon today indicated that tomorrow or Wednesday he would present in Hustings Court a rule ordering City Sergt. John G. Saunders to show cause why he should not be removed from office.

The rule will be issued on recommendation of a special grand jury which recently investigated the escape from the jail of Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, convicted gangster murderers.

The docket in Hustings Court is to be called tomorrow and at that time it is expected a date will be set for the trial of Mrs. Elizabeth Mais, mother of Robert, who is charged with aiding and abetting in the murder of Patrolman W. A. Toot, who was shot to death by the gangsters in their escape.

Walter Alexander, 65, Veteran Reporter, Dies

Baltimore, Nov. 5 (AP).—Walter L. Alexander, 65, veteran reporter of the Baltimore Sun, died today. He had been confined to his bed for several days.

Born in Havre De Grace, he worked as a boy on weekly newspapers in that section. His work attracted the attention of Baltimore newspapers and he came here to work on the American. He joined the Sun 23 years ago as its City Hall reporter.

News Briefs of Maryland

Cumberland—Officers and members of the Woodmen Circle from a number of Maryland towns will meet here November 9 for the district convention of the organization. Mrs. Rose L. Canada, of Baltimore, national director and State manager, and Mrs. Fannye Kolb, of Washington, State president, will oe among the officials attending.

Crisfield—Somerset County's Nursery School, the only institution of its kind on the Eastern Shore, and one of ten which have been established outside of Baltimore as a Federal emergency relief education project, has opened here with a lar je enrollment.

Frederick—Arrest of a second colored suspect in connection with an attempted attack on Geraldine Kreh, local playgrounds instructor, on Halloween night, has been announced by police here. The man, William Carter, 22, is said to have been in the vicinity of the place where Miss Kreh was seized. William Mahammit, 16, also is being held.

Annapolis—Pete Schifia, of the CCC camp at Fort George G. Meade, Md., was sentenced to three days in jail here on charges of having assaulted another CCC worker. Schifia, police said, was drunk and used a knife in the assault.

Frederick—The Frederick County Welfare Board reported that from last April to October 1 an average of 700 men have been employed on work relief projects each week. Thirty-five projects were carried on, including work on Mount St. Mary's College athletic field at Emmittsburg.

Byrd Confers With Hotel On Banning Jews

Also Takes Up Question of Liquor Sales at "Old Point."

Winchester, Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—Senator Harry Flood Byrd and J. Wesley Gardner, operator of the Chamberlin-Vanderbilt Hotel at Old Point Comfort, conferred here yesterday on two questions recently raised concerning policies of the hostelry.

After the conference the Senator indicated that both the matter of liquor sales and the exclusion of Jews were discussed but he declined to go into details.

"We reached no conclusion," Senator Byrd said.

Advertisements indicating that Jews were not welcomed as guests at the Chamberlain recently drew criticism from Rabbi L. D. Mendoza, of Norfolk, while the Virginia Alcohol Beverage Control Board has been seeking a way to exercise its authority over the hotel for several months.

Located on an Army reservation, the hotel has taken the position that it was not subject to the regulations of the board. Under the Virginia laws the sale of hard liquor is restricted to State dispensaries.

Senator Byrd entered the discussion a week ago when he promised to seek Senate action to give Virginia authority over the hotel unless the War Department, which controls the Fort Monroe area, took steps to regulate the hotel.

The conference between the Senator and Gardner was planned following the former's statement in Washington.

McMahon Asks County to Vote Against Ritchie

'Loyal Democrat' Assails 'Machine'; Frederick Fight to Be Close.

Oakland, Md., Nov. 5 (AP).—Hugh Carey McMahon, who said he always has been and still is a "loyal Democrat," today urged voters of Garrett County to oppose the "Ritchie machine."

McMahon, independent candidate for State Senate, recently ruled off the official ballot by the courts, is suing J. Frank Browning, president of the Garrett County board of election supervisors, for $10,000 on a contention that the election official gave him false information about the time of filing.

In his anti-Ritchie statement, McMahon said: "While I have always been and am still a loyal Democrat, I consider the Ritchie machine the worst enemy of true Democracy that has ever appeared in this State. That is why I ran as an independent. I call on all my Democratic friends in Garrett County to help me rid our beloved party of this tyranny and repudiate this organization on election day."

Frederick, Md., Nov. 5 (Spl.).—One of the most active and, in some respects, one of the most bitter political campaigns in a generation in Frederick County came to a close tonight. In accordance with a tradition, local candidates wound up their pleas for votes in their home communities.

Owing to the close affiliated vote in this country, Republicans and Democrats have divided honors for county offices for years. According to the figures of the election supervisors, the registered vote is 29,679—Democrats, 14,884; Republicans, 14,392; declined to affiliate, 241; independent, 110, and a few Socialists. It is the first time at any general election, perhaps, in the history of the county that Democrats have a majority, mainly on account of aggressive work on registration days for the past several years and the fact that Democrats have been far more active in purging names of disqualified voters from the books. Aware of the large element of independent voters in this county, conservative persons of both parties predict that a mixed county ticket will be elected.

A different situation exists with the head of the State tickets—candidates for Governor. Harry W. Nice, Republican, is picked to win over Gov. Ritchie by a majority ranging from 1,500 to 2,500. It is generally known that many Democrats who voted for Dr. Charles H. Conley, Frederick physician, at the primary election, will not support Gov. Ritchie. This statesemtn comes from some of the most active leaders of the Conley campaign, and its credibility is accepted by the most ardent Ritchie supporters.

Women Relief Workers Packing FERA Meat

Cordova, Md., Nov. 5 (AP)—Women workers, selected from Talbot County relief rolls, are handling most of the work connected with packing frozen beef received here from Federal emergency relief slaughter houses.

The local packing house, under the supervision of three Federal inspectors, is running two 8-hour shifts daily to handle the eight carloads of frozen beef which has arrived for canning.

Church Body Meets Today In Virginia

Fredericksburg Session to Continue Through Thursday.

Fredericksburg, Nov. 5 (Spl.).—More than 200 members of the Virginia branch of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Episcopal Church will open their forty-fourth annual meeting here tomorrow.

Business sessions and services will be held at St. George's and Trinity Episcopal churches, with the pastors, the Rev. Dudley Boogher and the Rev. J. Jacqueline Ambler, officiating. The meeting will continue through Thursday.

Tomorrow's program will consist of registration of delegates throughout the afternoon, a meeting of the executive committee and diocesan officers at 3:30 p. m., and a missionary mass meeting at 8 p. m. Speakers at the mass meeting will be the Rev. P. A. Smith, of Japan, and the Right Rev. Bishop H. St. George Tucker.

Morning sessions Wednesday will be business meetings of the Woman's and Junior Auxiliary units, preceded by religious services at St. George's. Reports of convocation secretaries, the Conference of Little Helpers, and discussions on the triennial meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary will take place Wednesday afternoon. Speakers will be the Rev. B. B. Coner Lile and the Rev. Leigh Ribble.

Services at Trinity Church Wednesday will begin with a mass meeting at 4:15 p. m. for the Junior Auxiliary, and will conclude at 8 p. m. with a general mass meeting. Clergymen officiating at the night service will be the Rev. Mr. Tucker, the Rev. W. Roy Mason, and the Rev. George Mayo.

Addresses Thursday will be given by Dr. Harry Taylor, of China, the Rev. R. Cary Montague, and Miss Sallie Deane, member of the national executive board from the Province of Washington.

North Beach Boils In Race For Mayor

Many Here Will Take Day Off to Vote There.

The nearly 500 voters at North Beach, Md., popular summer resort for Washingtonians, are in a lather today. It's all over the hottest election fight the town has seen in 25 years.

Louis A. Weed is seeking to unseat Mayor Michael Lane.

The fight between Gov. Ritchie and Harry A. Nice has been enveloped in the dust arising from the bitter campaign being waged by Lane and Weed.

Mayor Lane is standing on his past record, telling the voters Mr. Weed isn't quite up to being Mayor of North Beach. Mr. Weed is making the long sloping beach ring with his promises of "economy and low taxes."

Many of the voters are Washingtonians, who will have to take time off from work in order to vote. It is believed the local election will cause something near a record vote.

Work on Homesteads Near Luray Is Halted

Luray, Va., Nov. 5 (Spl.).—Work was stopped this afternoon on the homestead housing projects of the Federal Government near here. No reason was given.

The houses are being built for landowners of the Shenandoah National Park area who have been ordered to vacate their homes following sale to the park authorities.

Good morning! We seldom devote this space to the mention of any special event in our store. A 65th Anniversary in a Washington store is, however, more than a store event. We are actually celebrating the number of years which passed between the ends of the depressions following the War between the States and the World War.

Attendance at Picture Theaters Gains Old-Time Levels With Season's Start

Motion Picture Business Takes Sudden Upturn

New Season at Old Peaks; Columbians Begin Work; Theater Chat.

By Nelson B. Bell.

A definite upturn has occurred in motion picture attendance in Washington and surrounding territory.

This was positively stated to this writer yesterday by two of the most important exhibitor-executives making their headquarters in the National Capital.

Frequent reference has been made here to the extraordinary revelation made two years ago, when the depression finally tightened its talons on the national seat of government, that something in the neighborhood of 580,000 paid admissions had been lost over a period of 30 weeks by one exhibiting organization alone, operating in this territory, and that approximately 262,000 of these were within the boundaries of the District of Columbia.

Sufficient time has not elapsed as yet this year to give a fair cross-section view of the probable recovery that will be registered by the end of the 1934-35 season, but if the attendance records of the first nine weeks of the new season can be maintained with fair average consistency, the attendance levels and gross receipts of the 1928-29 peak years will be closely approximated.

No Figures, Please.

Because this department is not in the habit of disclosing box-office statements or other fiscal facts that are primarily the concern of the exhibiting organizations, rather than of either this column or the general public, we will go into no particularization as to the evidence presented that recovery actually seems to have set in.

It is, nevertheless, heartening that an industry that has suffered as severe a slump as any—although possibly a little more belated than some—is on the way back to normal business.

And coming this late in the day, this observation certainly can not be construed as campaign propaganda!

One of yesterday's agreeable and welcome visitors was Herb Cruikshank, a figure of some celebrity in the conduct of the cinema, who dropped in with Master Dan Terrell of the Warner organization in the interests of "Gentlemen Are Born" to be given its world premiere in the Earle Theater, on Friday, with Franchot Tone and Margaret Lindsay in the stellar roles. Described as a college story, the reservation still is made that "Gentlemen Are Born" is not the usual college yarn, but one which has a dramatic background of genuine substance that conveys a concrete and cogent thought without impairing its splendid rating as a fast-moving and interesting modern entertainment. Mr. Cruikshank could convince you in a minute that this is one of the films you want to see.

Columbians Open Season.

Tonight at 8:30 the Columbia Players will inaugurate their thirteenth season with a production of Lulu Vollmer's "Moonshine and Honeysuckle," to be given in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest. The play will be repeated tomorrow night at the same hour in the same place.

Aurora Poston is directing the production and the settings have been designed by Jane Lasater Rubey.

Course Tickets on Sale.

Tickets are on sale at the T. Arthur Smith Agency, 1330 G street, and at the box-office. Reserved seats are 85 cents for this play, or $3.50 for the Players' full season of six plays.

As one of the foremost amateur groups exerting their talents in the rich Thespic fields of Washington, the Columbia Players deserve support for a conscientious adherence to the best precepts of the drama, an indefatigable enthusiasm for the theater and an individual and concerted earnestness that has resulted in their designation many times as the prize-winning organization of the annual spring one-act play tournaments.

"Moonshine and Honeysuckle," it will be recalled, was the play selected to open the season after Frank B. Elser's "Low Bridge" was withdrawn from amateur performance, by reason of its recent conversion by Marc Connelly and Max Gordon into "The Farmer Takes a Wife," the play seen a few weeks ago at the National, which went on to New York to score one of the season's successes on Broadway.

"The Silver Cord," Sidney Howard's masterful drama of conflict between the over-possessive mother—one of the most distasteful roles to this commentator ever written into a play, and yet one of the most forceful and impressive—and her son's wife, will be presented by the students of the Studio of Theater Arts, under the direction of Constance Connor Brown, as their first public production. The play is scheduled for the Wardman Park Theater the second week in December. The students of the stagecraft course, under Frank Westbrook, assistant director, already are working on the two interesting sets the play requires.

Concerning Miss Davies' Jump.

Jack L. Warner, youngest of the famous Freres Warner, blessed with a gorgeous sense of humor, announced the signing of the contract with Marion Davies and Cosmopolitan Productions, effective January 1, as "the greatest forward step since we revolutionized the motion picture industry with talking pictures"—so I am told by that irrepressible telegrapher, Mr. Leicester Wagner, chief operative of the United Press' Hollywood finger-in-the-wind department.

"Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers," the press agent is said naively to have added, "telephoned congratulations to all concerned as soon as he heard the news that the momentous contract had been signed."

Marion Movies.

At any rate, Marion Davies will desert her $100,000 dressing room on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot January 1, and with the Cosmopolitan Corporation move over to Burbank.

The primary reason for the change, it is learned from Mr. Wagner, was that Marion was talked out of making what may be the best picture of the year—"The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

William Randolph Hearst, as head of Cosmopolitan, bought the play for Marion. M-G-M producers, however, had other ideas, and began a quiet campaign of persuasion that the role was not fitted for Miss Davies. Instead, it was given to Norma Shearer, and now the picture is setting box office records all over the country.

During the days he was married to Joan Crawford, Doug Fairbanks, jr., remarked, "My wife ought to shoot me and marry a production executive." His implication was plain. Norma Shearer is the wife of Irving Thalberg, M-G-M production executive, and Norma was getting all the best stories.

And still is, more or less!

Neck-and-Neck Note.

Film Table

Screen and stage bills will be presented on the following schedules at the theaters named:

Palace—"The Merry Widow," at 12 noon, 2:25, 4:50, 7:15 and 9:40 p. m.

Earle—"Happiness Ahead," at 11 a. m., 1:40, 4:25, 7:05 and 9:50 p. m. Stage shows at 12:45, 3:30, 6:10 and 8:55 p. m.

Loew's Fox—"Transatlantic Merry-Go-Round," at 10:40 a. m., 1:30, 4:15, 7:05 and 9:55 p. m. Stage shows at 12:30, 3:20, 6:10 and 9 p. m.

RKO-Keith's—"Gift of Gab," at 12:05, 2:05, 4:05, 6:05 and 10:05 p. m.

Columbia—"Love Time," at 12 noon, 2, 3:55, 6, 7:50 and 9:50 p. m.

Metropolitan—"One Night of Love," at 11:30 a. m., 1:30, 3:30, 5:30, 7:30 and 9:30 p. m.

Tivoli—"Count of Monte Cristo," at 2, 3:55, 5:50, 7:45 and 9:40 p. m.

Ambassador—"Happiness Ahead," at 6:15, 8 and 9:45 p. m.

Pat Stands Pat on Hassock!

Or perhaps "stands" is not precisely the word. At any rate, Miss Patricia Ellis appears to be completely complacent perched on this luxurious lozenge of satin on the set of "A Perfect Weekend," now in work at the Warner Brothers' West Coast studios. Miss Ellis is one of the most attractive and most gifted of the younger stars of the Warner lot. "A Perfect Weekend" will be along.

Mary Ellis to Appear in Modernized Operatic Film; Montgomery and O'Sullivan Seem "Teamed;" Gossip of the Hollywood Lots.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, Nov. 5.—The operatic training of Mary Ellis is going to stand her in good stead when she appears in the movies. Most probably as the first selection for this star will be a modernized version of "Cavalleria Rusticana," by Mascagni, which has served many prima donnas on the stage.

MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN.

It is likely that the location will be Sicily as in the original work, but it will be brought down to date, and Miss Ellis will be heard in some of the principal arias of the opera. The screen version is being prepared under the supervision of Benjamin Glaser, and will be directed by Jean Negulesco, who assisted in the filming of "Kiss and Make Up," with Cary Grant and Helen Mack.

Most interesting is the fact that Richard Bonelli may be engaged to sing with the star, provided he can secure a release from his operatic engagement. Bonelli is heard in some of the operatic excerpts in "Enter Madame."

Plots in Reverse.

Birth of a new film team is hailed. "Hide Out" apparently means things for Robert Montgomery and Maureen O'Sullivan as copartners. And this time instead of Bob being the crook, Maureen is to be the bad girl.

In "Hide Out," Montgomery is revealed as the much-involved hero, while Miss O'Sullivan is the beneficent influence in his life.

M.-G.-M. has just made plans to cast the two in "Forgotten Girl," written by Wilson Collison. In this production Montgomery will appear as the son of a famous lawyer, also in the legal profession, who defends a girl of the streets in order to make a record for himself. And, as might be imagined, he falls in love with her.

In Society No Less.

Still awaiting the resumption of his career at Columbia Studio, where he is under contract, Gene Raymond will have the opportunity to play a good lead opposite Barbara Stanwyck in "North Shore." He is to be a society youth in the set that considers Miss Stanwyck persona non grata, because she was not reared in the smart Long Island environment where most of the action takes place.

DeMille Is Not Idle.

Following "The Crusades," it looks as if Cecil B. DeMille would plunge right into a story of the seldom exploited Revolutionary period of American history with the filming of "Benedict Arnold." The adaptation is to be in charge of Bartlett Cormack, and, as planned, the story is to revolve about the wife of Arnold rather than himself.

This will be the third historical feature in quick succession for DeMille, his last modern story having been "This Day and Age," which preceded "Cleopatra."

Seemingly the controversy which waged over producing a "Benedict Arnold" subject has somewhat abated.

Jules Verne Revived.

The old ambition to make a subsea feature right at the bottom of the ocean again has been resurrected. Most such subjects start out bravely with such an ambition, but end up in the good old movie tank, which is more reliable and controllable than are the marine depths.

However, with "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" it is asserted there will be a definite departure from all past precedent. Considerable footage belonging to Phil Goldstone is already available, and more is to be shot about the Bahamas, in the Mediterranean and in the South Seas, it is stated. Also some of the characters will be required to speak under water.

The Jules Verne epic has been produced several times before in movie history.

Picture Pageant In Review.

Arrival of Merle Oberon is anticipated within a month. Maurice Chevalier is also expected in about three weeks. They are to appear together in "Folies Bergere."

E. E. Clive, well known hereabouts from his appearances on the stage, has been assigned a part in "The Little Minister." This is directly due to his work as the customs inspector in "The Gay Divorcee."

"Clive of India" commenced shooting yesterday and is expected to cost close to $1,000,000 before it is through. Ronald Colman is the star and is to follow this feature with two others made at Twentieth Century.

Reports to the contrary notwithstanding, Emanuel Cohen is still very much "in" at Paramount. Word to this effect was received from the East yesterday confirming his retention.

John Philip Sousa's martial tune "Semper Fidelis" was the first musical composition to be officially adopted by the United States Government, and it is the only tune except "The Star-Spangled Banner" to have this honor. Long before this country officially accepted "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the National anthem, Sousa's march was adopted for the Marine Corps. It's title is the motto of the Marines.

Sousa, who was born 80 years ago today in Washington, D. C., began his career as a violinist, and at 17 was the leader of an orchestra. He composed more than 100 marches during his career, to become the march king of the world, and, strange as it seems, he died in March.

The word "scan" has come to mean in popular usage "to look at hurriedly," yet, strange as it seems, the word has just the opposite meaning. Its correct definition is "to go over and examine point by point."

Aa is the most popular name in the world for rivers, and justly so, because it comes from the word meaning water. Of the 40 or more rivers in Europe named Aa the more important are: Two in Russia emptying into the Gulf of Riga, one in France flowing through St. Omer, one in Switzerland emptying into the Aar, and two in Germany, the Westphalian Aa and the Munster Aa.

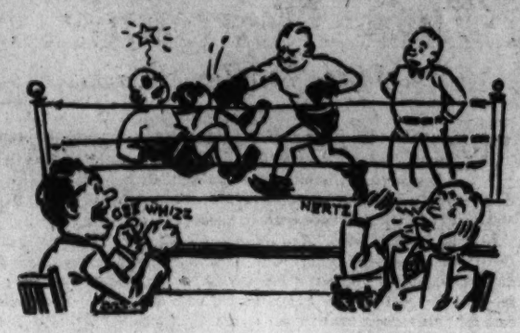
LAST DAY :: EDMUND LOWE :: "GIFT of GAB"



Stanley Walker, the famous city editor, groups sports writers into two schools: the "Gee, whiz!" boys and the "Aw, nuts!" scoffers. The "Gee, whiz!" group thinks all Ath-a-letes are just swell, but the "Aw, nuts!" gang covers a prize fight with the firm conviction that if the victim lives, it's a fake. But we're going to be like Caesar and divide all gall into three parts, adding a "Washington Post" division to the "Gee, whiz!" and the "Aw, nuts!" sections. Post sports writers have personalities all their own. Sometimes they express themselves "Oh, yeah?" (like when the Nats thought they were playing in the same league with Dr. Beebe and kept on going down) and sometimes "Oh, boy!" (like when George Washington almost licked Vandy). These fellows actually like sports . . . and their thrilling accounts of an event . . . a ping-pong match or a World's Series . . . are the next best thing to a ringside seat.

Take Shirley Povich, sports editor, whose column, "This Morning," starts the day off right for thousands of men. Shirley, the dean of local baseball experts, is also a recognized authority on football. He's so good the managing editor consults him before betting on the college teams.

But if you're a golf player, Dave Herman is your man. Dave knows this game from the first tee to the last lost ball, and his column, "Down the Fairway," is popular even with the caddies.

Walter Haight, The Post's horse racing expert, tells you about the bangtails. On some newspapers, they find a reporter who once picked a horse that really won, and make him racing editor . . . but we didn't select Walter that way. He really understands horse races. Too, you'll like Bill Benning's daily feature column about the ponies.

When leather's flying, and the fans are yelling for a knockout, you'll find Bill McCormick sitting there counting the black eyes. Bill knows more boxers than Tex Rickard did. His column is "Around the Ring."

Then there's Lewis F. Atchison, who covers football so well that the guards and half backs read him the first thing each Sunday morning to find out how well they played. He's such an authority on football that he even understands the 1934 rule-book.

And last, but not least, we present John Vosburgh, who writes sports from the high school angle. He's good, too.

In short, no matter what you demand on the sporting menu, you'll find The Post's bright lads eager to serve it up for you, piping hot. Their stories are colorful . . . complete . . . accurate . . . intelligent . . . and they're waiting for you each morning in

Tigers Only Major Grid Leader in 1933 to Continue Pace This Year

With Shirley Povich

WITH all due respect to Vanderbilt, the George Washington team that lost Saturday's 7-to-6 game at Griffith Stadium was an inefficient, bungling outfit that almost gained a tie score despite itself. Them's harsh words, mebbe, but as one who picked Vanderbilt to win, this department thinks it can speak freely.

All week I had been listening to the wailing and moaning of the G. W. coaching staff which was making dire predictions of Saturday's outcome in view of the manner in which the Colonials massacred their own plays in practice. This bleating fell on the skeptical ears of this department, which put it down to the usual pregame gloom of football coaches, which is proverbial.

But, up there in the press box, it was apparent to this observer that the fears of Jim Pixlee, et al, were, indeed, not groundless. The sophomores in the G. W. back field were indeed sophomorish in their handling of the ball, and a couple of men in the G. W. line were no great help to the ball carriers.

Ball Handling Is Shoddy.

THESE bungling backs, Tuffy Leemans excepted, made a shambles of what apparently was a delicately-timed G. W. running game by their shoddy handling of the ball. Attempting to open up their running attack for the first time this season with their full stock of spinners and reverses, the Colonials' offensive was pathetic, resulting in five fumbles, numerous losses and not a single sustained drive.

Throughout the afternoon Leemans was virtually running up the backs of his blockers, Kavalier, Brewer, Reeves and Hanken, who were so slow afoot they couldn't get out of his way, to say nothing of clearing his path. This department was out of earshot of what was said in the G. W. huddle, but if Leemans didn't raise hob with his lethargic mates, he is altogether too easy-going.

The G. W. guards who were supposed to pull themselves out of the line on the off-tackle plays and end sweeps, notably Kolker and Mann, were also gumming up the works for the G. W. running attack by their slowness in getting around to their appointed duties. Strangely enough, these same linemen and backs, who were bearcats on the defense, couldn't bestir themselves to the same point of enthusiasm when G. W. had the ball.

Line Holes Are Plugged.

THE intricate spinner plays and reverses which Pixlee's team used with such effect last year, and which places a premium on the timing of the motions of the back-field men, were ruined last Saturday by the indecisive play of Kavalier, Brewer and Hanken, who were receiving the ball on the wrong side of the passer, getting it to Leemans a full second behind schedule and otherwise slowing the attack. Consequently, holes that had been opened by the line were closed when the G. W. backs reached the appointed spot.

Twice Bill Parrish was loose in unprotected territory on passing plays with clear fields for touchdown runs, and twice his mates in the back field had handled the ball so slowly that they were thrown for losses or were forced to ground the ball to avoid a loss. This was a pass that was supposed to evolve from a double reverse, but Parrish waited in vain for a pass to eventuate.

The three kicks that Vandy blocked were spoiled for G. W. in the same manner in each case. On each occasion Vandy set the same trap for the kicker. Three Vandy men would concentrate at one end of the line, rushing in at the snap of the ball, two taking out the blockers and the third blocking Leemans' kick. It worked three times and the G. W. blockers have not yet caught on, as the saying goes.

Have You Heard This One?

IT IS only Tuesday, unless the calendar fails me, but the laugh of the week is the report that Clark Griffith is seriously considering solving the managerial problem of his Nats by managing the team himself. Methinks Mr. Griffith's sleeve was in close proximity to his esophagus when he made that statement, and I have no doubt that he did.

I fell for the same gag back in 1928 when Griff let Bucky Harris out as manager and speculation, as now, was also rife as to the identity of the new manager of the Nats. I almost fell for it again in 1932 when Griff gave Walter Johnson his walking papers as pilot; but, pardon me this morning if I seem to be skeptical.

As long as Griff thinks he can keep the hot stove league fueled, he will delay appointment of his new manager until the last possible moment. His mind is made up now, little doubt of that, but the Old Fox likes to keep the fans in suspense.

On some quiet day in the middle of the week late this month, when his announcement of his new manager can command maximum space in the public prints, Griff will name his man. But, as far as managing the club himself is concerned—well, he likes to have his little joke.

U. S. Stars Hit 4 Home Runs In Japan; Idolized Ruth Fails

TOKYO, Nov. 5 (AP).—A capacity crowd of 65,000 jammed into Meiji Stadium today and went wild over Babe Ruth as a group of big league baseball stars from the United States trounced the Japanese All-Stars for the second straight time. The score was 5 to 1.

The fans idolized the Babe, although he failed to get a homer. Two homers by Earl Averill and one apiece by Lou Gehrig and Jimmy Foxx, however, accounted for all of the winner's tallies today. Foxx started the scoring in the second when he hit for the circuit after Gehrig had walked. Averill followed with another in the same inning. Gehrig got his four-bagger in the third and Averill his second in the seventh.

Undismayed by the reputations of the American wrecking crew, Date pitched courageously, refusing to be disheartened even when the sluggers' drives fell among the scrambling fans in distant stands.

The Babe singled once, walked once, flied out twice and grounded out once. Both of his flies were deep into right field and possibly would have been good for homers in the less massive American parks.

His clowning on first base, where he played the last six innings, kept the crowd in an appreciative uproar.

The lone Japanese run was unearned. It came as the result of a hit batsman, a wild throw by Catcher Hayes and an outfield fly.

Iowa Coach Pleased With Sophomore Line

American U. Ends Season Saturday

Win Over Randolph-Macon Would Give Even Break.

American University closes its abbreviated 1934 gridiron campaign Saturday against Randolph-Macon, at Ashland, Va., and if the Eagles win the finale it will be their most successful season in history.

Against Bridgewater the Methodists chalked up their first victory in two years, winning, 25-16, and by taking Gallaudet over the hurdles last Saturday they made it a profitable year. But a victory over the Yellow Jackets, an even break in six games, will more than even the most enthusiastic A. U. supporters dared hope for.

This is the last year American will play a six-game schedule. Next year eight opponents will be met. Young is negotiating with schools in Pennsylvania and Tennessee for dates.

Bears Get 244 Points, Near Record of Giants

New York, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—The Chicago Bears not only are the class of the National Football League, but lead their professional gridiron rivals in point-scoring and in yardage-gaining. The Bears, with a total of 244 points, are within 35 points of the record set by the New York Giants last year, and have made advances totaling 2,754 yards.

Reds' Player Exonerated In 'Bribe'

Asserts Probe of Series Did Not Bring About Resignation.

By George Kenney.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5 (Spl.).—The tempest that followed John A. Heydler's cry of honesty in behalf of big league baseball, which preceded his resignation as president of the National League by a scant 48-hours, was, indeed one of those teapot storms, and had nothing whatever to do with his resignation, Heydler declared today.

Moreover, he added, the interpretation put upon his announcement that he had "investigated" the World Series and the games immediately preceding it, was 100 per cent haywire.

Took Precaution.

"All I did was to take precautions which I felt necessary to insure against the possibility of a serious mistake," Heydler explained. "There was too much at stake for me to permit an umpire or anyone else to do anything wrong, no matter how honestly he or they tried to do the right thing.

"I had former umpires and other observers attend the games and report to me every night whether there had been any close plays which might have caused protests against the umpires. I even attended the games in New York, in which the Giants slipped from the lead, myself, and watched every play closely."

After it was all over, Heydler felt that his surveillance—not with detectives as had been hinted—was justified.

"The umpires did not make one major mistake," he said proudly.

Brands Report Untrue.

Heydler also branded as wholly untrue and without any foundation whatever a report that just prior to the final four-game series between the Cards and the Cincinnati Reds at St. Louis, Gordon (Ossie) Slade, the Reds' shortstop, had received half of a $500 bill.

"If you do the right thing, you'll get the other half after the series," said the letter which Slade was reported to have received and to have turned over to officials of the league along with the half of the big bill.

"Slade never received such a letter or part of a bill," Heydler stated heatedly. "You can quote me as saying that the whole story is absolutely untrue."

It was recalled that Slade made three errors in the first inning of one of the games, and his fellow Reds two more in the same inning.

Errors Were Hard Chances.

"I have been reliably informed that two of Slade's errors could readily have been scored as hits—they were hard chances to handle," Heydler insisted. "And the third error was the result of a throw by Lombardi—a hard throw that would have knocked over any average ball player."

Larry McPhail, a lesser official of the Cincinnati Reds, precipitated the storm, perhaps unwittingly, by asking Heydler to comment on a story in a baseball publication concerning Heydler's supervision of the games.

"Naturally, when I replied to McPhail, I insisted that the same publication print the entire contents of my letter verbatim or not at all," Heydler explained. "When it did it was construed as an admission that I had employed detectives and hawkshaws.

"And that," he concluded, pointing to a stack of correspondence concerning the affair, "is a lot of bosh, as these letters will prove to whoever cares to read them."

Although Heydler's resignation will not become effective until December 11, it was indicated today that his successor may be named at a special meeting of the board of directors of the National League on Thusday. Ford Frick, former New York baseball writer and radio sports chronicler, who for a year has been the National League's public relations, is reported to be in line for the job.

St. Louis Gets Pro Club.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—The Cincinnati National Football League franchise and players will be transferred to St. Louis this week, according to announcement tonight by Joe F. Carr, league president.

A Flying Tackle That Failed to Bring Down Stanford Captain

Capt. Livesay, of the University of California, the daring young man who floats through the air with the greatest of ease, took off too late to check Acting Capt. Hamilton, of Stanford, on an end run, in the game at Los Angeles. Stanford beat the Golden Bears, 27-0.

Eastern High Roosevelt's Foe Today

Lincoln Parkers Seeking First Series Victory; Fear Air Attack.

EASTERN HIGH'S puzzling football team, undefeated but nonvictorious in the interhigh series, goes out after its first triumph today against Roosevelt's last-place Rough Riders.

Dr. Frank E. Kramer, assistant superintendent of schools, said yesterday that the fistfight between Western and Tech High players of last Friday would not affect the playing of today's game. Dr. Kramer is in receipt of reports on the fight filed by principals of the two schools.

Present Air Threat.

The passing threat which Roosevelt has displayed in its past games is expected to imperil seriously Eastern's chances of finishing in second place in the series. The inconsistent Lincoln Parkers have the inside track on the runner-up position to Tech at present and need only to tie in their remaining games to finish in second place. Both Central and Western have been defeated.

If the Rough Riders come through successfully with the passing attack which they showed they are capable of against Central and Western, Eastern might well find itself on the short end of the score by the time the final whistle blows.

Two Ace Passers.

Coach Lynn Woodworth of Roosevelt has two ace passers in Frank Baroni and Johnnie Saur, his two quarter backs. His left end, big Spiro Kolius, is an able pass receiver, but Francis Beamer, the other wingman, has been somewhat weak in this respect all season. The chief defect in the Roosevelt passing system has been the glaring tendency of the ends to halt in their running and try to take the pass standing still. As a result, passes have been sailing far over their heads.

It is the opinion of many that Baroni and Saur are as good passers, if not better, than any in the series, yet the failure of the ends to keep on running instead of worrying about the passer's getting the ball to them, has nullified the value of the aerial weapon.

Absher, Wood Won't Start.

Coach Charlie Guyon of Eastern is not starting his smashing tackle, Dick Absher, nor Bill Wood, regular right end. Ed Donovan, newly eligible by the new advisory, will pack his 195-pound frame in Absher's left-tackle post, and Speed Bullough, hard-tackling wingman, will be playing in Wood's place. Charlie Kidwell, another up-and-coming youngster, will start in Walt Miller's full back berth.

The game could easily prove one of the most colorful of the series, with Saur's and Baroni's long heaves and the brilliant running of Bob Hart and "Hawk" Shaw, Eastern backs, all constant threats.

Navy Gridders Prepare for Notre Dame

Cutter and Zabriskie May Return to Line in Cleveland.

ANNAPOLIS, Nov. 5 (Spl.).—The smashing triumph over Washington and Lee Saturday brought added encouragement to the Navy football camp, as the Middy gridders settled down to serious minded preparations for one of three main objectives of the season's campaign—the battle with Elmer Layden's Notre Dame crew in Cleveland.

Head Coach Tom Hamilton expects to have a stronger combination to throw against Notre Dame than that which faced Washington and Lee, as the injured Slade Cutter, star tackle and rated among condidates for All-America honors, and Dave Zabriskie, guard, probably will be ready. All of the other regulars were on the field today.

Perhaps the most gratifying result of the game with the Generals was the fine showing of reserve material, and Navy now looks to be much better off in that respect for the arguments with the big fellows — Notre Dame, Pittsburgh and Army. This was especially true of W. J. Dye, former Washington high school lad, who substituted for Cutter at tackle, Cole and Vogel at guard and Thomas and Fellows in the back field.

The squad is booked to leave for Cleveland on Thursday.

One More for Sing Sing.

Ossining, N. Y. Nov. 4 (U.P.).—The seventh win in seven starts was chalked up yesterday by the Sing Sing football team which overwhelmed the Helio A. C., of Newburgh, 31 to 13.

Deans Pay Visit To Breadon For Chat

Dizzy to Ask for $25,000 in '35, Paul $15,000; Tour Nets $24,000.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 5 (AP).—Dizzy and Paul Dean, who will ask a joint salary of $40,000 for their pitching next season, dropped in on President Sam Breadon, of the St. Louis Cardinals, for a chat today.

The meeting was announced as solely a social get-together, but it is known Breadon would like to sign the Deans at once.

The brothers, who pitched the Cardinals to their four victories over the Detroit Tigers in the world series, have been on a barnstorming and vaudeville tour.

Made $12,000 Each.

"We made about $12,000 apiece since the world series," Dizzy said. "So there ain't going to be no big bad wolves running around our house at Deanville this winter.

"But that ain't going to make me ureasonable. Take some and leave some, I says, and Mr. Breadon will find us very reasonable, and, as I might say to him in a letter, hoping he is the same, I am yours truly, Dizzy."

When they get around to contracts, Dizzy has announced he will ask for a one-year agreement calling for a $25,000 salary, and Paul will tell how he thinks he should be paid $15,000.

If it looks like a battle of the dotted line, Dizzy will make $35,000 his basic demand, leaving a margin of $10,000 for oratorical deflation. Paul, by the same line of reasoning, will start at $20,000.

Dizzy's 1934 contract called for a salary of $7,500 and he received a $1,000 bonus when he signed the document. Paul, a first-year man, was signed for $3,000.

Burton Ruled Pro Jockey; Blames Ad

Suspended From Amateur Ranks, He Is Planning to Make Fight.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5 (Spl.).—Crawford Burton, the country's leading amateur gentleman jockey, announced today that he would fight his suspension. Burton, a society broker and one of the few men to ride two winners in the famed Maryland Hunt Cup, stated that he had been an unfortunate victim of a widely published cigarette advertising layout.

A brief statement that Burton's certificate as a gentleman rider had been revoked was made public today by the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association. Judge Frank J. Bryan, secretary of the association, gave the release at Pimlico, where he is officiating.

Reason Unexplained.

Judge Bryan had nothing to say about the reason for the stewards' action, explaining he was not present at the meeting held in New York last Thursday at which the action against Burton was taken. Reports, however, that the stewards took exception to Burton's allowing his name and picture in racing colors to be used in the cigarette advertisement were generally credited.

Burton is ranked as the dean of the country's gentlemen jockeys. He is a Harvard man and an all-around athlete. He was one of the leaders in a movement to revive the historic Rockaway Steeplechase Association last year, and for many years has been prominent in sports and social circles.

Won First in 1923.

He regarded his two Maryland cup victories as among the most notable achievements of his long career. He won his first Maryland cup in 1923, and he has added victories in many races since then.

Burton last year won the Monmouth County (N. J.) Gold Cup. He had intended to retire gracefully, but the cigarette advertisement incident, together with the resultant summary action of the stewards, has led him to a justifiable protest.

Burton is wealthy and a close friend of many turf leaders, including Joseph E. Widener, Mrs. Dodge Sloan, C. V. Whitney and Mrs. John A. Hertz.

Stoefen's Decision Is Due This Week

Los Angeles, Nov. 5 (AP).—Lester Stoefen, world's doubles champion with George Lott, will join his Davis Cup partner in the professional tennis ranks before the week is out, it was indicated here today.

Lott took the step last week.

The likelihood of Stoefen's departure from the amateur ranks was seen in the comment of Dick Charnock, Stoefen's manager and close friend of Ellsworth Vines, jr., that he believed "an interesting announcement regarding the professional tennis situation will develop" out of a meeting between Vines and Bill O'Brien, profession promoter, in New York Wednesday.

Vines is en route to New York.

Coach Fanatical, Wife Drives Car

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 5 (AP).—Coach Francis A. Schmidt may drive the Ohio State football team, but his driving privileges does not include the family car.

His wife is the referee on that point. She fears the coach, while solving some intricate gridiron trick as he drives, might make an offtackle dash through the surrounding scenery.

The Buckeye coach, said Mrs. Schmidt today, "eats, drinks and sleeps football all the year round, but he gets worse during the season."

Army, Navy Reversed On List

Duke, Michigan, Ga. and Southern California Now Also Rans.

Alabama and Minnesota Among New Bidders for Top Honors.

By Dillon Graham.
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

SO great has been the carnage this season among the 1933 football leaders that only Princeton, of the major teams, has kept pace with its stride of last autumn.

The Tigers of Nassau, with five successive wins, are in the same spot they held a year ago as the country's college squads drove toward their second November engagements.

There are 22 unbeaten and untied elevens today in contrast with, but 19, 12 months ago and only three of that number appear on the honor roll now. They are Princeton, Depauw of Indiana and Bluefield College of West Virginia.

Others Bob Up.

But as the former greats have fallen, other strong clubs have rushed into their positions—teams like Alabama, Minnesota, Navy, Michigan State and Illinois.

Southern California, one of last year's strongest teams, has dropped among the also-rans. Duke, a Rose Bowl contender last November, has been defeated. Michigan, with a perfect record through the previous campaign, has been beaten three times, as has Georgia.

Stanford and Columbia, the Rose Bowl participants, are among the beaten or tied legions. Both, however, were in the same position this time last season.

Army, Navy Reversed.

A year ago Army was riding high and Navy had been eliminated. The table is reversed now, with Army whipped by Illinois and Navy possessing one of its best teams in years, boasting six successive triumphs.

Minnesota's power-house seems headed for a perfect season. Alabama, tied early last year by Mississippi, is one of the South's best, already mentioned as a possible choice to make its fourth trip to the Rose Bowl.

Tulane, whipped several times during the previous season, has been rolling along with enough power to win its six contests. Illinois, with a fast, deceptive squad, stands ready to challenge Minnesota's rights for the Big Ten title. Michigan State has come forward as one of the best in the Middle West.

Comparison of Teams.

This year—Alabama, Trinity (Conn.), Depauw (Ind.), Tulane, Navy, Birmingham-Southern, Augustana (Ill.), Cape Girardeau (Mo.), Teachers, Princeton, Minnesota, Syracuse, St. Vincent (Pa.), Kirksville (Mo.) Teachers, Michigan State, Ohio Northern, Upper Iowa, Illinois, Tufts, Bluefield, Utah Aggies, Washington, and Panzer (N. J.).

Last year—Duquesne, Bluefield, Army, McPherson (Kans.), Depaul (Chicago), Oregon, Emory and Henry (Va.), St. Cloud (Minn.), Murray (Ky.), Oklahoma City, Princeton, Georgia, Duke, Depauw, St. Thomas (Pa.), Michigan, Nebraska, Tampa and Rollins.

Corsairs Beat Palace Team

Fredericksburg Eleven Blanks Local Squad.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., Nov. 5. (Spl.).—Led by Johnny Felon, former George Washington ace, and Goldy Lowery, hard-hitting full back, the Fredericksburg Corsair football squad defeated the Washington Palaces, 33-0, yesterday.

The visitors were outplayed to lose their third game in the last five starts. Two of the three defeats were scored by the Corsair Club, which last year nosed out the Palaces, 13-12.

Straight-line play and good openfield running by Felon accounted for the first three markers, with a pass from Felon to Kelly accounting for the fourth touchdown.

Corsairs.	Position.	Palace.

Turner's Fight Show Called Off This Week

The boxing card headlined by Bob Tow and Buck Everett, which was to have been held at the Auditorium Friday night, has been postponed, it was announced yesterday. The card will be held over until a date to be announced next week.

'Tucky and 'Bama Biggest Thorns to Neyland

NEW YORK, Nov. 5 (AP).—Grist from the gridiron: Maj. Bob Neyland, who is rounding out a nine-year hitch as head coach at Tennessee, can not make up his mind which of his opponents caused him the most grief during the years.

"Alabama beat me in three of the seven games we dropped," he says, "but just when I am about ready to label it the toughest, I think of Kentucky.

"Kentucky never whipped us, but do you know what those Wildcats did? They robbed us of three championships by playing us to ties in 1928, 1929 and 1931."

Neyland says Gene McEver, now coaching at Davidson College, is the best back he developed at Tennessee. He rates McEver above Beattie Feathers, now with the Chicago professional Bears, because of his kicking.

He doesn't hesitate to select Millard Howell, Alabama's fine triple threat back, as the best player among his opponents.

When Eastern and Midwestern coaches gather in their fanning bees they will talk for hours of the antics of Bill Bevan, Minnesota's star right tackle, and Izzy Weinstock, Pitt's great plunging half back.

One of the high spots of the Pitt-Minnesota game came early in the struggle when the Panthers made a first down on Minnesota's 6-yard line.

The Pitt quarter used excellent generalship in selecting Weinstock to crash four times into the Gopher line, but his judgment in directing the attack at the spot guarded by the burly Bevan still is being debated. In the four tries Weinstock made exactly 3 yards, lost the ball on downs and with it the chance to win the ball game.

After the game, Bevan went to Bernie Bierman, his coach, and apologized for allowing one of the season's crack backs to gain 3 yards on four plays.

"I'm sorry about that thing down there near the goal line," he told Bierman. "You know, I was caught off balance on three of those four plays."

As the teams lined up for the kick-off, J. M. Holmes, former Nebraska star, who was umpiring, discovered there were only ten players in the Pitt line-up. Weinstock suddenly appeared from behind him with the startling question:

"How far did I run for that score?"

Told his gallop was for 64 yards, Weinstock replied:

"That's what I wanted to know. That's the best run I ever made and I just wanted to be sure it was my personal long-distance record."

Coaches are touting John Steen, 201-pound Syracuse tackle, as one of the best of the 1934 crop. Only 21 years old, the youngster is one of three honor men in the school of engineering at Syracuse.

Already in the all-American running with one candidate, Millard (Dixie) Howell, Alabama's triple-threat back—the South will present another possibility when Tulane invades the East to play Colgate this week.

Southern experts are hailing Claude (Monk) Simons, jr., 195-pounder, as the equal of Billy Bankes, one of the greatest backs ever produced in the South. Simons can do everything in big-league style, but he is particularly deadly as a passer. So far he has completed 57 per cent of his heaves.

Sunador Falters, Identify Closes With Rush to Nose Out Dust Girl at Pimlico

Track Slow, Bazaar Is Fourth

Little Rides Bushranger to Victory in 'Chase; Snapback Second.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Writer).

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, Nov. 5. With Jockey Johnny Bejshak swinging his whip so hard that the "No. 2" plate dropped off his sleeve at the sixteenth pole, Identify, from the barn of Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt, today took a thrilling nose decision from Dust Girl, a Shandon Farm representative. A tiring third, after setting the pace, came Sunador, the property of Willis Sharpe Kilmer.

Although a variety of names were assigned to lesser events on the program, the feature was nameless. However, it was worthy of the outstanding position on the card and the finish was so close that the judges' word had to be taken for the order of finish.

Bazaar Disappointment.

Bazaar, one of those mysterious Bradley horses, was the big disappointment of the race. Under Don Meade's handling she made only one move during the mile and a sixteenth and that was backward. The same experts that helped shove the public up to the windows to make Bazaar an even-money favorite were quick to state that "she didn't like the going." The track was slow following the week-end rains, but Bazaar simply did not run her race and finished fourth.

Sunador began as if he would run away with the race. Robertson hustled him into the lead and then went winging away from the field. Dust Girl was closest in pursuit, and Bejshak was keeping Identify in the better going on the outside.

Stage Closing Rushes.

Sunador showed no signs of faltering until the sixteenth pole, where Robertson went to the whip in a futile effort to hold the lead. However, Dust Girl and Identify put on closing rushes. Identify looked like the winner, but the outside horses have been ruled second so often those in the stands had to await the official ruling.

Bushranger, the property of J. E. Widener, defeated the favored Snapback in the day's steeplechase. Under the skillful handling of Jockey Little, Bushranger took the lead at the eighth fence and was never headed thereafter. Snapback made a game bid, pulling up on virtually even terms with the leader the last time around, but faltered nearing the end. Nesconset was a distant third. Making Bubbles lost his rider at the twelfth jump.

Luxuro Is Victor.

Luxuro graduated in the second race, drawing away to a five-length lead going down the backstretch and holding on long enough to take care of Marwee's closing rush. Red Ribbon, a long-shot, was third. The winner paid $6. Easter Day broke his leg at the far turn.

Admiral Cary T. Grayson's Pocket was ridden all over the race track but proved much the best in the third race, coming with nice speed in the stretch to win by two lengths. Unlawful was second and Goldfin third in the field of 12. The winner, one of the four well-played horses, paid $12.50.

Beyond Doubt Wins.

The E. R. Bradley Stable ran one for the public when Beyond Doubt won the fourth race despite being bumped by Uncle Billy, the early leader, at the stretch turn. Uncle Billy held on for second money ahead of Kissin Bug. Uncle Billy slid on the slippery footing but recovered and held on well in the drive. Beyond Doubt was installed the favorite and rewarded with a $9.60 pay-off.

Silvo Coucci rode Breckinridge Long's Legume to victory in the fifth race. The son of Epinard came from behind in the stretch run to down Marcella Miss and Star Banner. The last named, virtually left at the post, probably was much the best. Legume was fairly well played and was an $8.50 pay-off.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUSHRANGER, $6.80, $3.00, $2.70; SNAP BACK, $2.80, $2.30; NESCONSET, $2.60.

BUSHRANGER, full of run and fencing boldly in the early stages, took command at the sixth fence, was shaken up to meet a bold effort from SNAP BACK at the twelfth jump, then held the latter safe to win well in hand. SNAP BACK, rated close up from the beginning, offered a stout challenge at the twelfth fence, but was held perfectly safe thereafter. NESCONSET went nicely throughout, but could not trouble the first two. ROZELL was a trailer most of the trip. NAVARINO bobbled at several of his fences and almost unseated his rider at the seventh. MAKING BUBBLES began tiring after a mile, and he lost his rider at the twelfth jump.

SECOND RACE—One mile and seventy yards. Purse, $800. The Delinquent. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:02. Off at 2:03½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LUXURO, $6.00, $3.70, $3.60; MARWEE, $4.40, $3.70, RED RIBBON, $8.20.

LUXURO sprinted into a command lead midway of the back stretch, then held sway for the remainder of the trip. MARWEE bettered his position steadily and continued to make up ground, approaching the finish. RED RIBBON went closest to the winner for the better part of the trip, then held on gamely. SHENVALEE closed a big gap from a slow beginning. SWEEPSTONE was never a dangerous factor. PHARA tired. LITTLE WOMAN lacked speed in the early stages, and was never able to better her speed thereafter. EASTER DAY broke his leg midway of the back stretch and was pulled up.

THIRD RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:31. Off at 2:33. Winner, C. T. Grayson's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—POCKET, $12.50, $7.30; $4.90; UNLAWFUL, $11.10, $6.60, GOLDFIN, $4.60.

POCKET, rated behind the early leaders and kept out from the inner rail, responded nicely when put to a drive, and coming up the leaders steadily drew out slowly when in command. UNLAWFUL went prominently early, but was used up racing with BYRDINE and he tired approaching the finish. GOLDFIN passed tiring horses in the last five-sixteenths. BYRDINE was rushed through on the inside midway of the back stretch to gain a brief lead, but faltered badly in the closing drive. BY SURPRISE went in the first flight and had no mishaps. LEALETTE could not reach contention. COUNTESS ANN raced in dull fashion.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and seventy yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:01. Off at 3:03½. Winner, E. R Bradley's ch. c. (2), by North Star 3d—Believe Sally. Trained by H. J. Thompson. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 2-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:42 2-5, 1:47 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BEYOND DOUBT, $4.60, $3.70, $3.00; UNCLE BILLY, $9.00, $5.00; KISSINBUG, $3.90.

BEYOND DOUBT hustled into a forward position entering the back stretch, worked his way to the pacemaker gradually, was bothered by UNCLE BILLY when he sprawled in the slippery footing at the stretch turn, then drew out into an easy lead when the latter failed to rally. UNCLE BILLY was rated in front, saved ground and held on well after slipping and going off stride entering the home stretch. KISSINBUG went in the thick of contention, but could not menace the leaders in the closing test. COLORIST closed a good gap after a slow beginning. KING BONNY was unable to threaten seriously. INSCRIPTION weakened. THE AENEAD was unable to untrack himself. FIZZAZ stopped. BRUSH BY had a rough trip going to the first turn.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:37½. Winner, Breck Long's ch. c. (2), by Espinara—Shenanigan. Trained by M. Smart. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48, 1:13 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LEGUME, $8.50, $3.80, $3.40; MARCELLA MISS, $3.40, $3.00; STAR BANNER, $7.40.

LEGUME, in close attendance of the leaders and kept on the outside in the firmer footing, responded readily to wear down the leaders, then drew out gradually under pressure. MARCELLA MISS raced Boston Brook into submission, but could not match the winner's rush. STAR BANNER came strongly after a slow beginning. BOSTON BROOK was strongly ridden to maintain a slight early lead, and had little left in the final drive. GOOD GAMBLE, away well and forwardly placed, weakened when the real test came. BRINDLE was held safe. SUN IDOL could not better his position. VEE EIGHT stopped, as did COIL.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 3-year olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:02. Off at 4:05½. Winner, A. G. Vanderbilt's ch. c. (3), by Man o' War—Footprint. Trained by J. H. Stotler. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48, 1:13 2-5, 1:40 2-5, 1:47 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—IDENTIFY, $7.20, $3.90, $2.80; DUST GIRL, $7.70, $4.40; SUNADOR, $3.70.

IDENTIFY, unable to keep pace with the early leaders, was kept on the outside in the better footing, was placed to intermittent punishment in the last half mile, closed with excellent courage and was up in the final stride. DUST GIRL, going in her best form, followed closest to SUNADOR, then came with good courage for the closing test. SUNADOR sprinted into a long early lead, saved ground, but weakened inside the closing furlong. BAZAAR did not fancy the footing and could never reach a forward position under her weight. PRECURSOR made a stout effort midway of the final curve, but failed to rally thereafter. GREYGLADE and HOLYSTONE were held safe.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:31. Off at 4:33½. Winner, J. M. Jones' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ST. STEPHENS, $12.80, $6.10, $5.10; BAND WAGON, $4.40, $3.90; STROLL ALONG, $7.90.

ST. STEPHENS, strongly handled and following BAND WAGON closely, gained the lead midway of the home stretch, then held on resolutely until the end. BAND WAGON held a brief lead in the first five furlongs, held on stubbornly after losing command. STROLL ALONG bettered his position while saving ground and outstayed LAW SUIT. The latter went forwardly, but could not improve his position. STAND PAT showed a good effort. BALIOS was outrun. HOPE TO DO was done after the opening three furlongs.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and one-sixteenth. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:01. Off at 5:02. Winner, W. A. Sachsenmaier's ch. f. (4), by Chatterton—Merry Princess. Trained by P. Reuter. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 1-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:42, 1:49.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—XANDRA, $9.50, $6.90, $4.90; DANCING BOY, $22.70, $11.30; BLACK NOSE, $8.00.

XANDRA, going in her best form and handling her weight well, secured racing room on the inside when reaching the leaders, then withstood a hard drive gamely to get up in the concluding strides. DANCING BOY, placed in the thick of contention early, shook off the leaders to take a slight lead and then fought it out resolutely. BLACK NOSE went close to the pacemaker in the early stages, but failed to rally when placed to a strong drive. GEN LEJEUNE improved his position stoutly after a slow beginning. RESURRECTION was forced to race wide most of the time. WEDDING RING weakened badly after reaching final curve. MARYS MAY stopped. STUART had speed for five furlongs.

Brown Jug Is Hidden From Fumbling Hands

Minneapolis, Nov. 5 (AP).—The little brown jug, a trophy Minnesota and Michigan football teams have fought for since 1903 when Oscar Munson found it left behind after a 6-6 tie, was hidden today in a place only Munson himself knew.

"I got it hid," said the equipment custodian. "I don't know just where they want it. When I find out I'll bring it around. Everybody wants to pick it up and the first thing you know they'll drop it and there you'll be." The one-time water jug became Minnesota's property after the Gophers' 34-0 victory over the Wolverines Saturday.

Rippy Shoots 67 for New Rock Creek Record to Lead Turkey Tourney Qualifiers

Registers 15 Pars and 2 Birdies

SCORING what is believed to be a new competitive course record, Claude Rippy, young municipal golf star, shot a 67, one under par, yesterday to clamp a virtual headlock on the medal in the 18-hole qualifying round of the Rock Creek turkey tournament.

Rippy scored a 34, 33 as a result of 15 pars and 2 birdies, playing such flawless golf that he was over par on only one hole, the seventh, where he three-putted.

One shot behind Rippy was Russell Hoag, transplanted Floridian, who finished the last two holes in the dark. Hoag, with a brace of 34's, missed an 8-foot putt for a birdie on the home green that would have tied him with Rippy.

Yesterday's shooting was some of the best in the history of any Rock Creek tournament. With Rippy and Hoag establishing themselves as favorites to win, nine other golfers out of a first-day field of nearly 70 cracked 80. Volney Burnett, the golfing fireman, did a 35, 36—71, and Leo Cullinane and Charlie Ficco each garnered a 72.

Hold Approach Shots.

Veteran observers could recall of no competitive medal score better than that turned in by Rippy. George Voigt has scored as low as 68 in competition, it is understood, and Rippy also has had 68's and 69's in match play.

Of the women who qualified yesterday, Mrs. Dot Rider led the way with a 42, 46—88.

Hockey

By Ware Torrey.

WOMEN'S field hockey in Washington, which has drawn increasing interest in the last few years, will reach its peak shortly when, for the first time, the Washington association will be host at the Southeast tournament.

The Southeast sectional tournament will be played November 23 and 24, at the National Cathedral Field. On Sunday, November 25, the new Southeast team, selected at this time, will play in an exhibition game against the new Southeast reserve team at the Madeira School.

Officers of the Washington Field Hockey Association feel that the tournament will add greatly to the wave of interest in the sport.

Comprises Four Clubs.

The Washington association is one of the newer members of the Southeast sectional association, and numbers just four clubs. The response of local members, in taking on the responsibility of arranging for the tournament and the entertaining of visiting teams, with comparatively few from which to form committees, illustrates the eagerness of Washington hockey players to advance the sport in this section.

Teams of the Philadelphia, Baltimore and North Jersey associations will play in the tournament and teams also are expected from Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

The top level of American field hockey will be on view at the tournament, since, in addition to strong players of the other associations, the Philadelphia association claims six members of the All-American team, as well as a long list of reserve team members.

Association Officers.

Officers of the Washington association who are taking a prominent part in arrangements for the tournament include Mrs. Charles P. Lukens, jr., president; Sylvia Meyer, vice president; Hazel Sayre, secretary; Ruby Neale, treasurer; Joan Pearson, chairman of the umpiring committee and Elizabeth Plimpton, chairman of the selection committee.

In charge of the tournament are Miriam Spaulding, chairman of the Southeast Field Hockey Association and also chairman of the tournament; Miss Pearson, business manager; Mrs. C. E. Turney, publicity manager; Marjorie Webster, in charge of hospitality; Miss Neale, head of trains and transportation; Miss Meyer, in charge of entertainment; Rita Surrell, in charge of field; Betty Sands, announcer, and Hazel Sayre, banquet chairman.

Zwick Defeats Alba; Many Walk Out

Decision Is Unanimous in Drowsy 8-Rounder; 1,000 Disgusted.

PHIL ZWICK won a unanimous decision from Johnny Alba in a drowsy eight-rounder that headed a boxing program at the Riding and Hunt Club last night. The real winners, however, were the Washington fight fans who displayed remarkable sagacity by remaining away from the scene of action, if any.

The angular knockout artist from Wisconsin was unable to punch at close range and Alba was too smart to stick out his chin at long range. wrestling and tugging in which neither gladiator was so much as dented.

Fans Walk Out.

The 1,000 customers started giving the boys the Bronx cheer as early as the third round. By the sixth round they were walking out. By the seventh they were still decaust.

The blame for the sorry exhibition can not be laid entirely on the Filipino. He did his best to make it a fight in close, but little to help the cause at long range. Zwick, when he was able to hold Alba off did well, but he wasn't able to hold him off enough to make it a satisfactory fight.

Alba answered the bell for the first By rushing in close and tying up Zwicks right with his own forearm. From then on the action was like that, with neither fighter landing more than a handful of solid punches.

Sid Silas was awarded a draw in an eight-rounder with Peter Mike, of Long Island. Mike, a ponderous puncher, walloped Silas but was penalized by Judge Frank Schuyler and Referee Howard Livingston for roughness when he wrestled the New Yorker to the canvas twice.

Silas hit the canvas three times other than the times he was tossed there. Once for an eight count before the echo of the opening bell had died out, once for nine in the fourth round and once for one count in the seventh.

Terry and Grecco Draw.

Bou Terry, St. Louis lightweight, and Joe Grecco, of New York, battled to a draw in a slap-bang eight-round curtain raiser. Judge Charley Reynolds voted for Terry, Judge Frank Schuyler for Grecco and Referee Kid Sullivan decided the issue with a ballot for a stalemate.

Grecco piled up an early lead which Terry wiped out to go into the final round with honors even. Terry had a shade the best of the finale, but hardly enough to win the decision on The Post score sheet.

Lopez Defeats Izzo.

Tony Lopez was given a well-deserved decision over Joe Izzo in another eight-round sock exchange. The New York feather punched harder to the body throughout, but Lopez packed the big guns at long range to earn a slight edge in the opinion of most of the occupants of the press box. Judge Charley Reynolds voted for Izzo, who, apparently was favored by most of the spectators.

Syracuse Grooms Trio.

Syracuse, Nov. 2 (AP).—Three players were groomed today to take the place of Stark, Orange back field ace, for the intersectional meeting Saturday with Michigan State. The understudies for Stark are Ginter, Reckmak and Mammoser.

Maryland U. Golf Team, Planned

Intramural Tourney Is Staged to Stimulate Interest in Game.

THROUGH the medium of intramural golfing activities, University of Maryland eventually plans to add golf to its major sports, it was learned yesterday.

At present the college is conducting a challenge tournament among the students, and some outstanding material already has been uncovered. The tournament, started on October 15, finds Ray Kerr, Alton Rabbitt, Albert Walters, Ray Turner, Bob Leapley and D. A. Walton as the survivors. Johnny Greer, Delaware State champion, also attends the university.

It is understood that there are a dozen golfers at Maryland capable of breaking 75.

Staged by Dr. Mackert.

Present plans are to have the intramural champion at Maryland engage the champions of Catholic University and Georgetown.

The intramural tournament is being staged by Dr. C. L. Mackert in an effort to stimulate interest in the game. From such competition he hopes to uncover latent material that would be available for a varsity golf team, should the university decide to back one.

Maryland is the only major college in the District area that does not have a golf team. Georgetown, Catholic University and George Washington have been represented by strong teams during the past few years.

Thirty-three golfers are eligible to compete in the President's Trophy tournament for members of the executive committee of the District Women's Golf Association tomorrow at Kenwood's course. The tournament, inaugurated two years ago by Mrs. Frank R. Keefer, former association president and donor of the trophy, has been won each time by Mrs. J. W. Beller, of Columbia.

It will be an 18-hole medal play handicap event, and the following women will play:

Miss Elizabeth C. Harris, Miss Susan Hacker, Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, Mrs. R. N. Sutton, Mrs. C. K. Wing, Mrs. H. R. Quinter, Mrs. Frank R. Keefer, Mrs. F. G. Awalt, Mrs. J. Franklin Gross, Mrs. N. J. Waldron, Mrs. L. G. Pray, Mrs. Roy C. Miller, Mrs. Theodore Peyser, Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely, Mrs. Howard Simons, Mrs. H. King Cornwell, Mrs. A. E. Dedicke, Mrs. A. M. Tucker, Miss Louise Claxton, Mrs. H. J. Richardson, Mrs. Perry Hoover, Miss Sue Gantt, Mrs. C. B. Stewart, Mrs. Gil Hahn, Mrs. W. F. Holtzman, Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, Mrs. J. R. De Fargas, Mrs. L. B. Schloss, Mrs. Don Scott, Mrs. Alma Von Steiner, Mrs. J. W. Beller and Mrs. David McPherson.

Carnera Signs to Meet Campolo November 24

Buenos Aires, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—Primo Carnera, former heavyweight champion, was signed today to meet Victorio Campolo, Argentina heavyweight, for a 12-round bout at Independiente Stadium, which seats 40,000.

The bout, set for November 24, will be Carnera's first since he lost his title to Max Baer.

Col. E. R. Bradley May Sell Track At New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 5 (AP). Negotiations were held here today for the sale of the Fair Grounds race track by Col. E. R. Bradley, Kentucky sportsman, to a syndicate headed by Robert S. Eddy, jr., operator of the Jefferson track. The sale price was said to be just under $400,000.

Racing circles took the reported deal to mean that only one track would operate at New Orleans this winter, with the season at Jefferson opening Thanksgiving Day, consolidating in a single meet at the Fair Grounds.

Several years ago Col. Bradley sold the Fair Grounds to Chicago interests headed by Joseph A. Murphy. After operating the track for two seasons, the syndicate turned it back to Col. Bradley. Bradley was believed to be in New York today.

C. U. Expects Hard Battle Saturday

Oglethorpe's Record Is Marred Only by One Loss, One Tie.

OGLETHORPE may be only a name to some people, but it's a pretty tough little football team to Coach Dutch Bergman and his Catholic U. gridders. Just recovering from Saturday's battle, and it was a battle every inch of the way, with Western Maryland, C. U. looks for another terrific argument with the Stormy Petrels.

Al Secino is not in the best of shape after having his knee nearly twisted off Saturday, but should be ready for service by Saturday. All of the boys took a severe drubbing from the Terrors and still feel the effects. For awhile in the second half time would be called after every play while some one of the Cardinals was carried from the field or revived.

Impressive Record.

Oglethorpe's record for the season is impressive, marred only by a 15-0 setback by Auburn and a scorless tie with Howard. Last Friday the Petrels downed Erskine, 13-0. The Citadel, Newberry, Chattanooga and Rollins complete the list of conquered foes.

Oglethorpe, however, does not appear to be in Catholic U.'s class. The Brooklanders should take the game in stride, unless Western Maryland took too much out of them.

Bergman had only a light drill yesterday, designed to work the kinks out of muscles and prepare them for more strenuous work which will begin today.

Reds Announce 'Youth Policy'

'33 Operations Deficit of $46,451 Reported.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 5 (AP).—Note to the rest of the National League: The Cincinnati Reds are not interested in buying any more war horses of baseball in preparation for 1935.

The Reds are committed to building up a team of young blood that, they hope, will overlook the fact the Reds have been in last place for the past four years.

"That's the policy," said "Chuck" Dressen, who replaced Bob O'Farrell as manager in last midseason.

It all came out as directors of the club met to hear officially about what happened last summer. They heard that operations cost them a deficit of $46,451; that $131,500 has been spent for players, many for delivery next year; that $51,210 was spent to support their baseball farms and scouts in spotting and developing young players. Announcement of the "youth policy" brought estimates that the average age of the club next year may be around 25.

Edwards Only Army Star Out of Practice

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 5 (AP). Army went back to work today in preparation for the Harvard game and had a full turn-out of varsity players with the exception of Curley Edwards, who likely will be out for a week.

Half Back Texas Jack Buckler, who was injured in the Illinois game, went through a spot punting drill and afterwards joined the varsity in a defensive dummy scrimmage against Harvard plays, engineered by the "B" squadders attired in crimson jerseys and helmets.

Cadets Are Elated Over First Victory

Lexington, Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—First string V. M. I. players took things easy today, for the first time since the tough William and Mary game at Norfolk Saturday. Elated over their first win of the season, the first stringers watched the second and reserve lineups go through a tough scrimmage, while they themselves ran through only a limbering-up workout.

Gloomy G. U. Drills for Roanoke

Hopeful Friday Night's Game Will Soothe Spider's Sting.

CHAGRINED and crestfallen after Saturday's sudden and startling defeat by Richmond, Georgetown turned to Friday night's game with Roanoke as a source of balm for its wound.

Hagerty sent the squad through a light limbering-up drill yesterday, which was entirely devoid of football. The boys played soccer instead, batting an old basket ball up and down the field for nearly an hour. A meeting and blackboard drill was held last night, at which Roanoke plays were outlined and preliminary instructions handed out.

Insofar as the student body is concerned, Richmond is just a city in Virginia. Saturday's game has been consigned to the limbo of past events. Friday night the Hoyas begin anew, and with a will that bodes no good for the Maroon. But the game shapes up as a corking gobd one—on paper.

Comparing the teams by past scores here is the situation in a nutshell or so: Richmond beat Roanoke, 27-0, in the opening game for both teams; Richmond lost to Emory Henry, 13-0; the following week Roanoke defeated Emory Henry, 19-0; then William and Mary defeated Roanoke, 15-6, and the very next week lost to Georgetown, 3-0. Georgetown then lost to Richmond.

The Hoyas are not in the best of shape at the moment, but should be by Friday. Wally Herron still complains of a strained back; Parcells has a bad leg, and the majority of the boys are suffering from minor bruises.

Princeton Third Team Is Given Lehigh Plays

Princeton, Nov. 5 (AP).—With the men who played more than two periods against Harvard excused from practice, the rest of the Princeton squad had a long workout today as Coach Fritz Crisler drilled the reserves in fundamentals and a "phantom" third team learned Lehigh plays and formations which they used against the scrubs in dummy scrimmage.

Purses Gone, Men Hunted

Promoters of Arizmendi Bout Missing.

MEXICO City, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—Police and prize-fight managers joined tonight in a frantic search for promoters of the "Baby" Arizmendi-Henry Armstrong bout, to question them over failure to pay the principals $10,000 apiece.

H. F. Kelly, formerly of Prescott, Ariz., was in custody of detectives, but protested his innocence and professed his ignorance of the whereabouts of W. H. Hollifield, of Los Angeles, Calif., and two Mexicans connected with promoting the fight last night.

Police said they had discovered that 15,000 tickets had been sold at an average of 4 pesos each, but had not been stamped as legally required, and that the money was unaccounted for.

Arizmendi won the decision in 10 rounds. Twenty thousand attended and the gate was 90,000 pesos.

Colgate Squad Drills On Defense for Tulane

Hamilton, N. Y., Nov. 5 (U.P.).—To meet the undefeated challenge of Tulane's mighty Green Wave in the Yankee Stadium at New York Saturday, Andy Kerr sent the Colgate football squad through a long defensive workout today. The Red Raiders also polished their own trick attack.

377 of 457 Yards Made in 5 Games Result of Mickal's Heaves.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

DOWN in the netherlands of old Louisiana a stern old Army strategist, "Biff" Jones, is prodding along a snarling Tiger with verbal barbs, goading it into a state of intense fury—in a football way—for Saturday, when he'll bring the Tiger to Washington and turn it loose against George Washington at Griffith Stadium.

Capt. Jones has done right well this year with Ole Lou State. He's made it one of the Southland's most potent elevens, which George Washington probably will discover for itself. But he's had quite a lot of help from one of his men, a certain Abe Mickal.

Greatest, They Say.

Now they speak of "Brick" Muller, Ed Dooley, Benny Friedman and Harry Newman as pretty good football chuckers, but down at the "War Skule" it's high treason to mention Mickal in the same breath with those immortals. They were all right, but Mickal, well, he's just the greatest passer ever to lay hand on a football.

They like to quote figures to prove their point, and in this instance the figures are eloquent, no less. Mickal has completed more than 50 per cent of his heaves, Louisiana gained 457 yards in five games and all but 80 were a direct result of Mickal's passes.

Threw 35 Passes.

The big, dark Syrian threw just 35 passes in those games and hit the mark 18 times. That's slightly better than one out of every two, while one out of three is considered a good average. Four of these passes have gone for touchdowns, and last year he tossed seven for scores.

Louisiana State's record for the season bears ties with Rice, 9 to 9, and Southern Methodist, 14 to 14, and victories over Auburn, Arkansas, Vanderbilt, Mississippi State, and the Tigers hope to add George Washington this week-end.

Another Duel of Stars.

Verily, it looks like another duel of individuals, Tuffy Leemans vs. Abe Mickal. Leemans is the only real threat in G. W.'s back field and the burden is too heavy to be borne alone. Mickal has Fatherree, Barrett, Tinsley, Moore, Yates, Sullivan and Lawrie to call on for help. All are seasoned, highly polished leather-luggers.

Blocking and Charging Stressed at Wisconsin

Madison, Wis., Nov. 5 (AP).—Wisconsin's touchdown-hungry Badgers were sent through a long scrimmage on offense today in the week's opening practice for the last road game against Michigan. Coach Clarence Spears, far from satisfied that his charges played to the best of their ability on offense against Northwestern, placed particular emphasis on blocking and charging.

Four Irish Injured, May Not Face Navy

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 5 (AP).—Elmer Layden gave the Notre Dame regulars a holiday today while he laid plans for next Saturday's engagement with Navy at Cleveland.

Every member of the Irish varsity suffered bruises in the Pittsburgh tussle, and four of them, Center Fred Solari, Tackle John Michuta, End Wayne Miller and Don Elser, full back, may not start Saturday.

Terps Will Try To Shake Off Big Jinx

Will Attempt to Win V.M.I. Game in Baltimore Stadium.

DARTMOUTH'S defeat of Yale Saturday and the succeeding list of West victories over the East, with one notable succession, in California's Rose Bowl, bring up the reminder that Maryland has a pet jinx combination in Southern Conference games in Baltimore's Municipal Stadium.

Next Monday the Terps square off with Virginia Military Institute in the ample wooden saucer, and, though Jack Faber's men will reign top-heavy favorites, they're bound to have trouble. In 1925 Maryland played North Carolina in Baltimore, and ruled the favorite, but lost, 19-0. Even before that, 1921 to be exact, it met North Carolina State there, the favorite again, and was held to a 6-6 tie.

"Untz" Kicking Recalled.

But Maryland's supporters cherish fond memories of the 1921 game, memories that will live forever in the Black and Gold sports annals. Those attending the game will remember a small, stockily built half back standing on the 40-yard line in a sea of mud. He took the pass from center and gracefully dropkicked it between the uprights for a field goal.

They also remember how he again dropped back to the 29-yard line and dropkicked another field goal to tie the score at 6-all. The stocky half back was "Untz" Brewer, one of the Old Line's greatest pigskin devotees. "Untz" officiates in the high school series and is one of the faithful at all of Maryland's home games.

Al Sharpe, famous Yale kicker who refereed the game, said later it was the greatest kicking feat, considering the mud and rain, in football history.

Should Coast In.

If Maryland plays as well against V. M. I. as it has in its last three games it will not need field goals to win. The Terps coasted against Virginia or they would have won by several more touchdowns. They probably will be able to do the same against the Cadets who won their first game of the season only last week against William and Mary.

Maryland, standing third in the ratings, is still in the running for the Southern Conference championship, tied with Clemson with two wins against one defeat.

Harvard in Long Drill For Game With Army

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 5 (AP).—Coach Ed Casey rallied his thrice-beaten Harvard football forces today for a long workout that opened the Crimson's final drive for Army. The chief casualty of Saturday's game against Princeton was running back Fred Moseley, who suffered a recurrence of an old leg injury and probably will be out until the Yale game.

Two Soccer Teams Tie for League Lead

Frederick, Md., Nov. 5 (Spl.). Frederick defeated Mount Airy in the County Soccer League, 4 to 1; Middletown nosed out Walkersville, 4 to 3 and Burnswick tripped Emmitsburg, 4 to 2. Frederick and Middletown moved into a tie for first place in the pennant race with Brunswick trailing by 1 point in second position.

Ruth's Travels Costly to Managerial Hopes

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5 (Spl.).—One hears the strangest things! There's that traveling man, George Herman Ruth. Last year he traveled himself out of a job as manager of the Detroit Tigers. This year he may be traveling himself out of a couple of jobs as manager of other major league clubs. Because he won't be in the United States December 11 and 12, when the annual baseball meetings of the big leagues are held and the magnates engage their hired hands for the coming season.

Babe seems to have taken his eggs to Japan with him, and all in one basket. If he hasn't persuaded Cornelius McGillicuddy to step down from the pilot's seat with the Athletics in Philadelphia, the chances are that the guy who was the world's greatest ball player will be munching peanuts in the grand stand and looking at the ball games as a spectator. The story of how he kicked away the job managing the Tigers is a strange one, but typical of Ruth.

Detroit Deal Falls Through.

The New York Yankees got him the job with Detroit last fall. Frank Navin was agreeable. Ruth was pleased. They had agreed on terms, length of contract and all. The Babe was all set to leave the Yankees and take up the work of managing the Schoolboys in the spring. Then Ruth decided to go to Honolulu. He was asked whether he had anything in writing from Navin. He said no, but that he and Navin understood one another perfectly and that there would be no hitch. The Babe was advised to wait around and see Navin when he came to town and sign up with him. But he had to catch a boat. It was suggested that he take a later boat. The Babe couldn't wait. He sailed with the boat. So did his new job.

When he came back he called Navin on the telephone. Navin said, "Oh, yes; by the way, Babe, something has come up on that deal of ours * * *." Without waiting to hear further, Babe got huffy and said, "Well, Frank, if that's the way you feel about it, let it go," and hung up. Which was a sucker thing to do, because Navin had definitely obligated himself to Ruth.

Clears Way for Cochrane.

But the impetuous and traveling Ruth played right into his hands and cleared the way for the engagement of Gordon Stanley Cochrane as manager of the Tigers. If you have nothing to think about in the long winter nights to come, you may sit down and try to puzzle out whether Ruth as pilot instead of Cochrane would have won the American League pennant for Detroit this past year.

And now the man is traveling again. There is a job for him with Boston in the National League if Judge Emil Fuchs steps down as club president. Fuchs has declared himself definitely for the retention of Bill McKechnie as manager, but if the old judge should quit the picture there would be an immediate place for the Babe. As to Washington, I heard Clark Griffith quoted as saying: "That man is just a little too high-powered for me. They wouldn't see me around the ball club if he were here."

Now, wouldn't you think that Ruth would want to be in town when the market opened? Unless he's traveling right with his job. Which mightn't be such a good idea either. He may be showing Connie a little too much. For they say that while the Babe will make a brilliant field manager, the clubhouse will be something else again. The Babe as a handler of men is strictly an unknown quantity. And what little is known is not in his favor.

A Disillusioned Man.

I think one of Babe's chief drawbacks as a manager is that the pardon came too late. I am afraid that Ruth is disillusioned. They say that in his last years he would rip his uniform from his massive form after many a game and say that he wished he never had to look at that blankety-blank rag again. Or dressing before a game he would grouch and growl and curse. Youngsters and newcomers with the team would stare at him in amazement and bewilderment. Possibly it was just Babe's way, but possibly too many years of association with baseball may have rubbed some of the shine off. And if there is not some light or glitter ahead to follow one is more definitely conscious of the thorniness of the way.

Last year Ruth could have had the Newark International League Club, a Yankee property, to fool around with, to feel his way as a manager and learn the ropes of a strange job, and eventually work his way into Joe McCarthy's position with the Yankees, especially if he made a success with Newark. But the Babe wouldn't gamble and his wife, too, advised against that. Newark is a minor league club. They felt it would be a step down, that Ruth was entitled to become a big league manager. Be that as it may, now Newark, too, is closed to Ruth. And since he definitely went on record as saying at the late World Series, that he would only sign as a manager, he must find a place or go idle. And so he's traveling again. My suspicion is that he will return as Connie's assistant.

Stocks Point Upward Again; Sales Larger

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Stocks continued to point upward today and trading expanded a little in contrast with the usual tendency before a holiday.

As the share list crept ahead for the third consecutive session, the bulk of the buying again converged upon issues rated as highly speculative.

Not much doubt was expressed in brokerage quarters as to the outcome of tomorrow's elections. Political factors were stressed less as an immediate market influence than business trends. However, strength in building and liquor shares had political angles.

Issues Attracting Attention.

Traders were attracted to issues representative of those groups on the assumption the Government-sponsored building revival campaign would be broadened and that voting in seven States tomorrow on repeal of State prohibition laws would bring a wider domestic liquor market.

Except for strength and activity in a number of low-priced secondary shares, there was little indication of a change along the financial front. Bonds held to a narrow groove and most commodities beat a steady course.

In the building group, Certain-Teed Products preferred spurted 5 points and the common more than a point. Johns Manville crossed 50 for a net gain of more than a point. American Radiator, Foundation Co., Long Bell Lumber "A," Devoe & Reynolds "A," Celotex preferred and Congoleum moved up fractions to about 3 points.

Issues in Limelight.

Other secondary issues in the limelight were Mullins Manufacturing, the preferred rising 4½ points; Budd Manufacturing and United States Distributing preferred, which doubled in price on an advance to 8.

While most of the prominent shares made only fractional gains, increased demand for equities lifted a number of issues 1 to 3 points, including Eastman Kodak, Coca-Cola—both of which touched new 1934 peaks—Corn Products, California Packing, American Can, R. H. Macy and American Tobacco B. Austin Nichols, Schenley Distillers and American Commercial Alcohol were up a point or more on liquor prospects.

Reports of sustained retail trade kept alive interest in merchandise shares. Steel stocks, however, did little in the face of the American Iron & Steel Institute's estimate of a further rise in steel production to 26.3 per cent of capacity against 25 per cent a week ago.

Turnover increased to 759,000 shares, against 651,220 Friday, and the Standard Statistics Co. 90 stock index advanced to 71.6, up five-tenths of a point.

Foreign Exchange Traders Point to Prevention of Inflow of Gold as Major Stabilization Fund Problem, Observer Says.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York, Nov. 5.—While the activities of the Exchange Stabilization Fund have been shrouded in secrecy, it is generally understood among foreign exchange traders that the fund intervened in the market for French francs during the past week to prevent a large influx of gold into this country.

The normally favorable balance of trade of this country, as well as our position as a creditor nation, made it clear from the first that the stablization fund would not be much concerned with the maintenance of the quotation of the dollar in terms of foreign currencies. Left to itself, the dollar tends to be a strong currency on the foreign exchange market. Occasionally, a flight of capital or speculative sales might depress dollar exchange. As long as the Administration does not tinker with the gold content of the dollar, however, a few shipments of gold, or even a Treasury announcement that it will permit gold to depart freely, will normally be sufficient to keep the dollar up.

The chief purpose of the stabilization fund is to prevent wide fluctuations in the dollar. Such fluctuations are far more likely to be upward than downward, considering the international position of the United States and the state of things abroad. Hence, the major problem of the fund is to prevent an intermittent inflow of gold from abroad, caused by weakness of gold currencies in terms of the dollar. Such shipments are likely to undermine the stability of the few remaining currencies on the gold standard.

During the first half of 1934, the fund was relatively inactive. It did not interfere at the time with the heavy repatriation of American capital which had previously been transferred abroad because of fears of currency depreciation. As a result, a total of approximately $1,000,000,000 in gold has been permitted to come into this country this year, increasing our monetary stocks of the yellow metal to an unprecedented total above $8,000,000,000. The huge amount involved, the certainty there there would be such an immediate heavy repatriation of capital and a desire for some further expansion of our gold reserves as a stimulus to credit expansion and recovery are understood to have prompted those concerned with the operation of the stabilization fund to refrain from checking this gold inflow.

Fund Evidently Becoming More Active in Europe.

In recent weeks, however, the fund has evidently become more active, and is understood to have acquired both gold and silver abroad. The chief reason for this change of policy seems to have been weakness in the quotations of "gold bloc" currencies. This has reflected in large part internal agitation within several of these countries for abandonment of the gold standard, or immediate currency devaluation, as a means to offset the pressure of deflation and depression. Such agitation has caused a renewed flight of capital from these countries and withdrawals of foreign funds previously placed there.

As a result, currencies of the "gold bloc" countries have sunk below their gold export points in relation to the dollar. However, despite the profit that could be earned on shipments of yellow metal to the United States under such circumstances only very small exports of gold have been arranged to this country from France. This reflects partly the wish of the commercial banks, who usually ship gold, not to aggravate further the already difficult exchange situation of these countries. The banks have been kept informed of the situation by government authorities. The failure to arrange large gold shipments reflects also intervention of the stabilization fund and the British exchange equalization account in defense of the French franc.

Such intervention takes the form of buying foreign gold currencies and selling dollars abroad. The foreign currency so acquired is then converted into gold at the respective central banks abroad. This gold is kept on earmark with the foreign banks. While the result is a decline in the reported gold holdings of the foreign institution, the unfavorable publicity attaching to actual large shipments of the metal is avoided. Furthermore, reports of such strong intervention in support of a gold standard currency usually curtails short selling and the flight of capital from the currency involved.

Foreign Trade Circles Favor Wider Stabilization Activity.

Foreign trade circles in New York are favoring the proposed extension of the activities of the exchange stabilization funds, so as to assure quicker and more certain payment for American exporters selling to countries where foreign exchange restrictions prevail. George N. Peek, the President's foreign trade adviser, gave the proposal semi-official support in his address last week before the National Foreign Trade Council.

The concentration of all foreign exchange dealings with a selected list of countries in the hands of one governmental body, as proposed by him would mean, in essence, our imposition of a clearing system on transactions with the countries selected. This is similar to arrangements now in effect in a number of European countries. It would permit the Administration to use the fund to assure American exporters of timely payment in dollars for their shipments to countries from which we buy more than we sell.

Use of the stabilization fund as an agency to aid gold bloc currencies to resist bear attacks, through acquisition of earmarked gold abroad, is a desirable emergency measure designed to prevent further deterioration of the world currency situation. Extension of the use of the fund as a retaliatory agency in foreign exchange control involves serious dangers.

Bond Market Is Unchanged; At 84.0 Level

Federals Drift Slightly Lower; Sales Drop to $8,177,000.

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—With today's bond market shoved in between a week-end and tomorrow's election holiday, most traders and investors were not inclined to take a very active part in the proceedings.

While there were scattered strong and heavy spots throughout the list, the majority of issues held to a low fractional range.

Transfers totaled $8,177,000, par value, against $9,452,000 last Friday and the Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate bonds was again unchanged at 84.

Federals Slightly Off.

United States Government securities displayed a slightly lower drift in relatively dull transactions. The turnover here amounted to only about $1,200,000. Declines of one-thirty-second, to eight-thirty-seconds of a point predominated.

The popularity of prime short-term loans was exemplified by a heavy over-subscription of $10,000,000 of Federal intermediate 1½ per cent debentures, dated November 15, and due in nine months.

The books were opened at 10 a. m. and closed 45 minutes later. The proceeds of this issue, it was said, will be used mainly for refunding.

Among the better acting corporation loans were American Ice 5s, up 2½ at 70; Certain-Teed 5½s, up 2½ at 62½; Goodrich 6s, up 1¼ at 82; New Haven Debenture 4s of 1957, up 1½ at 33½; North American Edison 5s of 1969, up 1 at 79; Paramount-Publix 5½s, up 2½ at 57¾; Iron Mountain 4s, up 1½ at 58½; Skelly Oil 5½s, up 1⅛ at 94⅝; Studebaker 6s, up 1 at 47, and Walworth First 6s, up 3 at 40.

List of Losers.

Losers included N. Y. Trap Rock 6s, off 3⅛ at 48⅞; N. Y. Central 4½s, off 1¼ at 58¼; McCory Stores 5½s, off 2¾ at 82¼; Lehigh Valley (Pennsylvania General 4s), off 4⅛ at 47⅛, and the same Road's Consolidated 5s, off 9¾ at 56; International Mercantile Marine 6s, off 3¼ at 40¾, and Interboro Rapid Transit 7s, off 1 at 80¾.

German obligations were heavy, reflecting the Reich's action in suspending all cash payments on external debts between July 1, last and June 30, next year. The Dawes Plan 7s were off 2 at 38 and the Young Plan 5½s eased one-fourth to 27¾.

Kreuger & Toll 5s were up 1 at 25½, El Salvador 8s of 1948 gained 9 at 65½ and Siemens & Halske 7s advanced 5 to 52. The turnover in the foreign section, however, was small.

Curb's Prices Driven Higher In Active Sales

Market Displays Firmness as Trading Rises to 146,000 Shares.

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Firmness was displayed by curb exchange stocks today. Advances of fractions to around a point predominated at the close and embraced virtually all divisions. Trading was in moderate volume.

A number of specialty issues recorded substantial advances. The list was steady at the opening, but values improved during the first hour. Following a lull the upturn was again resumed in the late dealings. The majority of shares finished around their best prices for the day.

Singer Manufacturing and Bell Telephone of Canada got up about 2 each. Advances of around a point were shown by N. Y. Telephone preferred, Celluloid preferred, Hazeltine Corporation, Parker Rust Proof, Philip Morris, Humble Oil, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Distillers Corporation-Seagrams.

Aluminum Co. of America was an isolated soft spot, dipping 1¼ points. Both Swift & Co. and Swift Internacional ended about unchanged. American Cyanamid B, Electric Bond & Share, Creole Petroleum, Lake Shore, Sherwin-Williams and American Gas & Electric were up fractionally.

Transfers were approximately 146,000 shares, compared with 129,000 last Friday.

Business in Nation's Industries Expected to Outdistance 1933

By W. R. Huff.

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Business in most American industries in the final quarter of 1934 will show an increased dollar volume over 1933 but little if any gain in profits over last year, it is indicated by opinions of 125 business paper editors.

In 19 fields where volume promises to be ahead of 1933, only ten appear to have a chance for profit improvement, according to the survey of editors of 125 member publications of Associated Business Papers, Inc.

Electrical apparatus manufacturing, sporting goods, heating and plumbing and building materials seem to provide the brightest outlooks, but textiles, machine shops and boiler-making are expected to lag behind last year.

Mining industries have been unable to make any estimates, but the cement and rock products industry is expected to fall 15 to 20 per cent behind the last quarter of 1933. Despite a higher volume in the paint making field, profits are expected to decline due to higher costs.

With a 15 per cent rise in dollar volume, the building industries regard profits as doubtful. Heating and plumbing look for a 20 per cent gain in business and a rise in profits of at least a third.

The electrical industry expects to manufacture twice as much as last year and to show profits of 30 per cent more. Power utilities will probably increase dollar sales around 15 per cent and profits 1 or 2 per cent.

The improvement in small house building and remodeling is expected to raise electrical contracting 15 or 20 per cent and profits slightly.

Gossip of New York Markets

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Deceit, trickery and downright fraud have by no means been banished from the securities business, investment authorities agree.

It is well known in circles close to the securities and exchange commission that the commissioners are not a little concerned over indications that a considerable volume of dubious securities has been sold to the public after complying with the registration requirements of the securities act.

It is felt by some observers that the fault lies not with the commission, but with the act, which evidently does not give the commission sufficient authority to stop the flow of worthless securities at the source.

Rights of Victims.

It gives the victim unprecedented legal rights of recovery after he has been swindled, provided the issuer can be found and anything recovered from him.

It is said in authoritative quarters that the Federal commissioners are fully aware of this state of affairs and are determined to correct it.

At the same time, the Investment Bankers Code Authority is starting a vigorous campaign to bring to book any violations of the code. The Investment Bankers Association committee on State legislation, headed by Edward B. Hall, of the Harris Trust & Savings Bank, Chicago, recently stated: "There still come reports that deceitful security operations are rather widely successful. * * * Bucketeers, although not so numerous as once they were, still are all too much in evidence.

Sell and Switch Method.

"The 'sell and switch' method by use of the telephone at great distances * * * continues to be a vehicle of gigantic frauds, usually upon the investor of small means."

The report adds that the "tipster sheet," often parading under the name of investment counselor or advisor, "is not without its full measure of victims among the uninformed who are unable to distinguish between legitimate and spurious investment advice."

One remedy suggested is that the commission be empowered to refuse registration to an issue obviously worthless. Another, that it immediately set a watch on persons registering issues that arouse suspicion.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Through liquidating distributions the Railroad Credit Corporation has returned $18,419,797, or 25 per cent, of the net emergency freight revenue collected by the participating carriers through March 31, 1933, according to a report of the corporation's condition filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission. Of this amount, $8,034,733 was in cash and $10,385,064 in credits on obligations due the corporation.

California crude oil output during the week ended November 3 averaged 433,400 barrels daily, a decrease of 19,660 barrels from the previous week.

The Railway Age says the Mesta Machine Co. has ordered two flat cars and two gondola cars from the Standard Steel Car Corporation, and the Mexican Railway Co. has ordered 20 automobile cars and 30 box cars from the Pressed Steel Car Co. The Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Co. contemplates buying from 25 to 100 hopper cars, the publication states.

Foreign Bond Prices Gain During October

New York, Nov. 5.—Representative foreign bonds rose 1.14 per cent during October, according to Foreign Bond Associates, Inc., whose index of 50 representative issues went up from 56.14 on September 30 to 56.78 on October 31. The 16 South American issues in the index depreciated 3.85 per cent during the month, the 30 European issues appreciated 3.01 per cent, and the 4 Asiatic issues gained 1.88 per cent.

G. M. Declares 25 Cent Return; Extra Omitted

United Carbon Company Earns $988,413 in Nine Months.

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Directors of General Motors Corporation today declared the usual quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the common stock. In the previous quarter the corporation authorized an extra dividend of 25 cents in addition to the regular payment.

The dividend is payable December 12 to stock of record November 15. Declaration of the extra dividend three months ago followed publication of an earnings statement for the June 30 quarter which was more favorable than that for the September 30 quarter. For the second quarter the corporation earned a balance of 88 cents a share for the common stock, against 48 cents in the third quarter.

United Carbon Co. and subsidiaries report for the first nine months net profit of $988,413 after charges, taxes, depreciation, etc., equal after preferred dividend requirements to $2.53 a share on the common stock. This compares with profit of 479,647, or $1.05 a share in the same period a year ago.

In the September quarter profit totaled $318,040, equal to 86 cents a share, compared with $178,916, or 40 cents a share in the third quarter last year.

Toronto, Nov. 5 (AP).—Net earnings of $4.40 a share on common stock after all regular charges were reported today by Hiram Walker-Gooderham & Worts, Ltd., for the fiscal year which ended August 31.

The earnings record is the best in the company's history. Its improved position was accounted for partly by profitable operations in the United States, beginning with the repeal of prohibition.

The company's operating earnings for the year were $4,514,000.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Quotations were quietly irregular on the stock exchange yesterday. The feature of the market was the continued support of giltedged securities which were firmer. Lina Gold Fields ordinary jumped 6 pence to 21d on the company's agreement with the Soviet government, but lost 3 pence and closed at 18d, while the notes of the company rose £11 to £47½, reacting later and closing at £40. German bonds held firm, but other sections drooped. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Political uncertainty made a further unfavorable impression on the bourse today, continued selling pushing prices lower. The market closed heavy.

Berlin—Prices on the boerse were weaker today, mining shares dropping two or three points. The market closed at its lowest level for the day.

Wheat Turns Irregular as Election Nears

Cotton Eases on December Selling, but Market Averages Up.

Chicago, Nov. 5 (AP).—Faced by an election holiday tomorrow, wheat prices today ruled irregular—higher finally for deferred deliveries, lower for December.

Rains in Argentina and rust complaints from there, together with 2,379,000 bushels decrease of the United States wheat visible supply, had more or less bullish influence. An opposite factor was arrival of 119 cars of hard winter wheat here today for Chicago mills, a circumstance tending to weaken December prices.

Wheat closed uneven, ½ cent lower to ⅞ higher compared with Saturday's finish, May 96⅜@97; corn, ½@1⅝ advance; May, 77¾@77⅞; oats, ⅛@⅜ up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 17 cents.

Corn and oats values were strengthened by better shipping demand here for corn, and by reports that a cargo of corn said to have been bought Saturday to come immediately to this country was actually taken for April shipment to Montreal, Canada.

Provisions went higher with hog values. All future deliveries of lard went to a new top price record for the season.

Cotton Market

New York, Nov. 5 (AP)—Cotton eased off today under December liquidation and evening up for the election day adjournment. Trading was comparatively quiet and March contracts after selling from 12.19 to 12.14 stiffened up a few points on covering, but later eased to 12.13 and closed at that figure. The general market ended steady at a net advance of 6 to 8 points.

December sold off from 12.09 to 12.02 and May from 12.21 to 12.14, making net losses of 6 to 8 points and last prices were at or within a point of the lowest for the day.

Evidently traders found nothing in the news to stimulate an aggressive position on the market in advance of tomorrow's holiday. Three more of the private end-October crop reports were issued with figures on the indicated yield ranging from 9,225,000 up to 9,506,000 bales, but they seemed to create little immediate market interest.

The preliminary report of the New York Cotton Exchange Service estimated world's consumption of cotton of all growths for September at 1,879,000 bales against 1,936,000 for August and 2,043,000 for September last year.

Exports today 30,830, making 1,441,065 so far this season. Receipts 32,063. U. S. port stocks, 3,153,357.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

A "NOW familiar provision" in an executive order signed last week by President Roosevelt provides additional evidence of the manner in which the merit system now is being undermined, according to Miss Gertrude McNally, national secretary-treasurer of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

BAKER.

The latest "familiar provision" was pointed out last night by Miss McNally in the consolidation of the Executive Council and the National Emergency Council, with Donald R. Richberg taking over all duties of both agencies.

The provision under fire is in part, "* * * the executive director may appoint, subject to the approval of the President, without regard to civil service laws or the classification act of 1923, as amended, fix the compensation and prescribe the duties and authority of such officials and employes, and make such expenditures * * *."

"Charges often reiterated by the National Federation of Federal Employes that the merit system is in danger of destruction, that civil service requirements are being sidestepped on every hand in both new and old establishments, are being substantiated constantly by inescapable documentary evidence such as that afforded here," was the comment of Miss McNally.

"Such policies are destructive, archaic and indefensible on any score save that of 'practical politics,'" the employe leader added. "The time has come for the public to give active support to the campaign to save the merit system from further spoliation."

EMPLOYES are being subjected to undue pressure by officials in the Community Chest campaign, is the charge made by FERA Lodge, No. 139, American Federation of Government Employes, in a resolution forwarded to Administrator Harry L. Hopkins. Copies also have been sent to Keith Southard, Jacob Baker and Robert Lansdale.

The resolution in part says "that any employe desirous of contributing may go to a designated person so that the initiative comes from the donor not the collector." The protest is signed by the following members of the lodge's executive committee: Irving Richter, Margaret M. Boulton, Zelda Abrams (C), Walter Krimont, Theodor Jung and Vivian Pierce (C).

A movable and constant orientation mapboard, particularly useful in forest fire lookouts, has been introduced at Forest Service by Lester H. Reineke (F).

Mrs. Molly A. Wiseman (P), Sales Tax, Internal Revenue, recently entertained the Assessment and Compromise Section of her division at an oyster roast at her home, Blue Heaven, near Beverly Beach, Md. Guests included Mrs. Hortense Benton, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Gruenbaum, C. C. Orme, Richard Gott, Miss Christine Levine, Mr. and Mrs. Lester S. Keefauver, Miss Vivian F. Nolan, Price Gore, Miss Helen E. Todd, Mrs. Jessie W. Copitts, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan D. Dewar, Mrs. Mary Wolf, Charles Rust, Miss Deborah Schwartz, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Danley, Mrs. Pauline Coulter, Jack Sudol, Robert Henery, Mrs. Lucy A. Stiegele, John Payne, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Wallace.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF your name is followed by F. P. or C, call in person on the Federal Diary editor. You will receive tickets to (F) Loew's Fox (stage, Jack Denny and his orchestra and other acts; screen, Nancy Carroll in "Transatlantic Merry-Go-Round"); or to (P) Loew's Palace (Jeannette MacDonald and Maurice Chevalier in "The Merry Widow"); or to (C) Loew's Columbia (Pat Patterson and Nils Asther in "Lovetime").

Diary office hours are daily, except Sunday, 12 noon to 1 p. m., and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturdays, 12 noon to 2:30 p. m.

Election Day.

They are voters from everywhere—
Proud of political franchise
And of their country so fair!
Look at their banners floating
In rainbows across the breeze;
Their brilliant, festive colors
Blending with autumn's gay trees.

Hear the loud laughter and music,
Mingled with curses and strife—
As onward they march to the polls,
Keeping step with our national life.
This is our great independence;
Oh, what a thrill in that ballot—
A thrill that we never must lose!

MATTIE RICHARDS TYLER (P),
Register's Office, Treasury.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue held its first meeting in the Community Chest drive yesterday afternoon, with Frank A. Birgfield, chief clerk of the Treasury, as the principal speaker. Aubrey R. Marrs, head of the technical staff, presided at the session. Enthusiastic response to the Chest appeal is manifest at Internal Revenue.

Georgetown Dean Speaks.

Dr. William F. Notz, dean of the Georgetown School of Foreign Service, addressed executives of the Young Men's Christian Association at the Y. M. C. A. building yesterday on "Glimpses of International Relations."

HOW'S YOUR LITTLE GRAND-SON, DENNIE, GETTING ALONG?
HE'S PURTY GOOD, BUT HE'LL SOON BE LOTS BETTER, 'CAUSE I'M SAVIN' MY MONEY, AN I'M GOIN' T'GET A GOOD DOCTOR T'TAKE CARE OF HIM!
I DIDN'T KNOW YOU HAD A BANK ACCOUNT, MARY!
OH, IT'S NOT IN A REAL BANK. I'VE GOT IT IN. A SAFE PLACE AT HOME. I'LL SOON HAVE FIFTY DOLLARS!
DENNIE WILL SURE BE HAPPY 'CAUSE I SOLD ALL MY APPLES TODAY. NOW I CAN ADD MORE TO THAT MONEY I'VE SAVED FOR TREATMENTS TO MAKE HIM WALK AGAIN.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Past and Present By Harry J. Tuthill

RECENTLY A HAPPILY MARRIED LADY WHO RECALLED THE DAYS WHEN GEORGE BUNGLE WAS INTERESTED IN ROMANCE AND A MANDOLIN, MOVED NEXTDOOR.
FLO! FLO WREN! WELL WELL!
GEORGE BUNGLE! IMAGINE! SIRDAR, YOU REMEMBER ME TELLING YOU SO MUCH ABOUT GEORGE. OH HOW TIME FLIES.
SHORTLY AFTERWARD, WHILE GEORGE WAS FIXING A SHELF, THE DOOR OF A CLOTHES-CLOSET SLAMMED SHUT AND IN THE OPINION OF A JEALOUS HUSBAND, GAVE AN OBLIGING NEIGHBOR A BLACK EYE.

SIRDAR DARLING, DON'T BE SILLY, BEFORE YOU TRY TO OPEN THAT DOOR, LET ME EX...
SENSIBLE EXPLANATIONS FOLLOWED, BUT SIRDAR KARAMBA HEARD ONLY THE VOICE OF SUSPICION AS HE ARRANGED AN AFTER-DARK ATTACK ON GEORGE.
HALT! STOP! YOU TWO FELLOW!
HEY....WAIT! BOYS LISTEN....I JUST FOUND OUT HE KNOWS OUR GRIP AND PASS-WORDS OF THE SONS OF THE RISING SUN.
DURING AN ARGUMENT, SIRDAR'S FRIENDS ADDED FURTHER AND ROUGHER PROOF TO THE SUPPOSITION THAT THE SONS OF THE RISING SUN AND BOUNDER LODGE NO. 9 ARE RELATIVES.
BOY OH BOY, WHAT A SHELLACKING THEY GAVE YOU WHILE THAT BIG ONE HELD ME. LODGE BROTHERS, TOO.
THOSE DONKEYS. HA! NEVER FEAR. I FIX THEM FOR PUSHING FISTS IN FACE OF MOST HIGH POTENTATE!

The Soda Fountain.

Climbing up the local mountain, I get tired and full of care; straightway to the soda fountain in a hurry I repair. There the luscious flavors trickle into glasses bright and clean, and they tax me but a nickel for a drink fit for the queen. They have all the priceless flavors that appeal to sceptered kings, they have everything that savors of ambrosia and such things. Mighty masters of invention have increased our mortal bliss, mixing drinks too rare to mention, at a fountain such as this. Here the master mind produces drinks that angels might extol, mixing aromatic juices in a decorated bowl. Here I come, all hot and gasping in the heat that's turned me pink; there is nothing harsh or rasping in the soda fountain drink. It is sweet and it is soothing, it is soft as maple sap, and I feel the liquid smoothing all the furrows from my map. It's refreshing, it is cooling, it's a boon when I am hot, and the druggist isn't fooling when he says it hits the spot. One consumes the fountain's nectar and he feels so good and kind, he would greet the tax collector with no hatred in his mind. Life seems amply worth the living, he is joyous, he is gay, all his enemies forgiving, he goes trotting on his way. And the morrow brings no anguish, doesn't make him cry, "Alas," and he doesn't have to languish in the sad hangover class.

Doumergue's Cabinet Again Near Collapse

But Foes Are in Dilemma as Dictatorship is Feared in Paris.

Paris, Nov. 5 (AP).—Premier Gaston Doumergue's emergency cabinet again was in danger of overthrow tonight, but its opponents, seeking to curb what they fear as an impending dictatorship, were in a dilemma.

Former Premier Herriot's Radical Socialist followers were apprehensive of renewed civil riots if the government is upset, and the wrath of their constituents if they support Doumergue.

Herriot and his fire colleagues have been counseled by some to resign at tomorrow's meeting unless Doumergue offers to compromise on his demands for a strengthened government. Such action would break the political truce, but its proponents think it would avert, while others believe it would precipitate violence like that which cost 28 lives last February.

The aged premier is determined to force through the Chamber of Deputies Wednesday or Thursday a measure providing credits for three months' government operations, which would give him time to act.

He was confident that Herriot's radical Socialists would not dare to overthrow him, but the Herriot group was in a tight corner and uncertain what to do.

Premier Doumergue, already something of a one-man government, proposes to strengthen his hand so he really can govern and end the French habit of throwing out governments too often. The average life of cabinets has been about nine months. In difficult times they often have lasted only a few days or weeks.

Few, except Communists, accuse Doumergue of wishing to be a dictator, but many in parliament wish to keep all the authority they can instead of giving it to the premier and his ministers.

National opinion tonight seemed to favor the premier, who has gone directly to the people with his fight in many radio addresses. Millions have pledged him their support.

Lynchburg Manager Safe From Court Despite Liquor Stand.

Lynchburg, Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—Judge Aubrey E. Strode, of corporation court, today asked whether it was possible for him to remove from office City Manager R. W. B. Hart because of the latter's attitude toward local enforcement of State liquor laws.

The question was asked of Commonwealth's Attorney W. T. Spencer, jr., after a grand jury, acting under instructions from the court to investigate alleged indifference of local police and officials to apprehension of bootleggers, had reported it had no recommendations to make.

Judge Strode dismissed the grand jury for the term after it had questioned City Manager Hart, Richard F. Wagner, director of public safety, and a news reporter, and delivered its report.

Mr. Spencer said he advised Strode he knew of no law or authority that the court might have because City Manager Hart is employed by the city council and holds office at its pleasure.

Woman Seized After Looting Easton, Md., Store.

Easton, Md., Nov. 5 (Spl.).—For the first time in the history of Easton a store was broken into and robbed by a woman.

Early today a woman giving the name of Ada Wilson broke into the store of Louis Edgell by crashing a plate glass in the front door. She rifled the cash drawer and obtained $25 and several chickens.

Mrs. Kemp Stevens, who lives next door, heard the noise and called her husband and Policeman George Bear, who arrested the woman as she came out of the store door.

Convict Slain, 4 Shot In Attempt to Escape

Angola, La., Nov. 5 (AP).—One convict was killed and four others were wounded today in an attempted break for freedom by a group of convicts at a camp of the Angola State Penitentiary, where the incorrigibles are confirmed.

The convict killed was James Bird, a long termer charged with assault and robbery. Bird was one of the men who escaped in September, 1933, when several convicts and guards were killed.

Park Police Arrest 201 And Call It Dull Month

October was one of the dullest months this year for the United States Park police, according to the monthly arrest report yesterday.

Drunkenness continued to lead the list with 73 arrests, followed by violation of traffic regulations, 68. In the Capital proper, there were 201 arrests. Park policemen on the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway had only 17 cases, nine of which were for speeding.

D. C. Library Prepares List of Books Covering All Fields for Post Scholarship Competitors

Experts Select Volumes; First Come, First Served, Says Bowerman.

In anticipation of heavy demands by students for research material for governmental essays required in the second Washington Post Scholarship Competition, Dr. Goerge F. Bowerman, librarian of the Public Library of the District of Columbia, has had prepared a comprehensive bibliography of 87 books, available at the local public libraries and containing a wealth of reading for competitors seeking either general background or specific information.

A corps of reference and advisory specialists under Miss Emma Hance, Dr. Bowerman's director of reference work, have drawn up lists which will supply both sides of the knotty questions presented for essays. For topics classified as civic problems, for example, several of which concern the New Deal, the list suggests both Herbert Hoover's "Challenge to Liberty" and President Roosevelt's "On Our Way."

Other controversial subjects, concerning economic, international or historical problems, have been treated with the same consideration for both pro and con arguments. A majority of the references cover both sides of the problems in question.

First Come, First Serve.

In submitting the bibliography, both Dr. Bowerman and Miss Hance pointed out that the library's policy of meeting applications in the order of their presentation will necessarily control the supply of the books listed. However, for the hundreds of competitors who will seek references to start them in the race for college scholarships, the major awards offered, much additional material, in current publications, as well as other books, will be available at both the main and branch libraries.

Miss Hance's advice to students contending for the prizes is to first go carefully over the essay topics and bibliography with their teachers, and secondly, to consult the reference desk at the main or a branch library for additional reading material.

"Experience of this sort, in research upon specific arguments," stated Miss Hance, "will bring rewards to the student, regardless of his further achievements in the competition. No library force can ever compile a bibliography which can not be supplemented by the careful student pursuing his specific theme. This list contains excellent background reading and much detail upon the listed topics, but our reference desk can suggest many other leads for the ambitious contestant."

Invites Teachers' Aid.

Miss Hance expressed the hope that teachers would feel free to inform her of additional reference material which might apply to any of the essay topics. Teachers often develop certain angles of the general topics, and recommend certain reading material to entire classes, she stated.

"It would be helpful to all concerned," said Miss Hance, "if, in such cases, the teachers would notify me of these recommendations, so that, as far as practicable, my department might prepare for the student demands. We welcome suggestions from teachers and students and will do our best to comply with them."

Dr. Bowerman stated his belief that the competition's essay topics will arouse much interest and will stimulate extra reading on the part of many students.

"Our reference specialists will keep the competition's 30 topics in mind," he said, "and will from time to time list current publications which should be helpful."

BLACKIE BEAR

BY D. SAM COX

Hound Dog Hurries to Blackie's House

When Jay Bird got to Aunt Lindy's, Hound Dog had just finished his breakfast, and was sitting out in the sun, just wondering what he was going to do with such a pretty day. Jay Bird flew up in the grape arbor, and just called his regular "Jay, Jay" a couple of times.

Of course, Aunt Lindy didn't pay any attention to him, for a bird's noise didn't mean anything to her; but it meant a lot to Hound Dog, and he jumped up and ran to the grape arbor, and then followed Jay Bird on to the woods where he flew to get out of hearing of Aunt Lindy. Then Jay Bird told Hound Dog what the trouble was.

"Well," said Hound Dog, "go on back, and tell Blackie I will be right behind you. If Billie's meat is still on his bones, it's going to stay there if my nose is still able to work, and I believe it is. It told me the truth about a mighty fine rabbit yesterday afternoon. I want Aunt Lindy to know I have gone, and so I will go on back and fool around the house a bit, and then I will hear a noise that will make me bark terribly while I run toward the woods. She won't expect me back till she sees me, and she won't be worried. She has about decided that I can take care of myself in the woods."

There really was a noise out in the woods in a few minutes although I think it was only a dead limb that fell off a tree; but it gave Hound Dog a good excuse to raise an awful howl and run out into the woods, and if Jay Bird hadn't done some terribly fast flying Hound Dog would have been at Blackie's house when he got there.

U. S. Agents Seize 17 Chinese; 'Slave Trade' Plot Investigated

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Their dreams of golden opportunities in this country shattered, 17 Chinese, half starved and ill from months of privation, tonight waited at Ellis Island for deportation.

The 17, all who remain of a group of 60 that left China months ago in the hold of a steamship, were found by Federal agents in a cellar in Keansburg, N. J., where they had been kept under guard while their captors tried to sell them to other Chinese.

Federal agents from New York, Newark and Philadelphia, searching for narcotics, found them in an apparently deserted house. Guarding them was a Trinidad Negro and five police dogs.

After months of a starvation diet of rice, the Chinese were fed at Ellis Island while the agents investigated a fantastic story of a virtual slave trade existing between agents of this country and those in China.

Of the 60 who left China, 35 reached the United States, the agents were told. Eighteen of these had been sold to friends and relatives for sums ranging from $1,000 to $1,500. The others remained at Keansburg while the smugglers sought someone to buy them.

The purchase meant they would be forced to labor in a laundry for 20 cents a day until the sum their master paid was worked out. They told the agents they could not flee because the master would disclose their illegal entry to this country to immigration authorities.
